To the Right Honourable

John Lord Sommers,

BARON of Eveſham.

MY LORD,

THERE is a Pleaſure in owning Obligations which it is an Honour to have received;

but ſhould I publiſh any Favours done me by Your Lordſhip, I am afraid it would look more like Vanity, than Gratitude.

I had a very early Ambition to recommend myſelf to Your Lordſhip's Patronage, which yet increas'd in me as I travell'd thro' the Countries, of which I here give Your Lordſhip ſome Account: For whatever great Impreſſions an

Eng-

Engliſhman muſt have of Your Lordſhip, they who have been converſant Abroad will find them ſtill improved. It cannot but be obvious to them, that, tho' they ſee Your Lordſhip's Admirers every where, they meet with very few of Your Well-wiſhers at Paris or at Rome. And I could not but obſerve, when I paſſed through moſt of the Proteſtant Governments in Europe, that their Hopes or Fears for the Common Cauſe roſe or fell with Your Lordſhip's Intereſt and Authority in England.

I here preſent Your Lordſhip with the Remarks that I made in a Part of theſe my Travels; wherein, notwithſtanding the Variety of the Subject, I am very ſenſible that I offer nothing New to Your Lordſhip, and can can have no other Deſign in this Addreſs, than to declare that I am,

My LORD,

Your Lordſhip's moſt obliged and moſt obedient humble Servant,

J. ADDISON.

PREFACE.

THERE is certainly no Place in the World, where a Man may travel with greater Pleaſure and Advantage, than in Italy. One finds ſomething more particular in the Face of the Country, and more aſtoniſhing in the Works of Nature, than can be met with in any other Part of Europe. It is the great School of Muſic and Painting, and contains in it all the nobleſt Productions of Statuary and Architecture, both Ancient and Modern. It abounds with Cabinets of Curioſities, and vaſt Collections of all kinds of Antiquities. No other Country in the World has ſuch a Variety of Governments, that are ſo different in their Conſtitutions, and ſo refined in their Politics. There is ſcarce any Part of the Nation that is not Famous in Hiſtory, nor nor ſo much as a Mountain or River, that has not been the Scene of ſome extraordinary Action.

As there are few Men that have Talents or Opportunities for examining ſo copious a Subject, one may obſerve, among thoſe who have written on Italy, that different Authors have ſucceeded beſt on different ſorts of Curioſities. Some have been more particular in their Accounts of Pictures, Statues, and Buildings; ſome have ſearch'd into Libraries, Cabinets of Rarities, and Collections of Medals; as others have been wholly taken up with Inſcriptions, Ruins, and Antiquities. Among the Authors of our own Country, we are obliged to the Biſhop of Saliſbury, for his maſterly and uncommon Obſervations on the Religion and Governments of Italy: Laſſels may be uſeful in giving us the Names of ſuch Writers as have treated of the ſeveral States through which he paſs'd: Mr. Ray is to be valued for his Obſervations on the natural Productions of the Place. Monſieur Miſſon has wrote a more correct Account of

Italy

Italy in general than any before him, as he particularly excels in the Plan of the Country, which he has given us in true and lively Colours.

There are ſtill ſeveral of theſe Topics that are far from being exhauſted, as there are many new Subjects that a Traveller may find to employ himſelf upon. For my own part, as I have taken notice of ſeveral Places and Antiquities that no Body elſe has ſpoken of, ſo, I think, I have mentioned but few Things in common with others, that are not either ſet in a new Light, or accompany'd with different Reflexions. I have taken care particularly to conſider the ſeveral Paſſages of the Ancient Poets, which have any Relation to the Places or Curioſities that I met with; For before I entered on my Voyage I took care to refreſh my Memory among Claſſic Authors, and to make ſuch Collections out of them as I might afterwards have Occaſion for. I muſt confeſs it was not one of the leaſt Entertainments that I met with in Travelling, to examine theſe ſeveral Deſcriptions, as it were were upon the Spot, and to compare the Natural Face of the Country with the Landſkips that the Poets have given us of it. However, to avoid the Confuſion that might ariſe from a Multitude of Quotations, I have only cited ſuch Verſes as have given us ſome Image of the Place, or that have ſomething elſe beſides the bare Name of it to recommend them.

MO-

MONACO,

GENOA, &c.

ON the Twelfth of December, 1699, I ſet out from Marſeilles to Genoa in a Tartane, and arrived late at a ſmall French Port call'd Caſſis, where the next Morning we were not a little ſurpris'd to ſee all the Mountains about the Town cover'd with green Olive-trees, or laid out in beautiful Gardens, which gave us a great Variety of pleaſing Proſpects, even in the Depth of Winter. The moſt uncultivated of them produce abundance of ſweet Plants, as Wild-Thyme, Lavender, Roſemary, Balm, and Myrtle. We were here ſhown at a diſtance the Deſerts, which have been rendered ſo famous by the Penance of Mary Magdalene, who, after her Arrival with Lazarus and Joſeph of Arimathea at Marſeilles, is ſaid to have wept away the reſt of her Life among theſe ſolitary Rocks and Mountains. It is ſo romantic a Scene, that it has always probably given occaſion to ſuch chimerical Relations; for it is perhaps of this Place that Claudian ſpeaks, in the following Deſcription;

Eſt locus extremum pandit quà Gallia littus
Oceani prætentus aquis, quà fertur Ulyſſes
Sanguine libato populum moviſſe Silentûm:
Illic Umbrarum tenui ſtridore volantûm
Flebilis auditur queſtus; ſimulachra coloni
Pallida defunctaſque vident migrare figuras, &c.
Claud. in Ruf. lib. 1.

A Place there lies on Gallia's utmoſt Bounds,
Where riſing Seas inſult the Frontier Grounds:
Ulyſſes here the Blood of Victims ſhed,
And rais'd the pale Aſſembly of the Dead.
Oft in the Winds is heard a plaintive Sound
Of melancholy Ghoſts that hover round:
The lab'ring Plow-man oft with Horror ſpies
Thin airy Shapes that o'er the Furrows riſe,
(A dreadful Scene!) and skim before his Eyes.

I know there is nothing more undetermined among the Learned than the Voyage of Ulyſſes; ſome confining it to the Mediterranean, others extending it to the great Ocean, and others aſcribing it to a World of the Poet's own making; tho' his Converſations with the Dead are generally ſuppoſed to have been in the Narbon Gaul.

Incultos adiit Læſtrigonas Antiphatenque, &c.
Atque hæc ſeu noſtras interſunt cognita terras,
Fabula ſive novum dedit his Erroribus Orbem.
Tibul. Lib. iv. Eleg. i. v. 59.

Uncertain whether, by the Winds convey'd,
On real Seas to real Shores he ſtray'd;

Or,

Or, by the Fable driv'n from Coaſt to Coaſt,
In new imaginary Worlds was loſt.

The next Day we again ſet ſail, and made the beſt of our way 'till we were forced, by contrary Winds, into St. Remo, a very pretty Town in the Genoeſe Dominions. The Front to the Sea is not large; but there are a great many Houſes behind it, built up the Side of the Mountain to avoid the Winds and Vapours that come from Sea. We here ſaw ſeveral Perſons that in the midſt of December had nothing over their Shoulders but their Shirts, without complaining of the Cold. It is certainly very lucky for the poorer ſort to be born in a Place that is free from the greateſt Inconvenience, to which thoſe of our Northern Nations are ſubject; and indeed, without this natural Benefit of their Climates, the extreme Miſery and Poverty that are in moſt of the Italian Governments would be inſupportable. There are at St. Remo many Plantations of Palm-trees, that do not grow in other Parts of Italy. We ſailed from hence directly for Genoa; and had a fair Wind that carried us into the middle of the Gulph, which is very remarkable for Tempeſts and Scarcity of Fiſh. It is probable one may be the Cauſe of the other, whether it be that the Fiſhermen cannot employ their Art with ſo much Succeſs in ſo troubled a Sea, or that the Fiſh do not care for inhabiting ſuch ſtormy Waters:

——————————Atrum
Defendens piſces hiemat mare—Hor. Sat. ii. lib. ii. v. 16.

While black with Storms that ruffled Ocean rolls,
And from the Fiſher's Art defends her Finny Sholes.

We were forced to lie in it two Days, and our Captain thought his Ship in ſo great Danger, that he fell upon his Knees, and confeſs'd himſelf to a Capucin who was on board with us. But at laſt, taking the Advantage of a Side-wind, we were driven back in a few Hours time as far as Monaco. Lucan has given us a Deſcription of the Harbour that we found ſo very welcome to us, after the great Danger we had eſcaped.

Quaque ſub Herculeo Sacratus nomine portus
Urget rupe cavâ pelagus: non Corus in illum
Jus habet aut Zephyrus: Solus ſua littora turbat Circius, & tutâ prohibet ſtatione Monæci.
Lib. i. v. 405.

The winding Rocks a ſpacious Harbour frame,
That from the great Alcides takes its Name:
Fenc'd to the Weſt and to the North it lies;
But when the Winds in Southern Quarters riſe,
Ships, from their Anchors torn, become their Sport,
And ſudden Tempeſts rage within the Port.

On the Promontory, where the Town of Monaco now ſtands, was formerly the Temple of Hercules Monæcus, which ſtill gives the Name to this ſmall Principality.

From Alpine Heights, and from Monæcus' Fane,
The Father firſt deſcends into the Plain.

There are but three Towns in the Dominions of the Prince of Monaco. The chief of them is ſituate on a Rock which runs out into the Sea, and is well fortified fortified by Nature. It was formerly under the Protection of the Spaniard, but not many Years ſince drove out the Spaniſh Garriſon, and received a French one, which conſiſts at preſent of five hundred Men, paid and officer'd by the French King. The Officer, who ſhewed me the Palace, told me, with a great deal of Gravity, that his Maſter and the King of France, amidſt all the Confuſions of Europe, had ever been good Friends and Allies. The Palace has handſom Apartments, that are many of them hung with Pictures of the reigning Beauties in the Court of France. But the beſt of the Furniture was at Rome, where the Prince of Monaco reſided at that time Ambaſſador. We here took a little Boat to creep along the Sea-ſhore as far as Genoa; but at Savona, finding the Sea too rough, we were forced to make the beſt of our way by Land, over very rugged Mountains and Precipices: For this Road is much more difficult than that over Mount Cennis.

The Genoeſe are eſteemed extremely Cunning, Induſtrious, and inur'd to Hardſhip above the reſt of the Italians; which was likewiſe the Character of the old Ligurians. And indeed it is no wonder, while the Barrenneſs of their Country continues, that the Manners of the Inhabitants do not change: Since there is nothing makes Men ſharper, and ſets their Hands and Wits more at work, than Want. The Italian Proverb ſays of the Genoeſe, that they have a Sea without Fiſh, Land without Trees, and Men without Faith. The Character the Latin Poets have given of them is not much different.

Are loſt on me; nor ſhalt thou ſafe retire,
With vaunting Lies, to thy fallacious Sire. Dryden.

There are a great many beautiful Palaces ſtanding along the Sea-ſhore on both ſides of Genoa, which make the Town appear much longer than it is, to thoſe that ſail by it. The City itſelf makes the nobleſt Show of any in the World. The Houſes are moſt of them painted on the Outſide; ſo that they look extremely gay and lively; beſides that they are eſteemed the higheſt in Europe, and ſtand very thick together. The New-Street is a double Range of Palaces from one End to the other, built with an excellent Fancy, and fit for the greateſt Princes to inhabit. I cannot however be reconciled to their manner manner of Painting ſeveral of the Genoeſe Houſes. Figures, Perſpectives, or Pieces of Hiſtory, are certainly very ornamental, as they are drawn on many of the Walls, that would otherwiſe look too naked and uniform without them: But, inſtead of theſe, one often ſees the Front of a Palace covered with painted Pillars of different Orders. If theſe were ſo many true columns of Marble ſet in their proper Architecture, they would certainly very much adorn the Places where they ſtand; but as they are now, they only ſhew us that there is ſomething wanting, and that the Palace, which without theſe counterfeit Pillars would be beautiful in its kind, might have been more perfect by the Addition of ſuch as are real. The Front of the Villa Imperiale, at a Mile diſtance from Genoa, without any thing of this Paint upon it, conſiſts of a Doric and Corinthian Row of Pillars, and is much the handſomeſt of any I there ſaw. The Duke of Doria's Palace has the beſt Outſide of any in Genoa, as that of Durazzo is the beſt furniſhed within. There is one Room in the firſt, that is hung with Tapeſtry, in which are wrought the Figures of the great Perſons that the Family has produced; as perhaps there is no Houſe in Europe that can ſhow a longer Line of Heroes, that have ſtill acted for the Good of their Country. Andrew Doria has a Statue erected to him at the Entrance of the Doge's Palace, with the glorious Title of Deliverer of the Commonwealth; and one of his Family another, that calls him its Preſerver. In the Doge's Palace are the Rooms, where the great and little Council, with the two Colleges, hold their Aſſemblies; but as the State of Genoa is very poor, tho' ſeveral of its Members are extremely rich, ſo one may obſerve infinitely more Splendor and Magnificence in particular Perſons Houſes, than in thoſe that belong to the Public. But we find in moſt of the States of Europe, that the People ſhow the greateſt Marks of Poverty, where the Governors live in the greateſt Magnificence. The Churches are very fine, particularly that of the Annunciation, which looks wonderfully beautiful in the Inſide, all but one Corner of it being covered with Statues, Gilding, and Paint. A Man would expect, in ſo very ancient a Town of Italy, to find ſome conſiderable Antiquities; but all they have to ſhow of this nature is an old Roſtrum of a Roman Ship, that ſtands over the Door of their Arſenal. It is not above a Foot long, and perhaps would never have been thought the Beak of a Ship, had it not been found in ſo probable a Place as the Haven. It is all of Iron, faſhioned at the End like a Boar's Head; as I have ſeen it repreſented on Medals, and on the Columna Roſtrata in Rome. I ſaw at Genoa Signior Micconi's famous Collection of Shells, which, as Father Buonani the Jeſuit has ſince told me, is one of the beſt in Italy. I know nothing more remarkable in the Government of Genoa, than the Bank of St. George, made up of ſuch Branches of the Revenues, as have been ſet apart and appropriated to the diſcharging of ſeveral Sums, that have been borrowed from private Perſons, during the Exigencies of the Commonwealth. Whatever Inconveniences the State has laboured under, they have never entertained a Thought of violating the Public Credit, or of alienating any Part of theſe Revenues to other Uſes, than to what they have been thus aſſigned. The Adminiſtration of this Bank is for Life, and partly in the Hands of the chief Citizens, which gives them a great Authority in the State, and a powerful Influence over the common People. This Bank is generally thought the greateſt Load on the Genoeſe, and the Managers of it have been repreſented as

as a ſecond kind of Senate, that break the Uniformity of Government, and deſtroy in ſome meaſure the Fundamental Conſtitution of the State. It is, however, very certain, that the People reap no ſmall Advantages from it, as it diſtributes the Power among more particular Members of the Republic, and gives the Commons a Figure: So that it is no ſmall Check upon the Ariſtocracy, and may be one Reaſon why the Genoeſe Senate carries it with greater Moderation towards their Subjects than the Venetian.

It would have been well for the Republic of Genoa, if ſhe had followed the Example of her Siſter of Venice, in not permitting her Nobles to make any Purchaſe of Lands or Houſes in the Dominions of a Foreign Prince. For at preſent, the greateſt among the Genoeſe, are in part Subjects to the Monarchy of Spain, by reaſon of their Eſtates that lie in the Kingdom of Naples. The Spaniards tax them very high upon occaſion, and are ſo ſenſible of the Advantage this gives them over the Republic, that they will not ſuffer a Neapolitan to buy the Lands of a Genoeſe, who muſt find a Purchaſer among his own Countrymen, if he has a mind to ſell. For this reaſon, as well as on account of the great Sums of Money which the Spaniard owes the Genoeſe, they are under a Neceſſity, at preſent, of being in the Intereſt of the French, and would probably continue ſo, tho' all the other States of Italy entered into a League againſt them. Genoa is not yet ſecure from a Bombardment, tho' it is not ſo expoſed as formerly; for, ſince the Inſult of the French, they have built a Mole, with ſome little Ports, and have provided themſelves with long Guns and Mortars. It is eaſy for thoſe that are ſtrong at Sea to bring them to what Terms they pleaſe; for having but very little Arable Land, they are forced to fetch all their Corn from Naples, Sicily, and other Foreign Countries; except what comes to them from Lombardy, which probably goes another way, whilſt it furniſhes two great Armies with Proviſions. Their fleet, that formerly gained ſo many Victories over the Saracens, Piſans, Venetians, Turks, and Spaniards, that made them Maſters of Crete, Sardinia, Majorca, Minorca, Negrepont, Lesbos, Malta, that ſettled them in Scio, Smyrna, Achaia, Theodoſia, and ſeveral Towns on the Eaſtern Confines of Europe, is now reduc'd to ſix Gallies. When they had made an Addition of but four new ones, the King of France ſent his Orders to ſuppreſs them, telling the Republic at the ſame time, that he knew very well how many they had Occaſion for. This little Fleet ſerves only to fetch them Wine and Corn, and to give their Ladies an Airing in the Summer-ſeaſon. The Republic of Genoa has a Crown and Scepter for its Doge, by reaſon of their Conqueſt of Corſica, where there was formerly a Saracen King. This indeed gives their Ambaſſadors a more honourable Reception at ſome Courts, but, at the ſame time, may teach their People to have a mean Notion of their own Form of Government, and is a tacit Acknowledgment that Monarchy is the more honourable. The old Romans, on the contrary, made uſe of a very barbarous kind of Politics to inſpire their People with a Contempt of Kings, whom they treated with Infamy, and dragged at the Wheels of their triumphal Chariots.

PAVIA, MILAN, &c.

FROM Genoa we took Chaiſe for Milan, and by the Way ſtopped at Pavia, that was once the Metropolis of a Kingdom, but is at preſent a poor Town. We here ſaw the Convent of Auſtin Monks, who about three Years ago, pretended to have found out the Body of the Saint that gives the Name to their Order. King Luitprand, whoſe Aſhes are in the ſame Church, brought hither the Corps, and was very induſtrious to conceal it, leſt it might be abuſed by the barbarous Nations, which at that time ravaged Italy. One would therefore rather wonder that it has not been found out much earlier, than that it is diſcover'd at laſt. The Fathers however do not yet find their Account in the Diſcovery they have made; for there are Canons Regular, who have half the ſame Church in their Hands, that will by no means allow it to be the Body of the Saint, nor is it yet recogniſed by the Pope. The Monks ſay for themſelves, that the very Name was written on the Urn where the Aſhes lay, and that, in an old Record of the Convent, they are ſaid to have been interred interred between the very Wall and the Altar where they were taken up. They have already too, as the Monks told us, begun to juſtify themſelves by Miracles. At the Corner of one of the Cloiſters of this Convent are bury'd the Duke of Suffolk, and the Duke of Lorrain, who were both killed in the famous Battle of Pavia. Their Monument was erected to them by one Charles Parker, an Eccleſiaſtic, as I learned from the Inſcription, which I cannot omit tranſcribing, ſince I have not ſeen it printed.

Capto a Milite Cæſareo Franciſco I. Gallorum Rege in agro Papienſi Anno 1525. 23. *Feb. inter alios proceres, qui ex ſuis in prælio occiſi ſunt, occubuerunt duo illuſtriſſimi principes, Franciſcus Dux Lotharingiæ et Richardus de la Poole Anglus Dux Suffolciæ a Rege Tyranno Hen. Francis the 1ſt, King of France, being taken Priſoner by the Imperialiſts, at the Battle of Pavia, February the 23d 1525, among other Noblemen who died in the Field, were two moſt illuſtrious Princes, Francis Duke of Lorrain, and Richard de la Poole, an Engliſhman, Duke of Suffolk, who had been baniſhed by the Tyrant King Henry the Eighth.

Eighth. Their Bodies lay buried, withour Honour Fifty-ſeven Years in this Convent. At length, Charles Parker of Morley, a near Kinſman of the Duke of Suffolk, who had been baniſh'd from England by Queen Elizabeth for the Catholic Faith, and was ſupported in the Milaneſe by the Bounty of the Catholic King Philip, the invincible Monarch of Spain, erected this Monument, the beſt his ſlender Abilities could afford, to his moſt dear Kinſman, and theſe moſt illuſtrious Princes, recommending a better and more honourable one to the Lorrainers. Paſſenger, pray for their Soul's Repoſe.

This pretended Duke of Suffolk was Sir Richard de la Poole, Brother to the Earl of Suffolk, who was put to death by Henry the Eighth. In his Baniſhment he took upon him the Title of Duke of Suffolk, which had been ſunk in the Family ever ſince the Attainder of the Great Duke of Suffolk under the Reign of Henry the Sixth. He fought very bravely in the Battle of Pavia, and was magnificently interr'd by the Duke of Bourbon, who, tho' an Enemy, aſſiſted at his Funeral in Mourning.

Parker himſelf is buried in the ſame Place, with the following Inſcription.

D. O. M.

Carolo Parchero a Morley Anglo ex illuſtriſſimâ clariſſimâ ſtirpe. Qui Epiſcopus deſ. ob fidem Catholicam actus in Exilium. An. XXXI. peregrinatus ab Invictiſſ. Phil. Rege Hiſpan. honeſtiſſimis pietatis & conſtantiæ præmiis ornatus moritur Anno a partu Virginis, M. D. C. XI. Men. Septembris.

To the Memory of Charles Parker of Morley, an Engliſhman, of a moſt Noble and Illuſtrious Family; who, who, a Biſhop elect, being baniſh'd for the Catholic Faith, and, in the Thirty-firſt Year of his Exile, honourably rewarded for his Piety and Conſtancy by the moſt invincible Philip King of Spain, died in September 1611.

In Pavia is an Univerſity of Seven Colleges, one of them called the College of Borromee, very large, and neatly built. There is likewiſe a Statue in Braſs, of Marcus Antoninus on Horſeback, which the People of the Place call Charles the Fifth, and ſome learned Men Conſtantine the Great.

Pavia is the Ticinum of the Ancients, which took its Name from the River Ticinus, which runs by it, and is now called the Teſin. This River falls into the Po, and is exceſſively rapid. The Biſhop of Salisbury ſays, that he ran down with the Stream thirty Miles in an Hour, by the help of but one Rower. I do not know therefore why Silius Italicus has repreſented it as ſo very gentle and ſtill a River, in the beautiful Deſcription he has given us of it.

Cæruleas Ticinus aquas et Stagna vadoſa
Perſpicuus ſervat, turbari neſcia, fundo,
Ac nitidum viridi lentè trahit amne liquorem;
Vix credas labi, ripis tam mitis opacis
Argutos inter (volucrum certamina) cantus
Somniferam ducit lucenti gurgite lympham. Lib. iv.

Smooth and untroubled the Ticinus flows,
And through the Cryſtal Stream the ſhining Bottom ſhows:
Scarce can the Sight diſcover if it moves;
So wond'rous ſlow, amidſt the ſhady Groves,
And tuneful Birds that warble on its Sides,
Within its gloomy Banks the limpid Liquor glides.

A Poet of another Nation would not have dwelt ſo long upon the Clearneſs and Tranſparency of the Stream; but in Italy one ſeldom ſees a River that is extremely bright and limpid, moſt of them falling down from the Mountains, that make their Waters very troubled and muddy; whereas the Teſin is only an Outlet of that vaſt Lake, which the Italians now call the Lago Maggiore.

I ſaw between Pavia and Milan the Convent of Carthuſians, which is very ſpacious and beautiful. Their Church is extremely fine, and curiouſly adorned, but of a Gothic Structure.

I could not ſtay long in Milan without going to ſee the Great Church that I had heard ſo much of, but was never more deceived in my Expectation than at my firſt entering: For the Front, which was all I had ſeen of the Outſide, is not half finiſh'd, and the Inſide is ſo ſmutted with Duſt and the Smoke of Lamps, that neither the Marble, nor the Silver, nor Braſs-Work ſhew themſelves to an Advantage. This vaſt Gothic Pile of Building is all of Marble, except the Roof, which would have been of the ſame Matter with the reſt, had not its Weight render'd it improper for that part of the Building. But for the Reaſon I have juſt now mention'd, the Outſide of the Church looks much whiter and freſher than the Inſide; for where the Marble is ſo often waſh'd with Rains, it preſerves itſelf more beautiful and unſullied, than in thoſe Parts that are not at all expoſed to the Weather. That Side of the Church indeed, which faces the Tramontane Wind, is much more unſightly than the reſt, by reaſon of the Duſt and Smoke that are driven againſt it. This Profuſion of Marble, tho' aſtoniſhing to Strangers, is not very wonderful in a Country that has ſo many Veins of it within its its Bowels. But tho' the Stones are cheap, the working of them is very expenſive. It is generally ſaid there are eleven thouſand Statues about the Church; but they reckon into the Account every particular Figure in the Hiſtory-pieces, and ſeveral little Images which make up the Equipage of thoſe that are larger. There are indeed a great Multitude of ſuch as are bigger than the Life: I reckoned about two hundred and fifty on the outſide of the Church, tho' I only told three Sides of it; and theſe are not half ſo thick ſet as they intend them. The Statues are all of Marble, and generally well cut; but the moſt valuable one they have is a St. Bartholomew, new-flead, with his Skin hanging over his Shoulders: It is eſteemed worth its Weight in Gold: They have inſcribed this Verſe on the Pedeſtal, to ſhow the Value they have for the Workman:

Non me Praxiteles, ſed Marcus finxit Agrati.

Leſt at the Sculptor doubtfully you gueſs,
'Tis Marc Agrati, not Praxiteles.

There is, juſt before the Entrance of the Quire, a little Subterraneous Chapel dedicated to St. Charles Borromee, where I ſaw his Body, in Epiſcopal Robes, lying upon the Altar in a Shrine of Rock-Cryſtal. His Chapel is adorned with abundance of Silver Work: He was but two and twenty Years old when he was choſen Archbiſhop of Milan, and forty-ſix at his Death; but made ſo good uſe of ſo ſhort a time, by his Works of Charity and Munificence, that his Countrymen bleſs his Memory, which is ſtill freſh among them. He was canonized about a hundred Years ago: and indeed if this Honour were due to any Man, I think ſuch Public-ſpirited

ſpirited Virtues may lay a juſter Claim to it, than a ſour Retreat from Mankind, a fiery Zeal againſt Heterodoxies, a Set of Chimerical Viſions, or of Whimſical Penances, which are generally the Qualifications of Roman Saints. Miracles indeed are required of all who aſpire to this Dignity, becauſe, they ſay, an Hypocrite may imitate a Saint in all other Particulars, and theſe they attribute in great Number to him I am ſpeaking of. His Merit and the Importunity of his Countrymen procured his Canonization before the ordinary time; for it is the Policy of the Roman Church not to allow this Honour, ordinarily, 'till fifty Years after the Death of the Perſon, who is Candidate for it; in which time it may be ſuppoſed that all his Contemporaries will be worn out, who could contradict a pretended Miracle, or remember any Infirmity of the Saint. One would wonder that Roman Catholics, who are for this kind of Worſhip, do not generally addreſs themſelves to the Holy Apoſtles, who have a more unqueſtionable Right to the Title of Saints than thoſe of a modern Date; but theſe are at preſent quite out of Faſhion in Italy, where there is ſcarce a great Town, which does not pay its Devotions, in a more particular manner, to ſome one of their own making. This renders it very ſuſpicious, that the Intereſts of particular Families, religious Orders, Convents, or Churches, have too great a Sway in their Canonizations. When I was at Milan I ſaw a Book newly publiſhed, that was Dedicated to the preſent Head of the Borromean Family, and intitled, A Diſcourſe on the Humility of Jeſus Chriſt, and of St. Charles Borromee.

The Great Church of Milan has two noble Pulpits of Braſs, each of them running round a large Pillar,

Pillar, like a Gallery, and ſupported by huge Figures of the ſame Metal. The Hiſtory of our Saviour, or rather of the bleſſed Virgin (for it begins with her Birth, and ends with her Coronation in Heaven, that of our Saviour coming in by way of Epiſode) is finely cut in Marble by Andrew Biffy. This Church is very rich in Relics, which run up as high as Daniel, Jonas, and Abraham. Among the reſt they ſhow a Fragment of our Countryman Becket, as indeed there are very few Treaſuries of Relics in Italy that have not a Tooth or a Bone of this Saint. It would be endleſs to count up the Riches of Silver, Gold, and Precious Stones, that are amaſs'd together in this and ſeveral other Churches of Milan. I was told, that in Milan there are ſixty Convents of Women, eighty of Men, and two hundred Churches. At the Celeſtines is a Picture in Freſco of the Marriage of Cana, very much eſteem'd; but the Painter, whether deſignedly or not, has put ſix fingers to the Hand of one of the Figures: They ſhow the Gates of a Church that St. Ambroſe ſhut againſt the Emperor Theodoſius, as thinking him unfit to aſſiſt at Divine Service, 'till he had done ſome extraordinary Penance for his barbarous maſſacring the Inhabitants of Theſſalonica. That Emperor was however ſo far from being diſpleas'd with the Behaviour of the Saint, that at his Death he committed to him the Education of his Children. Several have pick'd Splinters of Wood out of the Gates for Relics. There is a little Chapel lately re-edify'd, where the ſame Saint baptis'd St. Auſtin. An Inſcription upon the Wall of it ſays, that it was in this Chapel, and on this Occaſion, that he firſt ſung his Te Deum, and that his great Convert anſwer'd him Verſe by Verſe. In one of the Churches I ſaw a Pulpit and Confeſſional, feſſional, very finely inlaid with Lapis-Lazuli, and ſeveral kinds of Marble, by a Father of the Convent. It is very lucky for a Religious, who has ſo much time on his hands, to be able to amuſe himſelf with Works of this nature; and one often finds particular Members of Convents, who have excellent mechanical Genius's, and divert themſelves, at leiſure Hours, with Painting, Sculpture, Architecture, Gardening, and ſeveral kinds of Handicrafts. Since I have mention'd Confeſſionals, I ſhall ſet down here ſome Inſcriptions that I have ſeen over them in Roman Catholic Countries, which are all Texts of Scripture, and regard either the Penitent or the Father. Abi, oſtende te ad Sacerdotem ——— Ne taceat pupilla oculi tui ——— Ibo ad Patrem meum & dicam, Pater peccavi ——— Soluta erunt in Cœlis ——— Redi Anima mea in Requiem tuam ——— Vade, & ne deinceps pecca ——— Qui vos audit, me audit ——— Venite ad me omnes qui fatigati eſtis & onerati ——— Corripiet me juſtus in miſericordiâ ——— Vide ſi via Iniquitatis in me eſt, & deduc me in viâ æternâ ——— Ut audiret gemitus compeditorum. i. e. Go thy way, ſhew thyſelf to the Prieſt. Matth. viii. 4. ——— Let not the Apple of thine Eye ceaſe. Lam. ii. 18. ——— I will go to my Father, and will ſay unto him, Father, I have ſinned. Luke xv. 18. ——— Shall be looſed in Heaven. Matth. xvi. 19. ——— Return unto thy Reſt, O my Soul. Pſal. cxvi. 7. ——— Go, and ſin no more. John viii. 11. ——— He that heareth you, heareth me. Luke x. 16. ——— Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden. Matth. xi. 28. ——— See if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way everlaſting. Pſal. cxxxix. 24. ——— To hear the groaning of the Priſoners.

Pſal.

Pſal. cii. 20. I ſaw the Ambroſian Library, where, to ſhew the Italian Genius, they have ſpent more Money on Pictures than on Books. Among the Heads of ſeveral learned Men, I met with no Engliſhmen, except Biſhop Fiſher, whom Henry the Eighth put to Death for not owning his Supremacy. Books are indeed the leaſt Part of the Furniture that one ordinarily goes to ſee in an Italian Library, which they generally ſet off with Pictures, Statues, and other Ornaments, where they can afford them, after the Example of the old Greeks and Romans.

——— Plena omnia gypſo

Et jubet archetypos pluteum ſervare Cleanthas.
Juv. Sat ii. v. 4.

Chryſippus' Statue decks thy Library.
Who makes his Study fineſt, is moſt read;
The Dolt that with an Ariſtotle's Head,
Carv'd to the Life, has once adorn'd his Shelf, Straight ſets up for a Stagirite himſelf. Tate.

In an Apartment behind the Library are ſeveral Rarities, often deſcrib'd by Travellers, as Brugeal's Elements, a Head of Titian by his own Hand, a Manuſcript in Latin of Joſephus, which the Biſhop of Salisbury ſays was written about the Age of Theodoſius, and another of Leonardus Vincius, which King James the Firſt could not procure, tho' he proffer'd for it three thouſand Spaniſh Piſtoles. It conſiſts of Deſignings in Mechaniſm and Engineering. I was ſhewn in it a Sketch of Bombs and Mortars, as they are now uſed. Canon Settala's Cabinet is always ſhewn to a Stranger among among the Curioſities of Milan, which I ſhall not be particular upon, the printed Account of it being common enough. Among its natural Curioſities, I took particular notice of a piece of Cryſtal, that inclos'd a couple of Drops, which look'd like Water when they were ſhaken, tho' perhaps they are nothing but Bubbles of Air. It is ſuch a Rarity as this that I ſaw at Vendome in France, which they there pretend is a Tear that our Saviour ſhed over Lazarus, and was gather'd up by an Angel, who put it in a little Cryſtal Vial, and made a Preſent of it to Mary Magdalene. The famous Pere Mabillon is now engaged in the Vindication of this Tear, which a learned Eccleſiaſtic, in the Neighbourhood of Vendome, would have ſuppreſſed, as a falſe and ridiculous Relic, in a Book that he has dedicated to his Diocefan the Biſhop of Blois. It is in the Poſſeſſion of a Benedictin Convent, which raiſes a conſiderable Revenue out of the Devotion that is paid to it, and has now retained the moſt learned Father of their Order to write in its Defence.

It was ſuch a Curioſity as this I have mention'd, that Claudian has celebrated in about half a Score Epigrams:

Solibus indomitum glacies Alpina rigorem
Sumebat, nimio jam precioſa gelu.
Nec potuit toto mentiri corpore gemmam,
Sed medio manſit proditor orbe latex:
Auctus honor; liquidi creſcunt miracula ſaxi,
Et conſervatæ plus meruiſtis aquæ.

Deep in the ſnowy Alps a Lump of Ice
By Froſts was harden'd to a mighty Price;

Proof

Proof to the Sun, it now ſecurely lies,
And the warm Dog-ſtar's hotteſt Rage defies:
Yet ſtill, unripen'd in the dewy Mines,
Within the Ball a trembling Water ſhines,
That through the Cryſtal darts its ſpurious Rays,
And the proud Stone's Original betrays:
But common Drops, when thus with Cryſtal mixt,
Are valu'd more, than if in Rubies fixt.

As I walk'd thro' one of the Streets of Milan, I was ſurpris'd to read the following Inſcription, concerning a Barber, that had conſpired with the Commiſſary of Health and others to poiſon his Fellow-Citizens. There is a void Space where his Houſe ſtood, and in the midſt of it a Pillar, ſuperſcribed Colonna Infame. The Story is told in handſom Latin, which I ſhall ſet down, as having never ſeen it tranſcribed.

In this void Space ſtood formerly the Barber's Shop of John James Mora, who, having conſpired with William Platea, the Commiſſary of Health, and others, during the time of a raging Plague, deſtroy'd the Lives of a great number of Citizens by diſperſing poiſonous Drugs. The Senate therefore order'd them both, as Enemies of their Country, to be broke on the Wheel, their Fleſh being firſt torn with red-hot pincers, and their right Hands cut off; and, after lying ſix Hours on the Wheel, their Throats to be cut, and their Bodies burn'd; and, that there might be no Remains of ſuch wicked Men, their Goods to be plunder'd, and their Aſhes thrown into the River: And, to perpetuate the Memory of this Tranſaction, the Houſe, in which the Villany was contrived, was order'd to be pull'd down to the Ground, and never to be rebuilt; and a Column to be raiſed on the Spot, call'd The Infamous. Fly from hence, good Citizens, leſt the wretched and infamous Soil infect you. Aug. 1, 1630. M. Anthony Monthius, the Senator, Commiſſary of Health, &c.

and

The Citadel of Milan is thought a ſtrong Fort in Italy, and has held out formerly after the Conqueſt of the reſt of the Dutchy. The Governor of it is independent on the Governor of Milan; as the Perſians uſed to make the Rulers of Provinces and Fortreſſes of different Conditions and Intereſts, to prevent Conſpiracies.

At two Miles diſtance from Milan, there ſtands a Building, that would have been a Maſter-piece in its kind, had the Architect deſign'd it for an artificial Echo. We diſcharg'd a Piſtol, and had the Sound return'd upon us above fifty-ſix times, tho' the Air was very foggy. The firſt Repetitions follow one another very thick, but are heard more diſtinctly in proportion as they decay: There are two parallel Walls, which beat the Sound back on each other, till the Undulation is quite worn out, like the ſeveral Reverberations of the ſame Image from two oppoſite Looking-glaſſes. Father Kircher has taken notice of this particular Echo, as Father Bartolin has done ſince in his ingenious Diſcourſe on Sounds. The State of Milan is like a vaſt Garden, ſurrounded by a noble Moundwork of Rocks and Mountains. Indeed, if a Man conſiders the Face of Italy in general, one would think that Nature had laid it out into ſuch a Variety of States and Governments as one finds in it. For as the Alps at one end, and the long Range of Apennines, that paſſes through the Body of it, branch out on all ſides into ſeveral different Diviſions; they ſerve as ſo many natural tural Boundaries and Fortifications to the little Territories that lie among them. Accordingly we find the whole Country cut into a multitude of particular Kingdoms and Commonwealths in the oldeſt Accounts we have of it, 'till the Power of the Romans, like a Torrent that overflows its Banks, bore down all before it, and ſpread itſelf into the remoteſt Corners of the Nation. But as this exorbitant Power became unable to ſupport itſelf, we find the Govêrnment of Italy again broken into ſuch a Variety of Sub-diviſions, as naturally ſuits with its Situation.

In the Court of Milan, as in ſeveral others of Italy, there are many who fall in with the Dreſs and Carriage of the French. One may however obſerve a kind of aukwardneſs in the Italians, which eaſily diſcovers the Airs they give themſelves not to be natural. It is indeed very ſtrange there ſhould be ſuch a diverſity of Manners, when there is ſo ſmall a difference in the Air and Climate. The French are always open, familiar, and talkative: The Italians, on the contrary, are ſtiff, ceremonious, and reſerved. In France every one aims at a Gaiety and Sprightlineſs of Behaviour, and thinks it an Accompliſhment to be brisk and lively: The Italians, notwithſtanding their natural Fierineſs of Temper, affect always to appear ſober and ſedate; inſomuch that one ſometimes meets Young Men walking the Streets with Spectacles on their Noſes, that they may be thought to have impaired their Sight by much Study, and ſeem more Grave and Judicious than their Neighbours. This Difference of Manners proceeds chiefly from Difference of Education. In France it is uſual to bring their Children into Company, and to cheriſh in them, from their Infancy, a kind of Forwardneſs and Aſſurance: Beſides, that the French apply themſelves more univerſally to their Exerciſes than any other Nation in the World, ſo that one ſeldom ſees a young Gentleman in France that does not Fence, Dance, and Ride in ſome tolerable Perfection. Theſe Agitations of the Body do not only give them a free and eaſy Carriage, but have a kind of Mechanical Operation on the Mind, by keeping the Animal Spirits always awake and in Motion. But what contributes moſt to this light airy Humour of the French, is the free Converſation that is allowed them with their Women, which does not only communicate to them a certain Vivacity of Temper, but makes them endeavour after ſuch a Behavionr as is moſt taking with the Sex.

The Italians, on the contrary, who are excluded from making their Court this way, are for recommending themſelves to thoſe they converſe with by their Gravity and Wiſdom. In Spain therefore where there are fewer Liberties of this Nature allowed, there is ſomething ſtill more ſerious and compoſed in the Manner of the Inhabitants. But as Mirth is more apt to make Proſelytes than Melancholy, it is obſerved that the Italians have many of them for theſe late Years given very far into the Modes and Freedoms of the French; which prevail more or leſs in the Courts of Italy, as they lie at a ſmaller or greater Diſtance from France. It may be here worth while to conſider how it comes to paſs, that the common People of Italy have in general ſo very great an Averſion to the French, which every Traveller cannot but be ſenſible of that has paſſed through the Country. The moſt obvious obvious Reaſon is certainly the great Difference that here is in the Humours and Manners of the two Nations, which always works more in the meaner ſort, who are not able to vanquiſh the Prejudices of Education, than with the Nobility. Beſides, that the French Humour, in regard of the Liberties they take in Female Converſations, and their great Ambition to excel in all Companies, is in a more particular manner very ſhocking to the Italians, who are naturally Jealous, and value themſelves upon their great Wiſdom. At the ſame time, the common People of Italy, who run more into News and Politicks than thoſe of other Countries, have all of them ſomething to exaſperate them againſt the King of France. The Savoyards, notwithſtanding the preſent Inclinations of their Court, cannot forbear reſenting the infinite Miſchiefs he did them in the laſt War. The Milaneſe and Neapolitans remember the many Inſults he has offer'd to the Houſe of Auſtria, and particularly to their deceaſed King, for whom they ſtill retain a natural kind of Honour and Affection. The Genoeſe cannot forget his Treatment of their Doge, and his bombarding their City. The Venetians will tell you of his Leagues with the Turks; and the Romans of his Threats to Pope Innocent the Eleventh, whoſe Memory they adore. It is true, that Intereſt of State, and Change of Circumſtances, may have ſweetned theſe Reflections to the Politer Sort; but Impreſſions are not ſo eaſily worn out of the Minds of the Vulgar. That however, which I take to be the principal Motive among moſt of the Italians, for their favouring the Germans above the French, is this, that they are entirely perſuaded it is for the Intereſt of Italy, to have Milan and Naples rather in the Hands of the firſt, than of the other. One may generally obſerve, that the Body of a People has juſter Views for the Public Good, and purſues them with greater Uprightneſs than the Nobility and Gentry, who have ſo many private Expectations and particular Intereſts, which hang like a falſe Bias upon their Judgments, and may poſſibly diſpoſe them to ſacrifice the Good of their Country to the Advancement of their own Fortunes; whereas the Groſs of the People can have no other Proſpect in Changes and Revolutions than of public Bleſſings, that are to diffuſe themſelves thro' the whole State in general.

To return to Milan, I ſhall here ſet down the Deſcription Auſonius has given of it, among the reſt of his great Cities.

Et Mediolani mira omnia, copia rerum:
Innumeræ cultæque domus, facunda virorum
Ingenia, et mores læti: Tum duplice muro
Amplificata loci ſpecies, populique voluptas
Circus, et incluſi moles cuneata Theatri:
Templa, Palatinæque arces, opulenſque Moneta,
Et regio Herculei celebris ab honore lavacri,
Cunctaque marmoreis ornata periſtyla Signis,
Omnia quæ magnis operum velut æmula formis
Excellunt; nec juncta premit vicinia Romæ.

Milan with Plenty and with Wealth o'erflows,
And num'rous Streets and cleanly Dwellings ſhows.
The People, bleſs'd with Nature's happy Force,
Are Eloquent and Chearful in Diſcourſe;
A Circus and a Theatre invites
Th' unruly Mob to Races and to Fights;

Moneta

Moneta conſecrated Buildings grace,
And the whole Town redoubled Walls embrace:
Here ſpacious Baths and Palaces are ſeen,
And intermingled Temples riſe between;
Here circling Colonnades the Ground incloſe,
And here the marble Statues breathe in Rows:
Profuſely grac'd the happy Town appears,
Nor Rome itſelf, her beauteous Neighbour, fears.

BRESCIA,

VERONA,

PADUA,

FROM Milan we travell'd thro' a very pleaſant Country to Breſcia, and by the way croſs'd the River Adda, that falls into the Lago di Como, which Virgil calls the Lake Larius, and running out at the other End loſes itſelf at laſt in the Po, which is the great Receptacle of all the Rivers of this Country. The Town and Province of Breſcia have freer Acceſs to the Senate of Venice, and a quicker Redreſs of Injuries, than any other Part of their Dominions. They have always a mild and prudent Governor, and live much more happily than their Fellow-Subjects: For as they were once a Part of the Milaneſe, and are now on the Frontiers, the Venetians dare not exaſperate them by the Loads they lay on other Provinces, for fear of a Revolt; and are forced to treat them with more Indulgence than the Spaniards do their Neighbours, that they may have no Temptation to it. Breſcia is famous for its Iron-Works. A ſmall Day's Journey more brought us to Verona. We ſaw the Lake Benacus in our way, which the Italians now call Lago di Garda: It was ſo rough with Tempeſts when we paſs'd by it, that it brought into my mind Virgil's noble Deſcription of it.

Adde lacus tantos, te Lari maxime, teque
Fluctibus et fremitu aſſurgens, Benace, marino.
. Georg. ii. v. 159.

Here vex'd by Winter Storms Benacus raves,
Confus'd with working Sands and rolling Waves;
Rough and tumultuous like a Sea it lies,
So loud the Tempeſt roars, ſo high the Billows riſe.

This Lake perfectly reſembles a Sea, when it is work'd up by Storms. It is thirty-five Miles in length, and twelve in breadth. At the lower end of it we croſs'd the Mincio.

— Tardis ingens ubi flexibus errat
Mincius, et tenerâ prætexit arundine ripas.
Virg. Georg. iii. v. 14.

Where the ſlow Mincius thro' the Valley ſtrays:
Where cooling Streams invite the Flocks to drink,
And Reeds defend the winding Waters Brink.
Dryden.

The River Adige runs thro' Verona; ſo much is the Situation of the Town chang'd from what it was in Silius Italicus his Time.

——— Verona Atheſi circumflua. Lib. viii.

Verona by the circling Adige bound.

This is the only great River in Lombardy that does not fall into the Po; which it muſt have done, had it run but a little further before its entering the Adriatic. The Rivers are all of them mention'd by Claudian.

——— Venetoſque erectior amnes
Magnâ voce ciet. Frondentibus humida ripis
Colla levant, pulcher Ticinus, et Addua viſu
Cæruleus, velox Atheſis, tarduſque meatu
Mincius, inque novem conſurgens ora Timavus.
Sexto Conſ. Hon.

Venetia's Rivers, ſummon'd all around,
Hear the loud Call, and anſwer to the Sound;
Her dropping Locks the Silver Teſſin rears;
The blue tranſparent Adda next appears;
The rapid Adige then erects her Head;
And Mincio riſing ſlowly from his Bed:
And laſt Timavus, that with eager Force
From nine wide Mouths comes guſhing to his Courſe.

His Larius is doubtleſs an Imitation of Virgil's Benacus.

——— Umbroſâ veſtit quà littus Olivâ Larius, et dulci mentitur Nerea fluctu. De Bel. Get.

The Larius here with Groves of Olives crown'd,
An Ocean of freſh Water ſpreads around.

I ſaw at Verona the famous Amphitheatre, that with a few modern Reparations has all the Seats entire. There is ſomething very noble in it, tho' the high Wall and Corridors that went round it are almoſt entirely ruined, and the Area is quite filled up to

to the lower Seat, which was formerly deep enough to let the Spectators ſee in Safety the Combats of the wild Beaſts and Gladiators. Since I have Claudian before me, I cannot forbear ſetting down the beautiful Deſcription he has made of a wild Beaſt newly brought from the Woods, and making its firſt Appearance in a full Amphitheatre.

Ut fera quæ nuper montes amiſit avitos,
Altorumque exul nemorum, damnatur arenæ
Muneribus, commota ruit; vir murmure contra Hortatur, nixuſque genu venabula tendit;
Illa pavet ſtrepitus, cuneoſque erecta Theatri
Deſpicit, et tanti miratur ſibila vulgi. In Ruf. lib. ii.

So ruſhes on his Foe the griſly Bear,
That baniſh'd from the Hills and buſhy Brakes,
His old hereditary Haunts forſakes.
Condemn'd the cruel Rabble to delight,
His angry Keeper goads him to the Fight.
Bent on his Knee, the Savage glares around,
Scar'd with the mighty Crowd's promiſcuous Sound;
Then rearing on his hinder Paws retires,
And the vaſt hiſſing Multitude admires.

There are ſome other Antiquities in Verona, of which the principal is the Ruin of a Triumphal Arch erected to Flaminius, where one ſees old Doric Pillars without any Pedeſtal or Baſis, as Vitruvius has deſcribed them. I have not yet ſeen any Gardens in Italy worth taking notice of. The Italians fall as far ſhort of the French in this Particular, as they excel them in their Palaces. It muſt however be ſaid, to the Honour of the Italians, that the French took from them the firſt Plans of their Gardens, as well as of their Water-Works; ſo that their ſurpaſſing of them at preſent is to be attributed rather to the Greatneſs of their Riches, than the Excellence of their Taſte. I ſaw the Terrace-Garden of Verona, that Travellers generally mention. Among the Churches of Verona, that of St. George is the handſomeſt: Its chief Ornament is the Martyrdom of the Saint, drawn by Paul Veroneſe; as there are many other Pictures about the Town by the ſame Hand. A Stranger is always ſhown the Tomb of Pope Lucius, who lies buried in the Dome. I ſaw in the ſame Church a Monument erected by the Public to one of their Biſhops: The Inſcription ſays, that there was between him and his Maker Summa Neceſſitudo, Summa Similitudo. The Italian Epitaphs are often more extravagant than thoſe of other Countries, as the Nation is more given to Compliment and Hyperbole. From Verona to Padua we travelled thro' a very pleaſant Country: It is planted thick with Rows of white Mulberry-trees that furniſh Food for great Quantities of Silk-worms with their Leaves, as the Swine and Poultry conſume the Fruit. The Trees themſelves ſerve at the ſame time, as ſo many Stays for their Vines, which hang all along like Garlands from Tree to Tree. Between the ſeveral Ranges lie Fields of Corn, which in theſe warm Countries ripens much better among the Mulberry Shades, than if it were expoſed to the open Sun. This was one Reaſon why the Inhabitants of this Country, when I paſſed thro' it, were extremely apprehenſive of ſeeing Lombardy the Seat of War, which muſt have made miſerable Havock among their Plantations; for it is not here as in the Corn Fields of Flanders, where the whole Product of the Place riſes from Year to Year. We arrived ſo late at Vicenza, that we had not time to take a full Sight of the Place. The next Day brought us to Padua. St. Anthony, who lived about five hundred Years ago, is the great Saint to whom they here pay their Devotions. He lies buried in the Church that is dedicated to him at preſent, tho' it was formerly conſecrated to the Bleſſed Virgin. It is extremely magnificent, and very richly adorned. There are narrow Clefts in the Monument that ſtands over him, where good Catholics rub their Beads, and ſmell his Bones, which they ſay have in them a natural Perfume, tho' very like Apoplectic Balſam; and what would make one ſuſpect that they rub the Marble with it, it is obſerved that the Scent is ſtronger in the Morning than at Night. There are abundance of Inſcriptions and Pictures hung up by his Votaries in ſeveral Parts of the Church: For it is the way of thoſe that are in any ſignal Danger to implore his Aid, and if they come off ſafe they call their Deliverance a Miracle, and perhaps hang up the Picture or Deſcription of it in the Church. This Cuſtom ſpoils the Beauty of ſeveral Roman Catholic Churches, and often covers the Walls with wretched Daubings, impertinent Inſcriptions, Hands, Legs, and Arms of Wax, with a thouſand idle Offerings of the ſame Nature.

They ſell at Padua the Life of St. Anthony, which is read with great Devotion; the moſt remarkable Part of it is his Diſcourſe to an Aſſembly of Fiſh. As the Audience and Sermon are both very extraordinary, I will ſet down the whole Paſſage at length.

Non curando gli Heretici il ſuo parlare, egli ſi come era alla riva del mare, dove ſbocca il fiume Marecchia, chiamò da parte di Dio li peſci, che veniſſero à ſentir la ſua ſanta parola. Et ecco che di ſubito ſopra l' acque nuotando gran moltitudine di varii, & diverſi peſci, e del mare, e del fiume, ſi unirono tutti, ſecondo

le

le ſpecie loro, e con bell ordine, quaſi che di ragion capaci ſtati foſſero, attenti, e cheti con gratioſo ſpettacolo s'accommodaro per ſentir la parola di Dio. Ciò veduto il ſanto entro al cuor ſuo di dolcezza ſtillandoſi, & per altretanta maraviglia inarcando le ciglia, della obedientia di queſte irragionevoli creature così cominciò loro à parlare. Se bene in tutto le cose create (cari, & amati peſci) ſi ſcuopere la potenza, & providenza infinita di Dio, como nel Cielo, nel Sole, nella Luna, nelle Stelle, in queſto mondo inferiore, nel huomo, e nelle altre creature perfette, nondimeno in Voi particolarmente lampeggia e riſplende la bontà della maeſtà divina; perche ſe bene ſiete chiamati Rettili, mezzi frà pietre, e bruti, confinati nelli profondi abiſſi delle ondeggiante acque: agitati ſempre da flutti: moſſi ſempre da procelle; ſordi al' udire, mutoli al parlare, & horridi al vedere; con tutto ciò in Voi maravigliosamente ſi ſcorge la Divina grandezza; e da voi ſi cavano la maggiori miſterii della bontà di Dio, ne mai ſi parla di voi nella Scrittura Sacra, che non vi ſia aſcoſto qualche profondo Sacramento; Credete voi, che ſia ſenza grandiſſimo miſterio, che il primo dono fatto dall' omnipotente Iddio all' huomo foſſe di voi Peſci? Credete voi che non ſia miſterio in queſto, che di tutte le creature, e di tutti gl' animali ſi ſien fatti ſacrificii, eccetto, che di voi Peſci? Credete, che non vi ſia qualche ſecreto in queſto, che Chriſto noſtro ſalvatore dall' agnelo paſquale in poi, ſi compiacque tanto del cibo di voi peſci? Credete, che ſia à caſo queſto, che dovendo il Redentor del mondo, pagar, come huomo, il cenſo à Ceſare la voleſſe trovare nella bocca di un peſce? Tutti, tutti ſono miſteri e Sacramenti: perciò ſiete particolarmente obligati a lodare il voſtro Creatore: amati peſci di Dio havete ricevuto l' eſſere, la vita, li moto, e'l ſenſo; per ſtanza vi hà dato il liquido elemento dell' Acqua, ſecondo che alla voſtra naturale incli-

inclinatione conviene: ivi hà fatti ampliſſimi alberghi, ſtanze, caverne, grotte, e ſecreti luogi à voi più che ſale Regie, e regal Palazzi, cari, e grati; & per propria ſede havete l' acqua, elemento diafano, transparente, e ſempre lucido quaſi criſtallo, e verro; & dalle più baſſe, e profonde voſtre ſtanze ſcorgete ciò che ſopra acqua ò ſi fa, ò nuota; havete gli occhi quaſi di Lince, ò di Argo, & da cauſa non errante guidati, ſeguite ciò che vi giova, & aggrada; & fuggite ciò che vi nuoce, havete natural deſio di conſervarvi ſecondo le ſpetie voſtre, faſe, oprate & caminate ove natura vi detta ſenza contraſtro alcuno; nè algor d' inverno, nè calor di ſtate vi offende, ò nuoce: ſiaſi per ſereno, ò turbato il cielo, che alli voſtri humidi alberghi nè frutto, nè danno apporta; ſiaſi pure abbondevole de ſuoi teſori, ò ſcarſa de ſuo frutti la terra, che a voi nulla giova; piova, tuoni, ſaette, lampaggi, è ſubiſſi il mondo, che avoi ciò poco importa; verdeggi prinavera, ſcaldi la ſtate, fruttifichi l' Autunno, & aſſideri li inverno, queſto non vi rileva punto: ne trappaſſar del' hore, nè correr de giorni, nè volar de meſi, nè ſuggir d' anni, nè mutar de tempi, nè cangiar de ſtagioni vi dan penſiero alcuno, ma ſempre ſicura, & tranquilla vita liatamente vivere: O quanto, o quanto grande la Maeſtà di Dio in voi ſi ſcuopre, O quanto mirabile la potenza ſua; O quanto ſtupenda, & maravigliosa ſa ſua providenza; poi che frà tutte le creature dell' univerſo voi ſolo non ſentiſti il diluvio univerſale dell' acque; nè provaſti i danni, che egli face al mondo; e tutto queſto ch' io ho detto dovrebbe muovervi à lodar Dio, à ringratiare ſua divina maeſtà di tanti e coſi ſingolari beneficii, che vi ha fatti; di tante gratie, che vi ha conferite; di tanti favori, di che vi ha fatti degna; per tanto, ſe non potete ſnodar la lingua à ringratiar il voſtro Benefattore, & non ſapete con parole eſprimer le ſue lodi, fatele ſegno di riverenza almeno;

chi-

chinatevi al ſuo nome; moſtrate nel modo che potete ſembiante di gratitudine; rendetevi benevoli alla bontà ſua, in quel miglior modo che potete; O ſapete, non ſiate ſconoſcenti de ſuoi beneficii, & non ſiate ingrati de ſuoi favori. A queſto dire, O maraviglia grande, come ſi quelli peſci haveſſero havuto humano intelletto, e diſcorſo, con geſti di profonda Humiltà, con riverenti ſembianti di religione, chinarono la teſta, blandiro col corpo, quaſi approvando ciò che detto havea il benedetto padre St. Antonio.

" When the Heretics would not regard his Preach" ing, he betook himſelf to the Sea-ſhore, where
" the River Marecchia diſembogues itſelf into the " Adriatic. He here called the Fiſh together in the " Name of God, that they might hear his holy " Word. The Fiſh came ſwimming towards him
" in ſuch vaſt Shoals, both from the Sea and from " the River, that the Surface of the Water was " quite covered with their Multitudes. They quick" ly ranged themſelves, according to their ſeveral
" Species, into a very beautiful Congregation, and,
" like ſo many rational Creatures, preſented them-
" ſelves before him to hear the Word of God. St.
" Antonio was ſo ſtruck with the miraculous Obe" dience and Submiſſion of theſe poor Animals, that " he found a ſecret Sweetneſs diſtilling upon his " Soul, and at laſt addreſſed himſelf to them in the " following Words.

" Altho' the Infinite Power and Providence of " God (my dearly beloved Fiſh) diſcovers itſelf in " all the Works of his Creation, as in the Heavens,
" in the Sun, in the Moon, and in the Stars, in
" this lower World, in Man, and in other perfect
" Creatures; nevertheleſs the Goodneſs of the Divine
" Majeſty ſhines out in you more eminently, and " appears after a more particular manner, than in " any

" any other Created Beings. For notwithſtanding
" you are comprehended under the Name of Reptiles,
" partaking of a middle Nature between Stones and
" Beaſts, and impriſoned in the deep Abyſs of Wa" ters; notwithſtanding you are toſt among Billows,
" thrown up and down by Tempeſts, deaf to Hear" ing, dumb to Speech, and terrible to behold: not-
" withſtanding, I ſay, theſe natural Diſadvantages,
" the Divine Greatneſs ſhows itſelf in you after a " very wonderful manner. In you are ſeen the " mighty Myſteries of an Infinite Goodneſs. The " Holy Scripture has always made uſe of you, as " the Types and Shadows of ſome profound Sa" crament.

" Do you think that, without a Myſtery, the
" firſt Preſent that God Almighty made to Man,
" was of you, O ye Fiſhes? Do you think that,
" without a Myſtery, among all Creatures and Ani" mals which were appointed for Sacrifices, you only " were excepted, O ye Fiſhes? Do you think there " was nothing meant by our Saviour Chriſt, that
" next to the Paſchal Lamb he took ſo much Plea-
" ſure in the Food of you, O ye Fiſhes? Do you " think it was by mere Chance, that, when the " Redeemer of the World was to pay a Tribute to
" Cæſar, he thought fit to find it in the Mouth of " a Fiſh? Theſe are all of them ſo many Myſteries
" and Sacraments, that oblige you in a more parti" cular manner to the Praiſes of your Creator.

" It is from God, my beloved Fiſh, that you have " received Being, Life, Motion, and Senſe. It is
" he that has given you, in Compliance with your " natural Inclinations, the whole World of Waters
" for your Habitation. It is he that has furniſhed
" it with Lodgings, Chambers, Caverns, Grottoes,
" and ſuch magnificent Retirements as are not to be " met

" met with in the Seats of Kings, or in the Palaces of " Princes. You have the Water for your Dwelling,
" a clear tranſparent Element, brighter than Cry-
" ſtal; you can ſee from its deepeſt Bottom every " thing that paſſes on its Surface; you have the " Eyes of a Lynx, or of an Argus; you are guided
" by a ſecret and unerring Principle, delighting in " every thing that may be beneficial to you, and
" avoiding every thing that may be hurtful; you
" are carried on by a hidden Inſtinct to preſerve
" yourſelves, and to propagate your Species; you
" obey, in all your Actions, Works and Motions,
" the Dictates and Suggeſtions of Nature, without
" the leaſt Repugnancy or Contradiction.

" The Colds of Winter, and the Heats of Sum" mer, are equally incapable of moleſting you. A
" ſerene or a clouded Sky are indifferent to you.
" Let the Earth abound in Fruits, or be curſed with " Scarcity, it has no Influence on your Welfare.
" You live ſecure in Rains and Thunders, Light-
" nings and Earthquakes; you have no Concern in " the Bloſſoms of Spring, or in the Glowings of " Summer, in the Fruits of Autumn, or in the Froſts
" of Winter. You are not ſolicitous about Hours " or Days, Months or Years; the Variableneſs of " the Weather, or the Change of Seaſons.

" In what dreadful Majeſty, in what wonderful
" Power, in what amazing Providence, did God
" Almighty diſtinguiſh you among all the Species
" of Creatures that periſhed in the Univerſal Deluge!
" You only were inſenſible of the Miſchief that had " laid waſte the whole World.

" All this, as I have already told you, ought to " inſpire you with Gratitude and Praiſe towards the " Divine Majeſty, that has done ſo great things for
" you, granted you ſuch particular Graces and Pri" vileges,

" vileges, and heaped upon you ſo many diſtinguiſh-
" ing Favours. And ſince for all this you cannot " employ your Tongues in the Praiſes of your Be" nefactor, and are not provided with Words to ex-
" preſs your Gratitude; make at leaſt ſome Sign of " Reverence; bow yourſelves at his Name; give
" ſome ſhow of Gratitude, according to the beſt of " your Capacities; expreſs your Thanks in the " moſt becoming manner that you are able, and be
" not unmindful of all the Benefits he has beſtowed
" upon you.

" He had no ſooner done ſpeaking, but, behold
" a Miracle! The Fiſh, as tho' they had been en-
" dued with Reaſon, bowed down their Heads with
" all the Marks of a profound Humility and Devo" tion, moving their Bodies up and down with a " kind of Fondneſs, as approving what had been
" ſpoken by the bleſſed Father, St. Antonio. The " Legend adds, that after many Heretics, who were
" preſent at the Miracle, had been converted by it,
" the Saint gave his Benediction to the Fiſh, and diſ-
" miſſed them."

Several other the like Stories of St. Anthony are repreſented about his Monument in a very fine Baſſo Relievo.

I could not forbear ſetting down the Titles given to St. Anthony in one of the Tables that hangs up to him, as a Token of Gratitude from a poor Peaſant, who fancied the Saint had ſaved him from breaking his Neck.

To the thrice holy Anthony of Padua, Delig (whiter than the Lily) of the moſt holy Child Bethlehem, brighteſt Son of the Seraphs, higheſt Ro of ſacred Wiſdom, moſt powerful Worker of M racles, holy Diſpenſer of Death, wiſe Corrector of E ror, pious Deliverer from Calamity, powerful Cu of Leproſy, tremendous Driver-away of Devils, mo ready and moſt truſty Preſerver of the Sick and Shi wreck'd, Reſtorer of Limbs, Breaker of Bonds, ſt pendous Diſcoverer of loſt Things, great and wo derful Defender from all Dangers, his moſt pio (next to God and his Virgin Mother) Protector an Safe-Guard, &c.

The Cuſtom of hanging up Limbs in Wax, as we as Pictures, is certainly deriv'd from the old Heathen who uſed, upon their Recovery, to make an Offerin in Wood, Metal or Clay, of the Part that had bee afflicted with a Diſtemper, to the Deity that deliver ed them. I have ſeen, I believe, every Limb of human Body figured in Iron or Clay, which wer formerly made on this Occaſion, among the ſever Collection Collections of Antiquities that have been ſhewn me in Italy. The Church of St. Juſtina, deſign'd by Palladio, is the moſt handſom, luminous, diſencumber'd Building in the Inſide that I have ever ſeen, and is eſteem'd by many Artiſts one of the fineſt Works in Italy. The long Nef conſiſts of a Row of five Cupolas; the croſs one has on each ſide a ſingle Cupola deeper and broader than the others. The Martyrdom of St. Juſtina hangs over the Altar, and is a Piece of Paul Veroneſe. In the great Town-Hall of Padua ſtands a Stone ſuperſcrib'd Lapis Vituperii. Any Debtor that will ſwear himſelf not worth five Pound, and is ſet by the Bailiffs thrice with his bare Buttocks on this Stone in a full Hall, clears himſelf of any farther Proſecution from his Creditors; but this is a Puniſhment that no Body has ſubmitted to theſe four and twenty Years. The Univerſity of Padua is of late much more regular than it was formerly, tho' it is not yet ſafe walking the Streets after Sun-ſet. There is at Padua a Manufacture of Cloth, which has brought very great Revenues into the Republic. At preſent the Engliſh have not only gained upon the Venetians in the Levant, which uſed chiefly to be ſupplied from this Manufacture, but have great Quantities of their Cloth in Venice itſelf; few of the Nobility wearing any other ſort, notwithſtanding the Magiſtrate of the Pomps is obliged by his Office to ſee that no Body wears the Cloth of a Foreign Country. Our Merchants indeed are forced to make uſe of ſome Artifice to get theſe Prohibited Goods into Port. What they here ſhow for the Aſhes of Livy and Antenor is diſregarded by the beſt of their own Antiquaries.

The pretended Tomb of Antenor put me in mind of the latter part of Virgil's Deſcription, which gives us the Original of Padua.

Antenor

Antenor potuit mediis elapſus Achivis
Illyricos penetrare ſinus, atque intima tutus
Regna Liburnorum, & fontem ſuperare Timavi:
Unde per ora novem vaſto cum murmure montis
It mare præruptum, & pelago premit arva ſonanti
Hic tamen ille urbem Patavi, ſedeſque locavit
Teucrorum, et genti nomen dedit, armaque fixit
Troïa: nunc placidâ compoſtus pace quieſcit.
Æn. i. v. 24

Antenor, from the midſt of Grecian Hoſts,
Could paſs ſecure, and pierce th' Illyrian Coaſts;
Where rolling down the ſteep Timavus raves,
And through nine Channels diſembogues his Waves
At length he founded Paaua's happy Seat,
And gave his Trojans a ſecure Retreat;
There fix'd their Arms, and there renew'd their Names:
And there in quiet lies. —— Dryden.

From Padua I went down to the River Brent in the Ordinary Ferry, which brought me in a Day's time to Venice.

VENICE.

HAVING often heard Venice repreſented as one of the moſt defenſible Cities in the World, I took care to inform myſelf of the Particulars in which its Strength conſiſts. And theſe I find are chiefly owing to its advantageous Situation; for it has neither Rocks nor Fortifications near it, and yet is, perhaps, the moſt impregnable Town in Europe. It ſtands at leaſt four Miles from any part of the Terra Firma; nor are the Shallows that lie about it ever frozen hard enough to bring over an Army from the Land-ſide; the conſtant Flux and Reflux of the Sea, or the natural Mildneſs of the Climate, hindering the Ice from gathering to any Thickneſs; which is an Advantage the Hollanders want, when they have laid all their Country under Water. On the Side that is expoſed to the Adriatic, the Entrance is ſo difficult to hit, that they have marked it out with ſeveral Stakes driven into the Ground, which they would not fail to cut upon the firſt Approach of an Enemy's Fleet. For this Reaſon they have not fortified the little Iſlands, that lie at the Entrance, to the beſt Advantage, which might otherwiſe very eaſily command all the Paſſes that lead to the City from the Adriatic. Nor could an ordinary Fleet with Bomb-Veſſels, hope to ſucceed againſt a Place that has always in its Arſenal a conſiderable Number of Gallies and Men of War ready to put to

Sea

Sea on a very ſhort warning. If we could there fore ſuppoſe them block'd up on all ſides, by Power too ſtrong for them, both by Sea and Lan they would be able to defend themſelves againſt ever thing but Famine; and this would not be a litt mitigated by the great Quantities of Fiſh that the Seas abound with, and that may be taken up in th
midſt of their very Streets; which is ſuch a natur Magazine as few other Places can boaſt of.

Our Voyage-Writers will needs have this City i great Danger of being left, within an Age or tw on the Terra firma; and repreſent it in ſuch a man ner, as if the Sea was inſenſibly ſhrinking from it and retiring into its Channel. I asked ſeveral, an among the reſt Father Coronelli, the State's Geo grapher of the Truth of this Particular, and the all aſſur'd me that the Sea riſes as high as ever, tho' the great Heaps of Dirt it brings along with it are apt to choke up the Shallows; but that the are in no Danger of loſing the Benefit of their Situation, ſo long as they are at the Charge of re moving theſe Banks of Mud and Sand. One may ſee abundance of them above the Surface of the Water, ſcatter'd up and down like ſo many little Iſlands, when the Tide is low; and they are theſe that make the Entrance for Ships difficult to ſuch as are not uſed to them; for the deep Canals run between them, which the Venetians are at a great Expence to keep free and open.

This City ſtands very convenient for Commerce.
It has ſeveral navigable Rivers that run up into the Body of Italy, by which they might ſupply a great many Countries with Fiſh and other Commodities;
not to mention their Opportunities for the Levant, and each ſide of the Adriatic. But notwithſtanding theſe Conveniencies, their Trade is far from being

ing in a flouriſhing Condition for many Reaſons. The Duties are great that are laid on Merchandiſes. Their Nobles think it below their Quality to engage in Traffic. Their Merchants who are grown rich, and able to manage great Dealings, buy their Nobility, and generally give over Trade. Their Manufactures of Cloth, Glaſs, and Silk, formerly the beſt in Europe, are now excell'd by thoſe of other Countries. They are tenacious of old Laws and Cuſtoms to their great Prejudice, whereas a Trading Nation muſt be ſtill for new Changes and Expedients, as different Junctures and Emergencies riſe. The State is at preſent very ſenſible of this Decay in their Trade, and, as a Noble Venetian, who is ſtill a Merchant, told me, they will ſpeedily find out ſome Method to redreſs it; poſſibly by making a free Port, for they look with an evil Eye upon Leghorne, which draws to it moſt of the Veſſels bound for Italy. They have hitherto been ſo negligent in this particular, that many think the Great Duke's Gold has had no ſmall Influence in their Councils.

Venice has ſeveral Particulars, which are not to be found in other Cities, and is therefore very entertaining to a Traveller. It looks, at a diſtance, like a great Town half floated by a Deluge. There are Canals every where croſſing it, ſo that one may go to moſt Houſes either by Land or Water. This is a very great Convenience to the Inhabitants; for a Gondola with two Oars at Venice, is as magnificent as a Coach and ſix Horſes with a large Equipage, in another Country; beſides that it makes all other Carriages extremely cheap. The Streets are generally paved with Brick or Freeſtone, and always kept very neat; for there is no Carriage, not ſo much as a Chair, that paſſes thro' them. There is an innumerable multitude of very handſo Bridges, all of a ſingle Arch, and without any Fen on either ſide, which would be a great Inconv nience to a City leſs ſober than Venice. One wou indeed wonder that Drinking is ſo little in Veg among the Venetians, who are in a moiſt Air a a moderate Climate, and have no ſuch Diverſio as Bowling, Hunting, Walking, Riding, and t like Exerciſes to employ them without Doors. B as the Nobles are not to converſe too much wi Strangers, they are in no Danger of learning i and they are generally too diſtruſtful of one anoth for the Freedoms that are uſed in ſuch kind of Co verſations. There are many noble Palaces in V nice. Their Furniture is not commonly very ric if we except the Pictures, which are here in greate

is

plenty than in any other Place in Europe, from th Hands of the beſt Maſters of the Lombard School as Titian, Paul Veroneſe, and Tintoret. The la of theſe is in greater Eſteem at Venice than in othe Parts of Italy. The Rooms are generally hun with Gilt Leather, which they cover on extraord nary Occaſions with Tapeſtry, and Hangings o greater Value. The Flooring is a kind of Re Plaiſter made of Brick ground to Powder, and after wards work'd into Mortar. It is rubbed with Oil and makes a ſmooth, ſhining, and beautiful Surface Theſe Particularities are chiefly owing to the Moi ſture of the Air, which would have an ill Effect o
other kinds of Furniture, as it ſhows itſelf too vi ſibly in many of their fineſt Pictures. Tho' the Venetians are extremely jealous of any great Fame or Merit in a living Member of their Commonwealth, they never fail of giving a Man his due Praiſes, when they are in no danger of ſuffering from his Ambition. For this Reaſon, tho' there are

e a great many Monuments erected to ſuch as ave been Benefactors to the Republic, they are enerally put up after their Deaths. Among the many logiums that are given to the Doge, Piſauro, who ad been Ambaſſador in England, his Epitaph ſays, n Angliâ Jacobi Regis obitum mirâ calliditate cela- im mirâ ſagacitate rimatus priſcam benevolentiam rmavit. In England, having with wonderful Sa- acity diſcover'd the Death of King James, which as kept ſecret with wonderful Art, he confirm'd e ancient Friendſhip. The particular Palaces, hurches, and Pictures of Venice, are enumerated ſeveral little Books that may be bought on the lace, and have been faithfully tranſcribed by many oyage-Writers. When I was at Venice, they ere putting out very curious Stamps of the ſeveral difices which are moſt famous for their Beauty or agnificence. The Arſenal of Venice is an Iſland f about three Miles round. It contains all the tores and Proviſions for War, that are not actually mployed. There are Docks for their Gallies and en of War, moſt of them full, as well as Work- ouſes for all Land and Naval Preparations. That art of it, where the Arms are laid, makes a great ow, and was indeed very extraordinary about a undred Years ago; but at preſent a great part of s Furniture is grown uſeleſs. There ſeem to be lmoſt as many Suits of Armour as there are Guns. he Swords are old-faſhion'd and unwieldy in a ery great Number, and the Fire-Arms fitted with ocks of little Convenience in compariſon of thoſe hat are now in uſe. The Venetians pretend they ould ſet out, in caſe of great Neceſſity, thirty en of War, a hundred Gallies, and ten Galeaſſes, ho' I cannot conceive how they could man a Fleet f half the number. It was certainly a mighty Error in this State to affect ſo many Conqueſts o the Terra Firma, which has only ſerved to raiſe th Jealouſy of the Chriſtian Princes, and about thre hundred Years ago had like to have ended in th utter Extirpation of the Commonwealth; whereas had they apply'd themſelves, with the ſame Politic and Induſtry, to the Increaſe of their Strength b Sea, they might perhaps have had all the Iſlands o the Archipelago in their Hands, and, by Conſequence the greateſt Fleet, and the moſt Seamen of an other State in Europe. Beſides, that this would hav given no Jealouſy to the Princes their Neighbour who would have enjoy'd their own Dominions i Peace, and have been very well contented to hav ſeen ſo ſtrong a Bulwark againſt all the Forces an Invaſions of the Ottoman Empire.

This Republic has been much more powerfu than it is at preſent, as it is ſtill likelier to ſink tha increaſe in its Dominions. It is not impoſſible bu the Spaniard may, ſome time or other, demand o them Creme, Breſcia, and Bergame, which hav been torn from the Milaneſe; and in caſe a Wa ſhould ariſe upon it, and the Venetians loſe a ſingl Battle, they might be beaten off the Continent i a ſingle Summer, for their Fortifications are ver inconſiderable. On the other ſide the Venetians ar in continual Apprehenſions from the Turk, who wil certainly endeavour at the Recovery of the Morea as ſoon as the Ottoman Empire has recruited a littl of its ancient Strength. They are very ſenſible tha they had better have puſhed their Conqueſts on th other ſide of the Adriatic into Albania; for then their Territories would have lain together, and hav been nearer the Fountain head to have received Suc cours on occaſion; but the Venetians are under Ar ticles with the Emperor, to reſign into his Hand what-whatever they conquer of the Turkiſh Dominions, that has been formerly diſmembered from the Empire. And having already very much diſſatisfy'd him in the Frioul and Dalmatia, they dare not think of exaſperating him further. The Pope diſputes with them their Pretenſions to the Poleſin, as the Duke of Savoy lays an equal Claim to the Kingdom of Cyprus. 'Tis ſurpriſing to conſider with what Heats theſe two Powers have conteſted their Title to a Kingdom that is in the Hands of the Turk.

Among all theſe Difficulties the Republic will ſtill maintain itſelf, if Policy can prevail upon Force; for it is certain the Venetian Senate is one of the wiſeſt Councils in the World, tho' at the ſame time, if we believe the Reports of ſeveral that have been well verſed in their Conſtitution, a great part of their Politics is founded on Maxims, which others do not think conſiſtent with their Honour to put in practice. The Preſervation of the Republic is that to which all other Conſiderations ſubmit. To encourage Idleneſs and Luxury in the Nobility, to cheriſh Ignorance and Licentiouſneſs in the Clergy, to keep alive a continual Faction in the Common People, to connive at the Viciouſneſs and Debauchery of Convents, to breed Diſſenſions among the Nobles of the Terra Firma, to treat a brave Man with Scorn and Infamy, in ſhort, to ſtick at nothing for the Public Intereſt, are repreſented as the refined Arts of the Venetian Wiſdom.

Among all the Inſtances of their Politics, there is none more admirable than the great Secrecy that reigns in their public Councils. The Senate is generally as numerous as our Houſe of Commons, if we only reckon the ſitting Members, and yet carries its Reſolution ſo privately, that they are ſeldom known 'till they diſcover themſelves in the Execution. It is not many Years ſince they h before them a great Debate concerning the Puni

ment of one of their Admirals, which laſted Month together, and concluded in his Conde nation; yet there was none of his Friends, nor thoſe who had engaged warmly in his Defence, th gave him the leaſt Intimation of what was paſſi againſt him, 'till he was actually ſeiz'd, and in t
Hands of Juſtice.

The Noble Venetians think themſelves equal leaſt to the Electors of the Empire, and but o Degree below Kings; for which reaſon they ſeldo travel into Foreign Countries, where they mu undergo the Mortification of being treated like p vate Gentlemen: Yet it is obſerv'd of them, th they diſcharge themſelves with a great deal of De terity in ſuch Embaſſies and Treaties as are laid them by the Republic; for their whole Lives employed in Intrigues of State, and they natural give themſelves Airs of Kings and Princes, of whi
the Miniſters of other Nations are only the Repr ſentatives. Monſieur Amelot, reckons in his tim two thouſand five hundred Nobles that had Voic in the great Council; but at preſent, I am to there are not at moſt fifteen Hundred, notwith
ſtanding the Addition of many new Families ſinc that time. It is very ſtrange, that with this A vantage they are not able to keep up their Numbe conſidering that the Nobility ſpreads equally thr all the Brothers, and that ſo very few of them a deſtroyed by the Wars of the Republic. Wheth
this may be imputed to the Luxury of the Ven tians, or to the ordinary Celibacy of the young Brothers, or to the laſt Plague which ſwept awa man of them, I know not. They generally thru the Females of their Families into Convents, th

bette

etter to preſerve their Eſtates. This makes the enetian Nuns famous for the Liberties they allow emſelves. They have Operas within their own Valls, and often go out of their Bounds to meet eir Admirers, or they are very much miſrepre-nted. They have many of them their Lovers, at converſe with them daily at the Grate; and e very free to admit a Viſit from a Stranger. here is indeed one of the Cornara's, that not long go refus'd to ſee any under a Prince.

The Carnival of Venice is every where talk'd of. he great Diverſion of the Place at that time, as ell as on all other high Occaſions, is Masking. he Venetians, who are naturally Grave, love to ive into the Follies and Entertainments of ſuch eaſons, when diſguiſed in a falſe Perſonage. They e indeed under a neceſſity of finding out Diver-ons that may agree with the Nature of the Place, nd make ſome Amends for the Loſs of ſeveral leaſures which may be met with on the Conti-ent. Theſe Diſguiſes give Occaſion to abundance f Love-Adventures; for there is ſomething more triguing in the Amours of Venice, than in thoſe f other Countries; and I queſtion not but the cret Hiſtory of a Carnival would make a Collec-on of very diverting Novels. Operas are another eat Entertainment of this Seaſon. The Poetry of em is generally as exquiſitely ill, as the Muſic is od. The Arguments are often taken from ſome elebrated Action of the ancient Greeks or Romans, hich ſometimes looks ridiculous enough; for who an endure to hear one of the rough old Romans ueaking thro' the Mouth of an Eunuch, eſpecially hen they may chooſe a Subject out of Courts where unuchs are really Actors, or repreſent by them y of the ſoft Aſiatic Monarchs? The Opera that was moſt in Vogue during my Stay at Venice, w built on the following Subject. Cæſar and Scipio a Rivals for Cato's Daughter. Cæſar's firſt Wor bid his Soldiers fly, for the Enemies are upon them

Si leva Ceſare, e dice a Soldati, A' la fugga, A lo ſcampo. The Daughter gives the Preference t
Cæſar, which is made the Occaſion of Cato's Death Before he kills himſelf, you ſee him withdrawn int his Library, where, among his Books, I obſerve
the Titles of Plutarch and Taſſo. After a ſho Soliloquy, he ſtrikes himſelf with the Dagger that h holds in his Hand; but, being interrupted by one his Friends, he ſtabs him for his Pains, and by th Violence of the Blow unluckily breaks the Dagge on one of his Ribs, ſo that he is forced to diſpatc himſelf by tearing up his firſt Wound. This la Circumſtance puts me in mind of a Contrivance i the Opera of St. Angelo, that was acted at the ſam time. The King of the Play endeavours at a Rape but the Poet, being reſolved to ſave his Heroine Honour, has ſo ordered it, that the King alway acts with a great Caſe-Knife ſtuck in his Girdle which the Lady ſnatches from him in the Struggle and ſo defends herſelf.

The Italian Poets, beſides the celebrated Smoothneſs of their Tongue, have a particular Advantage above the Writers of other Nations, in the difference of their Poetical and Proſe Language. There are indeed Sets of Phraſes that in all Countries are peculiar to the Poets; but among the Italians there are not only Sentences, but a Multitude of particular Words, that never enter into common Diſcourſe.
They have ſuch a different Turn and Poliſhing for Poetical Uſe, that they drop ſeveral of their Letters and appear in another Form, when they come to be ranged in Verſe. For this Reaſon the Italian Opera ſeldom

ſeldom ſinks into a Poorneſs of Language, but, amidſt all the Meanneſs and Familiarity of the Thoughts, has ſomething beautiful and ſonorous in the Expreſſion. Without this natural Advantage of the Tongue, their preſent Poetry would appear wretchedly low and vulgar, notwithſtanding the many ſtrained Allegories that are ſo much in uſe among the Writers of this Nation. The Engliſh and French, who always uſe the ſame Words in Verſe as in ordinary Converſation, are forced to raiſe their Language with Metaphors and Figures, or, by the Pompouſneſs of the whole Phraſe, to wear off any Littleneſs that appears in the particular Parts that compoſe it. This makes our Blank Verſe, where there is no Rhyme to ſupport the Expreſſion, extremely difficult to ſuch as are not Maſters in the Tongue, eſpecially when they write on low Subjects; and 'tis probably for this Reaſon that Milton has made uſe of ſuch frequent Tranſpoſitions, Latiniſms, antiquated Words and Phraſes, that he might the better deviate from vulgar and ordinary Expreſſions.

The Comedies that I ſaw at Venice, or indeed in any other Part of Italy, are very indifferent, and more lewd than thoſe of other Countries. Their Poets have no Notion of gentile Comedy, and fall into the moſt filthy Double Meanings imaginable, when they have a mind to make their Audience merry. There is no Part generally ſo wretched as that of the Fine Gentleman, eſpecially when he converſes with his Miſtreſs; for then the whole Dialogue is an inſipid mixture of Pedantry and Romance. But 'tis no wonder that the Poets of ſo jealous and reſerved a Nation fail in ſuch Converſations on the Stage, as they have no Patterns of it in Nature. There are four ſtanding Characters which enter into every Piece that comes on the Stage, the Doctor, Harlequin, Pantalone, and Coviello. The Doctor's Character comprehends the whole Extent of a Pedant, that with a deep Voice, and a Magisterial Air, breaks in upon Conversation, and drives down all before him. Every thing he says is backed with Quotations out of Galen, Hippocrates, Plato, Virgil, or any other Author that rises uppermost, and all Answers from his Companions are looked upon as Impertinencies or Interruptions. Harlequin's Part is made up of Blunders and Absurdities: He is to mistake one Name for another, to forget his Errands, to stumble over Queens and to run his Head against every Post that stands in his way. This is all attended with something so comical in the Voice and Gestures, that a Man, who is sensible of the Folly of the Part, can hardly forbear being pleased with it. Pantalone is generally an old Cully, and Coviello a Sharper.

I have seen a Translation of the Cid acted at Bologna, which would never have taken, had they not found a Place in it for these Buffoons. All four of them appear in Masks that are made like the old Roman Personæ, as I shall have occasion to observe in another Place. The French and Italians have probably derived this Custom, of shewing some of their Characters in Masks, from the Greek and Roman Theatre. The old Vatican Terence has, at the Head of every Scene, the Figures of all the Persons that are concerned in it, with the particular Disguises in which they acted; and I remember to have seen in the Villa Mattheio an antique Statue mask'd, which was perhaps design'd for Gnatho in the Eunuch; for it agrees exactly with the Figure he makes in the Vatican Manuscript. One would wonder indeed how so polite a People as the ancient Romans and Athenians should not look on these borrowed Faces as unnatural.

natural. They might do very well for a Cyclops, or a Satyr that can have no Reſemblance in Human Features; but for a Flatterer, a Miſer, or the like Characters, which abound in our own Species, nothing is more ridiculous than to repreſent their Looks by a painted Vizard. In Perſons of this nature the Turns and Motions of the Face are often as agreeable as any Part of the Action. Could we ſuppoſe that a Mask repreſented never ſo naturally the general Humour of a Character, it can never ſuit with the Variety of Paſſions that are incident to every ſingle Perſon in the whole courſe of a Play. The Grimace may be proper on ſome Occaſions, but is too ſteady to agree with all. The Rabble indeed are generally pleaſed at the firſt Entry of a Diſguiſe; but the Jeſt grows cold even with them too when it comes on the Stage in a ſecond Scene.

Since I am on this Subject, I cannot forbear mentioning a Cuſtom at Venice, which they tell me is particular to the Common People of this Country, of ſinging Stanzas out of Taſſo. They are ſet to a pretty ſolemn Tune, and when one begins in any part of the Poet, it is odds but he will be anſwered by ſome body elſe that overhears him: So that ſometimes you have Ten or a Dozen in the Neighbourhood of one another, taking Verſe after Verſe, and running on with the Poem as far as their Memories will carry them.

On Holy Thurſday, among the ſeveral Shows that are yearly exhibited, I ſaw one that is odd enough, and particular to the Venetians. There is a Set of Artiſans, who, by the help of ſeveral Poles, which they lay acroſs each others Shoulders, build themſelves up into a kind of Pyramid; ſo that you ſee a Pile of Men in the Air of four or five Rows riſing one above another. The Weight is ſo equally diſtributed, that every Man is very well able to bear his Part of it, the Stories, if I may ſo call them, growing leſs and leſs as they advance higher and higher. A little Boy repreſents the Point of the Pyramid, who, after a ſhort Space, leaps off, with a great deal of Dexterity, into the Arms of one that catches him at the Bottom. In the ſame manner the whole Building falls to pieces. I have been the more particular in this, becauſe it explains the following Verſes of Claudian, which ſhow that the Venetians are not the Inventors of this Trick.

Vel qui more avium ſeſe jaculantur in auras,
Corporaque ædificant, celeri creſcentia nexu,
Quorum compoſitam puer augmentatus in arcem
Emicat, et vinctus plantæ, vel cruribus hærens, Pendula librato figit veſtigia ſaltu.

Claud. de Pr. & Olyb. Conſ.

Men, pil'd on Men, with active Leaps ariſe,
And build the breathing Fabric to the Skies;
Points the tall Pyramid, and crowns the Show.

Tho' we meet with the Veneti in the old Poets, the City of Venice is too modern to find a Place among them. Sannazarius's Epigram is too well known to be inſerted. The ſame Poet has celebrated this City in two other Places of his Poems.

——— Quis Venetæ miracula proferat urbis,
Una inſtar magni quæ ſimul Orbis habet?
Salve Italûm Regina, altæ pulcherrima Romæ
Æmula, quæ terris, quæ dominaris aquis!
Tu tibi vel Reges cives facis, O Decus, O Lux
Auſoniæ, per quam libera turba ſumus,

Per

Per quam Barbaries nobis non imperat, et Sol
Exoriens noſtro clariùs orbe nitet! Lib. iii. Eleg. 1.

Venetia ſtands with endleſs Beauties crown'd,
And as a World within herſelf is found.
Hail Queen of Italy! for Years to come
The mighty Rival of immortal Rome!
Nations and Seas are in thy States enroll'd,
And Kings among thy Citizens are told.
Auſonia's brighteſt Ornament! by Thee
She ſits a Sov'reign, Unenſlav'd and Free;
By Thee, the rude Barbarian chas'd away,
The Riſing Sun chears with a purer Ray
Our Weſtern World, and doubly gilds the Day.

Nec Tu ſemper eris, quæ ſeptem amplecteris arces,
Nec Tu, quæ mediis æmula ſurgis aquis.
Lib. ii. Eleg. 1.

Thou too ſhalt fall by Time or barb'rous Foes,
Whoſe circling Walls the Sev'n fam'd Hills incloſe;
And Thou, whoſe Rival Tow'rs invade the Skies,
And, from amidſt the Waves, with equal Glory riſe.

FERRARA,

RAVENNA,

RIMINI.

AT Venice I took a Bark for Ferrara, and in my way thither saw several Mouths of the Po, by which it empties itself into the Adriatic,

——— Quo non alius per pinguia culta
In mare purpureum violentior influit amnis.
Virg. Georg. iv. v. 372.

which is true, if understood only of the Rivers of Italy.

Lucan's Description of the Po would have been very beautiful, had he known when to have given over.

Quoque magis nullum tellus se solvit in amnem
Eridanus, fractasque evolvit in æquora sylvas,
Hesperiamque exhaurit aquis: hunc fabula primum
Populeâ fluvium ripas umbrâsse coronâ:
Cumque diem pronum transverso limite ducens
Succendit Phaëton flagrantibus æthera loris;

Gurgitibus

Surgitibus raptis, penitùs tellure peruſtâ,
Hunc habuiſſe pares Phœbeis ignibus undas.
Lib. ii. v. 408.

The Po, that, ruſhing with uncommon Force,
O'er-ſets whole Woods in its tumultuous Courſe,
And, riſing from Heſperia's watry Veins,
Th' exhauſted Land of all its Moiſture drains.
The Po, as ſings the Fable, firſt convey'd
Its wand'ring Current through a Poplar Shade:
For when young Phaëton miſtook his way,
Loſt and confounded in the Blaze of Day,
This River, with ſurviving Streams ſupply'd,
When all the reſt of the whole Earth were dry'd,
And Nature's ſelf lay ready to expire,
Quench'd the dire Flame that ſet the World on Fire.

The Poet's Reflexions follow.

Non minor hic Nilo, ſi non per plana jacentis Ægypti Libycas Nilus ſtagnaret arenas.
Non minor hic Iſtro, niſi quod dum permeat orbem
Iſter, caſuros in quælibet æquora fontes
Accipit, & Scythicas exit non ſolus in undas.
Ib. v. 416.

Nor would the Nile more watry Stores contain,
But that he ſtagnates on the Libyan Plain:
Nor would the Danube run with greater Force,
But that he gathers in his tedious Courſe
Ten thouſand Streams, and, ſwelling as he flows,
In Scythian Seas the Glut of Rivers throws.

That is, ſays Scaliger, the Eridanus would be bigger than the Nile and Danube, if the Nile and Danube were not bigger than the Eridanus. What makes makes the Poet's Remark the more improper, th very Reaſon why the Danube is greater than th Po, as he aſſigns it, is that which really makes th Po as great as it is; for, before its Fall into th Gulf, it receives into its Channel the moſt conſi derable Rivers of Piedmont, Milan, and the reſt o Lombardy.

From Venice to Ancona the Tide comes in ver ſenſibly at its ſtated Periods, but riſes more or le in proportion as it advances nearer the Head of th Gulf. Lucan has run out of his way to deſcribe th Phænomenon, which is indeed very extraordinary t thoſe who lie out of the Neighbourhood of the gre Ocean, and, according to his uſual Cuſtom, lets hi Poem ſtand ſtill that he may give way to his ow Reflexions.

Quáque jacet littus dubium, quod terra fretumque
Vendicat alternis vicibus, cùm funditur ingens
Oceanus, vel cùm refugis ſe fluctibus aufert.
Ventus ab extremo pelagus ſic axe volutet
Deſtituatque ferens: an ſidere mota ſecundo
Tethyos unda vagæ Lunaribus æſtuet horis:
Flammiger an Titan, ut alentes hauriat undas,
Erigat Oceanum, fluctuſque ad ſidera tollat;
Quærite quos agitat mundi labor: at mihi ſemper
Tu quæcunque moves tam crebros cauſa meatus,
Ut ſuperi voluere, lates. ———

Lib. i. v. 409

Waſh'd with ſucceſſive Seas, the doubtful Strand
By turns is Ocean, and by turns is Land:
Whether the Winds in diſtant Regions blow,
Moving the World of Waters to and fro;
Or waining Moons their ſettled Periods keep
To ſwell the Billows, and ferment the Deep;

O

Or the tir'd Sun, his Vigour to ſupply,
Raiſes the floating Mountains to the Sky,
And ſlakes his Thirſt within the mighty Tide,
Do you who ſtudy Nature's Works decide:
Whilſt I the dark myſterious Cauſe admire,
Nor, into what the Gods conceal, preſumptuouſly inquire.

At Ferrara I met nothing extraordinary. The Town is very large, but extremely thin of People. It has a Citadel, and ſomething like a Fortification running round it, but ſo large that it requires more Soldiers to defend it, than the Pope has in his whole Dominions. The Streets are as beautiful as any I have ſeen, in their Length, Breadth and Regularity. The Benedictines have the fineſt Convent of the Place. They ſhow'd us in the Church Arioſto's Monument: His Epitaph ſays, he was Nobilitate Generis atque Animi clarus, in rebus publicis adminiſtrandis, in regendis populis, in graviſſimis & ſummis Pontificis legationibus prudentiâ, conſilio, eloquentiâ præſtantiſſimus i. e. Noble both in Birth and Mind, and moſt conſpicuous for Prudence, Counſel, and Eloquence, in adminiſtring the Affairs of the Public, and diſcharging the moſt important Embaſſies from the Pope.

I came down a Branch of the Po, as far as Alberto, within ten Miles of Ravenna. All this Space lies miſerably uncultivated 'till you come near Ravenna, where the Soil is made extremely fruitful, and ſhows what much of the reſt might be, were there Hands enough to manage it to the beſt Advantage. It is now on both ſides the Road very marſhy, and generally overgrown with Ruſhes, which made me fancy it was once floated by the Sea, that lies within four Miles of it. Nor could I in the leaſt doubt it when I ſaw

ſtance from the Adriatic, tho' it was formerly t moſt famous of all the Roman Ports.

One may gueſs at its ancient Situation fro Martial's

Meliúſque Ranæ garriant Ravennates. Lib. iii. Epig

Ravenna's Frogs in better Muſic croak.

And the Deſcription that Silius Italicus has given of it.

Quáque gravi remo limoſis ſegniter undis
Lenta paludoſæ perſcindunt ſtagna Ravennæ. Lib. vi

Incumber'd in the Mud, their Oars divide
With heavy Strokes the thick unwieldy Tide.

Accordingly the old Geographers repreſent it ſituated among Marſhes and Shallows. The Place which is ſhown for the Haven, is on a level wit
the Town, and has probably been ſtopped up by th great Heaps of Dirt that the Sea has thrown into it for all the Soil on that ſide of Ravenna has been le there inſenſibly by the Sea's diſcharging itſelf upo it for many Ages. The Ground muſt have bee formerly much lower, for otherwiſe the Town woul have lain under Water. The Remains of the Pharos, that ſtand about three Miles from the Sea, an two from the Town, have their Foundations covere with Earth for ſome Yards, as they told me, which notwithſtanding are upon a level with the Fields that lie about them, tho' 'tis probable they took th Advantage of a riſing Ground to ſet it upon. It wa
a ſquare Tower, of about twelve Yards in Breadth,

s appears by that part of it which yet remains en-re; ſo that its Height muſt have been very conſi-erable to have preſerved a Proportion. It is made n the Form of the Venetian Campanello, and is pro-ably the high Tower mentioned by Pliny, Lib. 36. ap. 12.

On the ſide of the Town, where the Sea is ſup-poſed to have lain formerly, there is now a little Church called the Rotonda. At the Entrance of t are two Stones, the one with an Inſcription in Gothic Characters, that has nothing in it remark-ble; the other is a ſquare Piece of Marble, that by he Inſcription appears ancient, and by the Orna-ments about it ſhows itſelf to have been a little Pa-gan Monument of two Perſons who were ſhip-wreck'd, perhaps in the Place where now their Mo-nument ſtands. The firſt Line and a half, that tells their Names and Families in Proſe, is not legible; he reſt run thus:

——— Raniæ domus hos produxit alumnos,
Libertatis opus contulit una dies.
Naufraga mors pariter rapuit quos junxerat antè,
Et duplices luctus mors periniqua dedit.

Both with the ſame indulgent Maſter bleſs'd,
On the ſame Day their Liberty poſſeſs'd:
A Shipwreck ſlew whom it had join'd before,
And left their common Friends their Fun'rals to deplore.

There is a turn in the third Verſe, that we loſe by not knowing the Circumſtances of their Sto-ry. It was the Naufraga mors which deſtroyed them, as it had formerly united them; what this Union

Union was is expreſs'd in the preceding Verſe, b their both having been made Free-men on the ſam
Day. If therefore we ſuppoſe they had been fo merly ſhipwreck'd with their Maſter, and th
he made them Free at the ſame time, the Ep
gram is unriddled. Nor is this Interpretation pe haps ſo forc'd as it may ſeem at firſt ſight, ſinc
it was the Cuſtom of the Maſters, a little befor their Death, to give their Slaves their Freedom, they had deſerv'd it at their Hands; and it is na tural enough to ſuppoſe one, involved in a com mon Shipwreck, would give ſuch of his Slaves thei Liberty, as ſhould have the good Luck to ſave them ſelves. The Chancel of this Church is vaulted wit a ſingle Stone of four Foot in thickneſs, and hundred and fourteen in Circumference. Ther ſtood, on the outſide of this little Cupola, a gre
Tomb of Porphyry, and the Statues of the twelv Apoſtles; but in the War that Louis the Twelft made on Italy, the Tomb was broken in pieces b a Cannon Ball. It was, perhaps, the ſame Blo that made the Flaw in the Cupola, tho' the In habitants ſay it was crack'd by Thunder, that de ſtroyed a Son of one of their Gothic Princes, wh had taken ſhelter under it, as having been foretol what kind of Death he was to die. I asked a Abbot, that was in the Church, what was th
Name of this Gothic Prince, who, after a little Re collection, anſwered me, that he could not tell pre ciſely, but that he thought it was one Julius Ca
ſar. There is a Convent of Theatins, where the ſhow a little Window in the Church, thro' which the Holy Ghoſt is ſaid to have entered in the Shape of a Dove, and to have ſettled on one of the Can didates for the Biſhoprick. The Dove is repre ſented

nted in the Window, and in ſeveral Places of he Church, and is in great Reputation all over taly. I ſhould not indeed think it impoſſible for a igeon to fly in accidentally thro' the Roof, where ey ſtill keep the Hole open, and by its fluttering ver ſuch a particular Place, to give ſo ſuperſtitious n Aſſembly an Occaſion of favouring a Competi- or, eſpecially if he had many Friends among the lectors that would make a politic Uſe of ſuch an ccident: But they pretend the Miracle has hap- en'd more than once. Among the Pictures of ſeve- al famous Men of their Order, there is one with his Inſcription. P. D. Thomas Gouldvellus Ep. Aſſ^in Trid^no conſilio contra Hæreticos, & in Anglia contra Eliſabet. Fidei Confeſſor conſpicuus. The Sta- ue of Alexander the Seventh ſtands in the large Square of the Town; it is caſt in Braſs, and has he Poſture that is always given the Figure of a Pope; an Arm extended, and bleſſing the People. In another Square on a high Pillar is ſet the Sta- tue of the bleſſed Virgin, arrayed like a Queen, with a Scepter in her Hand, and a Crown upon her Head, for having deliver'd the Town from a raging Peſtilence. The Cuſtom of crowning the Holy Virgin is ſo much in vogue among the Italians, that one often ſees in their Churches a little Tinſel Crown, or perhaps a circle of Stars glued to the Canvas over the Head of the Figure, which ſome- times ſpoils a good Picture. In the Convent of Be- nedictines, I ſaw three huge Cheſts of Marble, with no Inſcription on them that I could find, tho' they are ſaid to contain the Aſhes of Valentinian, Hono- rius, and his Siſter Placidia. From Ravenna I came to Rimini, having paſſed the Rubicon by the way. This River is not ſo very contemptible as it is generally repreſented, and was much increaſed by the melting of the Snows when Cæſar paſſed it, according to Lucan.

is

Fonte cadit modico parviſque impellitur undis
Puniceus Rubicon, cùm fervida canduit æſtas;
Perque imas ſerpit valles, & Gallica certus
Limes ab Auſoniis diſterminat arva colonis:
Tunc vires præbebat hyems, atque auxerat undas
Tertia jam gravido pluvialis Cynthia cornu,
Et madidis Euri reſolutæ flatibus Alpes. Lib. i. v. 21

While Summer laſts, the Streams of Rubicon
From their ſpent Source in a ſmall Current run;
Hid in the winding Vales they gently glide,
And Italy from neighb'ring Gaul divide;
But now, with Winter Storms increas'd, they roſe
By watry Moons produc'd, and Alpine Snows,
That melting on the hoary Mountains lay,
And in warm Eaſtern Winds diſſolv'd away.

This River is now called Piſatello.

Rimini has nothing modern to boaſt of. Its Antiquities are as follow: A Marble Bridge of five Arches, built by Auguſtus and Tiberius, for the Inſcription is ſtill legible, tho' not rightly tranſcrib'd by Gruter. A triumphal Arch raiſed by Auguſtus, which makes a noble Gate to the Town, tho' part of it is ruined. The Ruins of an Amphitheatre. The Suggeſtum, on which it is ſaid that Julius Cæſar harangued his Army after having paſſed the Rubicon. I muſt confeſs I can by no means look on this laſt as Authentic: It is built of hewn Stone, like the Pedeſtal of a Pillar, but ſomething higher than ordinary, and is but juſt broad enough for r one Man to ſtand upon it. On the contrary, the ncient Suggeſtums, as I have often obſerved on Me- ls, as well as on Conſtantine's Arch, were made Wood like a little kind of Stage; for the Heads the Nails are ſometimes repreſented, that are ſup- oſed to have faſtened the Boards together. We of- n ſee on them the Emperor, and two or three Ge- eral Officers, ſometimes ſitting, and ſometimes anding, as they made Speeches, or diſtributed a ongiary to the Soldiers or People. They were pro- ably always in readineſs, and carried among the aggage of the Army, whereas this at Rimini muſt ave been built on the Place, and required ſome time efore it could be finiſhed.

If

If the Obſervation I have here made is juſt, it may ſerve as a Confirmation to the learned Fabretti's Conjecture on Trajan's Pillar; who ſuppoſes, I think, with a great deal of Reaſon, that the Camps, Intrenchments, and other Works of the

he ſame Nature, which are cut out as if they had een made of Brick or hewn Stone, were in reality nly of Earth, Turf, or the like Materials; for there re on the Pillar ſome of theſe Suggeſtums, which are gured like thoſe on Medals, with only this Difference, hat they ſeem built with Brick or Free-ſtone. At welve Miles diſtance from Rimini ſtands the little epublic of St. Marino, which I could not forbear iſiting, tho' it lies out of the common Tour of Travellers, and has exceſſively bad Ways to it. I hall here give a particular Account of it, becauſe I now of no body elſe that has done it. One may, t leaſt, have the Pleaſure of ſeeing in it ſomething nore ſingular than can be found in great Governnents, and form from it an Idea of Venice in its firſt Beginnings, when it had only a few Heaps of Earth or its Dominions, or of Rome itſelf, when it had et cover'd but one of its ſeven Hills.

THE

THE REPUBLIC OF St. MARINO.

THE Town and Republic of St. Marino ſtands on the Top of a very high and craggy Mountain. It is generally hid among the Clouds, and lay under Snow when I ſaw it, tho' it was clear and warm Weather in all the Country about it. There is not a Spring or Fountain, that I could hear of in the whole Dominions, but they are always well provided with huge Ciſterns and Reſervoirs of Rain and Snow-water. The Wine that grows on the ſides of their Mountain is extraordinary good, and I think much better than any I met with on the cold ſide of the Apennines. This put me in mind of their Cellars, which have moſt of 'em a natural Advantage that renders 'em extremely cool in the hotteſt Seaſons; for they have generally in the Sides of them deep Holes that run into the Hollow of the Hill, from whence there conſtantly iſſues a breathing kind of Vapours, ſo very chilling in the Summer-time, that a Man can ſcarce ſuffer his Hand in the Wind of it.

The

This Mountain, and a few neighbouring Hillocks at lie ſcatter'd about the Bottom of it, is the whole rcuit of theſe Dominions. They have, what they ll, three Caſtles, three Convents, and five Churches,
d reckon about five thouſand Souls in their Com-unity. The Inhabitants, as well as the Hiſtorians, no mention this little Republic, give the following ccount of its Original. St. Marino was its Foun-r, a Dalmatian by Birth, and by Trade a Maſon.
e was employed above thirteen hundred Years ago
the Reparation of Rimini, and, after he had fi-h'd his Work, retired to this ſolitary Mountain, finding it very proper for the Life of the Hermit hich he led in the greateſt Rigours and Auſterities Religion. He had not been here long before he rought a reputed Miracle, which, join'd with his traordinary Sanctity, gain'd him ſo great an teem, that the Princeſs of the Country made him reſent of the Mountain to diſpoſe of it at his own iſcretion. His Reputation quickly peopled it, and ve Riſe to the Republic which calls itſelf after s Name. So that the Commonwealth of Marino ay boaſt at leaſt of a nobler Original than that of me, the one having been at firſt an Aſylum for obbers and Murderers, and the other a Reſort of rſons eminent for their Piety and Devotion. The ſt of their Churches is dedicated to the Saint, and otection the long Duration of their State, and look him as the greateſt Saint next the Bleſſed Virgin.

This petty Republic has now lasted thirteen hundred Years, while all the other States of Italy have several times changed their Masters and Forms of Government. Their whole History is compris'd in two Purchases, which they made of a neighbouring Prince, and in a War in which they assisted the Pope against a Lord of Rimini. In the Year 1100 they bought a Castle in the Neighbourhood, as they did another in the Year 1170. The Papers of the Conditions are preserv'd in their Archives, where 'tis very remarkable that the Name of the Agent for the Commonwealth, of the Seller, of the Notary and the Witnesses, are the same in both the Instruments, tho' drawn up at seventy Years distance from each other. Nor can it be any Mistake in the Date because the Popes and Emperors Names, with the Year of their respective Reigns, are both punctually set down. About two hundred and ninety Years after this, they assisted Pope Pius the Second against one of the Malatesta's, who was then Lord of Rimini; and when they had helped to conquer him received from the Pope, as a Reward for their Assistance, four little Castles. This they represent as the flourishing Time of the Commonwealth, when their Dominions reach'd half way up a neighbouring Hill; but at present they are reduced to their old Extent. They would probably sell their Liberty as dear as they could to any that attacked them; for there is but one Road by which to climb up to them, and they have a very severe Law against any of their own Body that enters the Town by another Path lest any new one should be worn on the Sides of the Mountain. All that are capable of bearing Arms are exercis'd, and ready at a Moment's Call.

The Sovereign Power of the Republic was lodged originally in what they call the Arengo, a great Council in which every Houſe had its Repreſentative. But becauſe they found too much Confuſion in ſuch a multitude of Stateſmen, they devolv'd their whole Authority into the Hands of the Council of Sixty. The Arengo however is ſtill called together in Caſes of extraordinary Importance; and if, after due Summons, any Member abſents himſelf, he is to be fin'd to the value of about a Peny Engliſh, which the Statue ſays he ſhall pay, Sine aliquâ diminutione aut gratiâ. i. e. Without any Abatement or Favour. In the ordinary Courſe of Government, the Council of Sixty (which, notwithſtanding the Name, conſiſts but of forty Perſons) has in its Hands the Adminiſtration of Affairs, and is made up half out of the Noble Families, and half out of the Plebeian. They decide all by Baloting, are not admitted 'till five and twenty Years old, and chooſe the Officers of the Commonwealth.

Thus far they agree with the Great Council of Venice; but their Power is much more extended; for no Sentence can ſtand that is not confirm'd by two Thirds of this Council. Beſides, that no Son can be admitted into it during the Life of his Father, nor two be in it of the ſame Family, nor any enter but by Election. The chief Officers of the Commonwealth are the two Capitaneos, who have ſuch a Power as the old Roman Conſuls had, but are choſen every ſix Months. I talk'd with ſome that had been Capitaneos ſix or ſeven times, tho' the Office is never to be continu'd to the ſame Perſons twice ſucceſſively. The third Officer is the Commiſſary, who judges in all Civil and Criminal Matters. But becauſe the many Alliances, Friendſhips, and Intermarriages, as well as the Perſonal Feuds and Animoſities that happen among ſo ſmall a People, might obſtruct the Courſe of Juſtice, if one of their own Number had the Diſtribution of it, they have always a Foreigner for this Employ, whom they chooſe for three Years and maintain out of the Public Stock. He muſt be a Doctor of Law, and a Man of known Integrity. He is join'd in Commiſſion with the Capitaneos, and acts ſomething like the Recorder of London under the Lord Mayor. The Commonwealth of Genoa was forc'd to make uſe of a foreign Judge for many Years whilſt their Republic was torn into the Diviſions of Guelphs and Gibelines. The fourth Man in the State is the Phyſician, who muſt likewiſe be a Stranger and is maintain'd by a public Salary. He is oblig'd to keep a Horſe, to viſit the Sick, and to inſpect all Drugs that are imported. He muſt be at leaſt thirty-five Years old, a Doctor of the Faculty, and eminent for his Religion and Honeſty; that his Raſhneſs or Ignorance may not unpeople the Commonwealth. And that they may not ſuffer long under any bad Choice, he is elected only for three Years. The preſent Phyſician is a very underſtanding Man, and well read in our Countrymen, Harvey, Willis, Sydenham, &c. He has been continued for ſome time among 'em, and they ſay the Commonwealth thrives under his Hands. Another Perſon, who makes no ordinary Figure in the Republic, is the School-Maſter. I ſcarce met with any in the Place that had not ſome Tincture of Learning. I had the Peruſal of a Latin Book in Folio intitled, Statuta Illuſtriſſimæ Reipublicæ Sancti Marini, printed at Rimini by order of the Commonwealth. The Chapter on the public Miniſters ſays, that when an Ambaſſador is diſpatch'd from the Republic to any Foreign State, he ſhall be allow'd, out of the Treaſury, to the Value of a Shilling a Day. The People are eſteem'd very honeſt and rigorous in the Execution of Juſtice, and ſeem to live more happy and contented among their Rocks and Snows, than others of the Italian alians do in the pleaſanteſt Valleys of the World. Nothing indeed can be a greater inſtance of the natural Love that Mankind has for Liberty, and of their Averſion to Arbitrary Government, than ſuch a ſavage Mountain cover'd with People, and the Campania of Rome, which lies in the ſame County, almoſt deſtitute of Inhabitants.

Peſaro, Fano, Senigallia, Ancona, Loretto, &c.

To ROME.

FROM Rimini to Loretto the Towns of Note are Peſaro, Fano, Senigallia and Ancona. Fano receiv'd its Name from the Fane or Temple of Fortune that ſtood in it. One may ſtill ſee the Triumphal Arch erected there to Auguſtus: It is indeed very much defaced by Time; but the Plan of it, as it ſtood intire with all its Inſcriptions, is neatly cut upon the Wall of a neighbouring Building. In each of theſe Towns is a beautiful Marble Fountain, where the Water runs continually thro' ſeveral little Spouts, which look very refreſhing in theſe hot Countries, and gives a great Coolneſs to the Air about them. That of Peſaro is handſomly deſigned. Ancona is much the moſt conſiderable of theſe Towns. It ſtands on a Promontory, and looks more beautiful at a diſtance than when you are in it. The Port was made by Trajan, for which he has a Triumphal Arch erected to him by the Sea-ſide. The Marble of this Arch looks very white and freſh, as being expoſed to the

Wind

Winds and ſalt Sea-vapours, that by continually fretting it preſerves itſelf from that mouldy Colour, which others of the ſame Materials have contracted. Tho' the Italians and Voyage-Writers call theſe of Rimini, Fano, and Ancona, Triumphal Arches, there was probably ſome Diſtinction made among the Romans between ſuch honorary Arches erected to Emperors, and thoſe that were rais'd to them on account of a Victory, which are properly Triumphal Arches. This at Ancona was an Inſtance of Gratitude to Trajan for the Port he had made there, as the two others I have mention'd were probably for ſome Reaſon of the ſame nature. One may however obſerve the Wiſdom of the ancient Romans, who, to encourage their Emperors in their Inclination of doing good to their Country, gave the ſame Honours to the great Actions of Peace, which turn'd to the Advantage of the Public, as to thoſe of War. This is very remarkable in the Medals that were ſtamp'd on the ſame Occaſions. I remember to have ſeen one of Galba's, with a Triumphal Arch on the Reverſe, that was made by the Senate's Order for his having remitted a Tax. R. XXXX. REMISSA. S. C. The Medal, which was made for Trajan, in Remembrance of his Beneficence to Ancona, is very common. The Reverſe has on it a Port with a Chain running acroſs it, and betwixt them both a Boat, with this Inſcription, S. P. Q. R. OPTIMO PRINCIPI. S. C.

I know, Fabretti would fain aſcribe this Medal to another Occaſion; but Bellorio, in his Additions to Angeloni, has ſufficiently refuted all he ſays on that Subject.

At Loretto I inquir'd for the Engliſh Jeſuits Lodgings, and on the Stair-Caſe that leads to 'em I ſaw ſeveral Pictures of ſuch as had been Executed

cuted in England, as the two Garnets, Old-Corn, and others, to the number of thirty. Whatever were their Crimes, the Inſcription ſays they ſuffer'd for their Religion, and ſome of 'em are repreſented lying under ſuch Tortures as are not in uſe among us. The Martyrs of 1679 are ſet by themſelves, with a Knife ſtuck in the Boſom of each Figure, to ſignify that they were quarter'd.

The Riches in the Holy Houſe and Treaſury are ſurpriſingly great, and as much ſurpaſs'd my Expectation as other Sights have generally fallen ſhort of it. Silver can ſcarce find an Admiſſion, and Gold itſelf looks but poorly among ſuch an incredible Number of precious Stones. There will be, in a few Ages more, the Jewels of the greateſt Value in Europe, if the Devotion of its Princes continues in its preſent Fervour. The laſt Offering was made by the Queen Dowager of Poland, and coſt her 18000 Crowns. Some have wonder'd that the Turk never attacks this Treaſury, ſince it lies ſo near the Sea-ſhore, and is ſo weakly guarded. But beſides that he has attempted it formerly with no Succeſs, it is certain the Venetians keep too watchful an Eye over his Motions at preſent, and would never ſuffer him to enter the Adriatic. It would indeed be an eaſy thing for a Chriſtian Prince to ſurpriſe it, who has Ships ſtill paſſing to and fro without Suſpicion, eſpecially if he had a Party in the Town, diſguis'd like Pilgrims to ſecure a Gate for him; for there have been ſometimes to the Number of 100000 in a Day's time, as it is generally reported. But 'tis probable the Veneration for the Holy Houſe, and the Horror of an Action that would be reſented by all the Catholic Princes of Europe, will be as great a Security to the Place as the ſtrongeſt Fortification. It is indeed an amazing thing to ſee ſuch a prodigious Quantity of Riches lie dead, and untouch'd in the midſt of ſo much Poverty and Miſery as reign on all Sides of 'em. There is no queſtion, however, but the Pope would make uſe of theſe Treaſures in caſe of any great Calamity that ſhould endanger the Holy See; as an unfortunate War with the Turk, or a powerful League among the Proteſtants. For I can't but look on thoſe vaſt Heaps of Wealth, that are amaſs'd together in ſo many religious Places of Italy, as the hidden Reſerves and Magazines of the Church, that ſhe would open on any preſſing Occaſion for her laſt Defence and Preſervation. If theſe Riches were all turn'd into current Coin, and employ'd in Commerce, they would make Italy the moſt flouriſhing Country in Europe. The Caſe of the Holy Houſe is nobly deſign'd, and executed by the great Maſters of Italy that flouriſh'd about a hundred Years ago. The Statues of the Sibyls are very finely wrought, each of 'em in a different Air and Poſture, as are likewiſe thoſe of the Prophets underneath 'em. The Roof of the Treaſury is painted with the ſame kind of Device. There ſtands at the upper end of it a large Crucifix very much eſteem'd, the Figure of our Saviour repreſents him in his laſt Agonies of Death, and amidſt all the Ghaſtlineſs of the Viſage has ſomething in it very amiable. The Gates of the Church are ſaid to be of Corinthian Braſs, with many Scripture Stories riſing on 'em in Baſſo Relievo. The Pope's Statue, and the Fountain by it, would make a noble Show in a Place leſs beautified with ſo many other Productions of Art. The Spicery, the Cellar and its Furniture, the great Revenues of the Convent, with the Story of the Holy Houſe, are too well known to be here inſiſted upon.

Whoever were the firſt Inventors of this Impoſture, they ſeem to have taken the Hint of it from the Veneration that the old Romans paid to the Cottage of Romulus, which ſtood on Mount Capitol, and was repair'd from time to time as it fell to decay. Virgil has given a pretty Image of this little thatch'd Palace, that repreſents it ſtanding in Manlius's Time, 327 Years after the Death of Romulus.

In ſummo cuſtos Tarpeiæ Manlius arcis
Stabat pro templo, & Capitolia celſa tenebat:
Romuleoque recens horrebat Regia culmo.
Æn. Lib. viii. v. 652.

High on a Rock Heroic Manlius ſtood
To guard the Temple, and the Temple's God:
Then Rome was poor, and there you might behold
The Palace thatch'd with Straw. Dryden.

From Loretto, in my way to Rome, I paſs'd thro' Recanati, Macerata, Tolentino, and Poligni. In the laſt there is a Convent of Nuns call'd la Conteſſa, that has in the Church an incomparable Madonna of Raphael. At Spoletto, the next Town on the Road, are ſome Antiquities. The moſt remarkable is an Aqueduct of a Gothic Structure, that conveys the Water from Mount St. Francis to Spoletto, which is not to be equall'd for its height by any other in Europe. They reckon from the Foundation of the loweſt Arch to the Top of it 230 Yards. In my way hence to Terni I ſaw the River Clitumnus, celebrated by ſo many of the Poets for a particular Quality in its Waters of making Cattle white that drink of it. The Inhabitants of that Country have ſtill the ſame Opinion of it, as I found upon Inquiry, and have a great many Oxen of a whitiſh Colour to confirm 'em in it. It is probable this Breed was firſt ſettled in the Country, and continuing ſtill the ſame Species, has made the Inhabitants impute it to a wrong Cauſe; tho' they

they may as well fancy their Hogs turn black f ſome Reaſon of the ſame Nature, becauſe there a none in Italy of any other Breed. The River C are famous for the Herds of Victims with which th

Congreve.

I ſhall afterwards have occaſion to quote Claudian.

Terni is the next Town in courſe, formerly call'd Interamna, for the ſame Reaſon that a part of Aſia was nam'd Meſopotamia. We enter at the Gate of the the three Monuments, ſo call'd becauſe there ſtood near it a Monument erected to Tacitus the Hiſtorian, with two others to the Emperors Tacitus and Florianus, all of them Natives of the Place. Theſe were a few Years ago demoliſh'd by Thunder, and the Fragments of them are in the Hands of ſome Gentlemen of the Town. Near the Dome I was ſhown a ſquare Marble, inſerted in the Wall, with the following Inſcription.

Saluti perpetuæ Auguſtæ
Libertatique Publicæ Populi Romani
Genio municipii Anno poſt Interamnam Conditam.
D. CC. IV.
Ad Cneium Domitium Ahenobarbum.

curavit.

This Stone was probably ſet up on occaſion of the Fall of Sejanus. After the Name of Ahenobarbus there is a little Furrow in the Marble, but ſo ſmooth and well poliſh'd, that I ſhould not have taken notice of it had I not ſeen Coſſ. at the end of it, by which it is plain there was once the Name of another Conſul, which has been induſtriouſly razed out. Lucius Aruncius Camillus Scribonianus was Conſul, under the Reign of * Tiberius, and was afterwards put to Death for a Conſpiracy that

* Vid. Faſti Conſul. Sicul.

he

he had form'd againſt the Emperor Claudius; at which time it was order'd that his Name and Conſulate ſhould be effaced out of all public Regiſters and Inſcriptions. It is not therefore improbable, that it was this long Name which fill'd up the Gap I am now mentioning. There are near this Monument the Ruins of an ancient Theatre, with ſome of the Caves intire. I ſaw among the Ruins an old Heathen Altar, with this Particularity in it, that it is hollow'd, like a Diſh, at one End; but it was not this End on which the Sacrifice was laid, as one may gueſs from the Make of the Feſtoon, that runs round the Altar, and is inverted when the Hollow ſtands uppermoſt. In the ſame Yard, among the Rubbiſh of the Theatre, lie two Pillars, the one of Granate, and the other of a very beautiful Marble. I went out of my way to ſee the famous Caſcade about three Miles from Terni. It is form'd by the Fall of the River Velino, which Virgil mentions in the Seventh Æneid —— Roſea rura Velini.

The Channel of this River lies very high, and is ſhaded on all ſides by a green Foreſt, made up of ſeveral kinds of Trees, that preſerve their Verdure all the Year. The neighbouring Mountains are covered with them, and by reaſon of their Height are more expos'd to the Dews and drizzling Rains than any of the adjacent Parts, which gives occaſion to Virgil's Roſea rura (Dewy Countries). The River runs extremely rapid before its Fall, and ruſhes down a Precipice of a hundred Yards high. It throws itſelf into the hollow Rock, which has probably been worn by ſuch a conſtant Fall of Water. It is impoſſible to ſee the Bottom on which it breaks, for the Thickneſs of the Miſt that riſes from it, which looks at a diſtance like Clouds of Smoke aſcending aſcending from ſome vaſt Furnace, and diſtils in perpetual Rains on all the Places that lie near it. I think there is ſomething more aſtoniſhing in this Caſcade, than in all the Water-works of Verſailles, and could not but wonder when I firſt ſaw it, that I had never met with it in any of the old Poets, eſpecially in Claudian, who makes his Emperor Honorius go out of his way to ſee the River Nar, which runs juſt below it, and yet does not mention what would have been ſo great an Embelliſhment to his Poems. But at preſent I don't in the leaſt queſtion, notwithſtanding the Opinion of ſome learned Men to the contrary, that this is the Gulf thro' which Virgil's Alecto ſhoots herſelf into Hell: for the very Place, the great Reputation of it, the Fall of Waters, the Woods that encompaſs it, with the Smoke and Noiſe that ariſe from it, are all pointed at in the Deſcription. Perhaps he would not mention the Name of the River, becauſe he has done it in the Verſes that precede. We may add to this, that the Caſcade is not far off that part of Italy which has been call'd Italiæ Meditullium.

Eſt locus Italiæ medio, ſub montibus altis,
Nobilis, et famâ multis memoratus in oris,
Amſancti valles; denſis hunc frondibus atrum
Urget utrinque latus nemoris, medioque fragoſus
Dat ſonitum ſaxis et torto vortice torrens:
Hic ſpecus horrendum, & ſævi ſpiracula Ditis
Monſtrantur, ruptoque ingens Acheronte vorago
Peſtiferas aperit fauces, queis condita Erinnys, Inviſum Numen, terras cœlumque levabat.

Æn. vii. v. 563.

In midſt of Italy, well known to Fame,
There lies a Vale, Amſanctus is the Name,

Below

Below the lofty Mounts: On either ſide
Thick Foreſts the forbidden Entrance hide:
Full in the Center of the ſacred Wood
An Arm ariſeth of the Stygian Flood;
Which falling from on high with bellowing Sound,
Whirls the black Waves and rattling Stones around.
Here Pluto pants for Breath from out his Cell,
And opens wide the grinning Jaws of Hell.
To this infernal Gate the Fury flies,
Here hides her hated Head, and frees the lab'ring Skies. Dryden.

It was indeed the moſt proper Place in the World for a Fury to make her Exit, after ſhe had filled a Nation with Diſtractions and Alarms; and I believe every Reader's Imagination is pleas'd, when he ſees the angry Goddeſs thus ſinking, as it were, in a Tempeſt, and plunging herſelf into Hell, amidſt ſuch a Scene of Horror and Confuſion.

The River Velino, after having found its way out from among the Rocks where it falls, runs into the Nera. The Channel of this laſt River is white with Rocks, and the Surface of it for a long Space, cover'd with Froth and Bubbles; for it runs all along upon the Fret, and is ſtill breaking againſt the Stones that oppoſe its Paſſage: So that for theſe Reaſons, as well as for the Mixture of Sulphur in its Waters, it is very well deſcrib'd by Virgil, in that Verſe which mentions theſe two Rivers in their old Roman Names.

Tartaream intendit vocem, quâ protinus omne
Contremuit nemus, et ſylvæ intonuere profundæ,
Audiit et longè Triviæ lacus, audiit amnis
Sulfureâ Nar albus aquâ, fonteſque Velini.
Æn. vii. v. 514.

The

The ſacred Lake of Trivia from afar,

Dryden.

He makes the Sound of the Fury's Trumpet run up the Nera to the very Sources of Velino, which agrees extremely well with the Situation of theſe Rivers. When Virgil has mark'd any particular Quality in a River, the other Poets ſeldom fail of copying after him.

From this River our next Town on the Road receives the Name of Narni. I ſaw hereabouts nothing remarkable except Auguſtus's Bridge, that ſtands half a Mile from the Town, and is one of the ſtatelieſt Ruins in Italy. It has no Cement, and looks as firm as one intire Stone. There is an Arch of it unbroken, the broadeſt that I have ever ſeen, tho' by reaſon of its great Height it does not appear ſo. The middle one was ſtill much broader. They join'd together two Mountains, and belong'd, without doubt, to the Bridge that Martial mentions, tions, tho' Mr. Ray takes them to be the Remains of an Aqueduct.

Sed jam parce mihi, nec abutere Narnia Quinto;
Perpetuò liceat ſic tibi ponte frui!
Lib. vii. Epigr. 93.

Preſerve my better part, and ſpare my Friend;
So, Narni, may thy Bridge for ever ſtand.

From Narni I went to Otricoli, a very mean little Village, that ſtands where the Caſtle of Ocriculum did formerly. I turn'd about half a Mile out of the Road, to ſee the Ruins of the old Ocriculum, that lie near the Banks of the Tiber. There are ſtill ſcatter'd Pillars and Pedeſtals, huge Pieces of Marble, half buried in the Earth, Fragments of Towers, Subterraneous Vaults, Bathing-Places, and the like Marks of its ancient Magnificence.

In my way to Rome, ſeeing a high Hill ſtanding by itſelf in the Campania, I did not queſtion but it had a Claſſic Name, and upon Enquiry found it to be Mount Soracte. The Italians at preſent call it, becauſe its Name begins with an S, St. Oreſte.

The Fatigue of our croſſing the Apennines, and of our whole Journey from Loretto to Rome, was very agreeably reliev'd by the Variety of Scenes we paſs'd thro'. For not to mention the rude Proſpect of Rocks riſing one above another, of the deep Gutters worn in the Sides of them by Torrents of Rain and Snow-water, or the long Channels of Sand winding about their Bottoms, that are ſometimes filled with ſo many Rivers; we ſaw, in ſix Days travelling, the ſeveral Seaſons of the Year in their Beauty and Perfection. We were ſometimes

ſhivering

ſhivering on the top of a bleak Mountain, and a little while after basking in a warm Valley, covered with Violets, and Almond-trees in Bloſſom, the Bees already ſwarming over them, tho' but in the Month of February. Sometimes our Road led us thro' Groves of Olives, or by Gardens of Oranges, or into ſeveral hollow Apartments among the Rocks and Mountains, that look like ſo many natural Green-houſes; as being always ſhaded with a great Variety of Trees and Shrubs that never loſe their Verdure.

I ſhall ſay nothing of the Via Flaminia, which has been ſpoken of by moſt of the Voyage-Writers that have paſs'd it, but ſhall ſet down Claudian's Account of the Journey that Honorius made from Ravenna to Rome, which lies moſt of it in the ſame Road that I have been deſcribing.

Hither the Seas at ſtated times reſort,
And ſhove the loaden Veſſels into Port;
Then with a gentle Ebb retire again,
And render back their Cargo to the Main.
So the pale Moon the reſtleſs Ocean guides,
Driv'n to and fro by ſuch ſubmiſſive Tides.
Fair Fortune next with Looks ſerene and kind,
Receives 'em, in her ancient Fane enſhrin'd;
Then the high Hills they croſs, and from below
In diſtant Murmurs hear Metaurus flow,
'Till to Clitumno's ſacred Streams they come,
That ſend white Victims to Almighty Rome;

* The Fountain not known.

When

When her triumphant Sons in War ſucceed,
And ſlaughter'd Hecatombs around 'em bleed:
At Narni's lofty Seats arriv'd, from far
They view the Windings of the hoary Nar;
Through Rocks and Woods impetuouſly he glides,
While Froth and Foam the fretting Surface hides.
And now the Royal Gueſt, all Dangers paſs'd,
Old Tiber and his Nymphs ſalutes at laſt;
The long laborious Pavement here he treads,
That to proud Rome the admiring Nations leads;
While ſtately Vaults and tow'ring Piles appear,
And ſhow the World's Metropolis is near.

Silius Italicus, who has taken more Pains on the Geography of Italy than any other of the Latin Poets, has given a Catalogue of moſt of the Rivers that I ſaw in Umbria, or in the Borders of it. He has avoided a Fault (if it be really ſuch) which Macrobius has objected to Virgil, of paſſing from one Place to another, without regarding their regular and natural Situation, in which Homer's Catalogues are obſerv'd to be much more methodical and exact than Virgil's.

In Tibrim properans, Tiniæque inglorius humor,

The Umbri, that from hollow Mountains came:
Theſe Æſis and the Stream of Sapis laves;
And ſwift Metaurus, that with rapid Waves
O'er Beds of Stone its noiſy current pours:
Clitumnus, that preſents its ſacred Stores,
To waſh the Bull: the Nar's infected Tide,
Whoſe ſulph'rous Waters into Tiber glide:
Tinia's ſmall Stream, that runs inglorious on:
The Clanis, Senon, and the Rubicon:
With larger Waters, and ſuperior Sway,
Amidſt the reſt, the hoary Albula
Thro' Fields and Towns purſues his watry Way.

Since I am got among the Poets, I ſhall end this Chapter with two or three Paſſages out of them, that I have omitted inſerting in their proper Places.

By a Ravenna Vintner once betray'd,
So much for Wine and Water mix'd I paid;
But when I thought the purchas'd Liquor mine,
The Raſcal fobb'd me off with only Wine.

FROM

TO

NAPLES.

UPON my Arrival at Rome I took a View of St. Peter's, and the Rotunda, leaving the reſt 'till my Return from Naples, when I ſhould have Time and Leiſure enough to conſider what I ſaw. St. Peter's ſeldom anſwers Expectation at firſt entring it, but enlarges itſelf on all ſides inſenſibly, and mends upon the Eye every Moment. The Proportions are ſo very well obſerv'd, that nothing appears to an Advantage, or diſtinguiſhes itſelf above the reſt. It ſeems neither extremely high, nor long, nor broad, becauſe it is all of them in a juſt Equality. As on the contrary in our Gothic Cathedrals, the Narrowneſs of the Arch makes it riſe in Height, or run out in Length; the Lowneſs often opens it in Breadth, or the Defectiveneſs of ſome other Particular makes any ſingle Part appear in great Perfection. Tho' every thing in this Church is admirable, the moſt aſtoniſhing Part of it is the Cupola. Upon my going to the top of it, I was ſurpris'd to find that the Dome, which we ſee in the Church, is not the ſame that one looks upon without Doors, the laſt of them being a kind of Caſe to the other, and the Stairs lying betwixt them both, by which one aſcends into the Ball. Had there been only the outward Dome, it would not have ſhewn itſelf to an Advantage to thoſe that are in the Church; or had there only been the inward one, it would ſcarce have been ſeen by thoſe that are without; had they both been one ſolid Dome of ſo great a Thickneſs, the Pillars would have been too weak to have ſupported it. After having ſurvey'd this Dome, I went to ſee the Rotunda, which is generally ſaid to have been the Model of it. This Church is at preſent ſo much chang'd from the ancient Pantheon, as Pliny has deſcrib'd it, that ſome have been inclin'd to think it is not the ſame Temple; but the Cavalier Fontana has abundantly ſatisfy'd the World in this Particular, and ſhewn how the ancient Figure, and Ornaments of the Pantheon, have been chang'd into what they are at preſent. This Author, who is now eſteem'd the beſt of the Roman Architects, has lately written a Treatiſe on Veſpaſian's Amphitheatre, which is not yet printed.

After having ſeen theſe two Maſter-pieces of Modern and Ancient Architecture, I have often conſider'd with myſelf, whether the ordinary Figure of the Heathen, or that of the Chriſtian Temples be the moſt beautiful, and the moſt capable of Magnificence, and can't forbear thinking the Croſs Figure more proper for ſuch ſpacious Buildings than the Rotund. I muſt confeſs the Eye is much better fill'd at firſt entering the Rotund, and takes in the whole Beauty and Magnificence of the Temple at one view. But ſuch as are built in the Form of a Croſs give us a greater Variety of Noble Proſpects. Nor is it eaſy to conceive a more glorious Show in Architecture, than what a Man meets with in St. Peter's, when he ſtands under the Dome. If he looks upward, he is aſtoniſhed at the ſpacious Hollow of the Cupola, and has a Vault on every ſide of him, that makes one of the beautifulleſt Viſtas that the Eye can poſſibly paſs thro'. I know that ſuch as are profeſs'd Admirers of the Ancients will find abundance of chimerical Beauties, the Architects themſelves never thought of; as one of the moſt Famous of the Modern in that Art tells us, the Hole in the Roof of the Rotunda is ſo admirably contriv'd, that it makes thoſe who are in the Temple look like Angels, by diffuſing the Light equally on all ſides of them.

In all the old Highways that lead from Rome, one ſees ſeveral little Ruins on each ſide of them, that were formerly ſo many Sepulchers; for the ancient Romans generally bury'd their Dead near the great Roads.

Quorum Flaminiâ tegitur cinis atque Latinâ.
Juv. Sat. i. v. ult.

——— ——— Whoſe Aſhes lay
Under the Latin and Flaminian Way.

None but ſome few of a very extraordinary Quality, having been interred within the Walls of the City.

Our Chriſtian Epitaphs, that are to be ſeen only in Churches, or Churchyards, begin often with a Siſte Viator; Viator precare ſalutem, &c. probably in Imitation of the old Roman Inſcriptions, that generally addreſs'd themſelves to the Travellers; as it was impoſſible for them to enter the City, or to go out of it, without paſſing thro' one of theſe melancholy Roads, which for a great Length was nothing elſe but a Street of Funeral Monuments.

In my way from Rome to Naples I found nothing ſo remarkable as the Beauty of the Country, and the extreme Poverty of its Inhabitants. It is indeed an amazing thing to ſee the preſent Deſolation of Italy, when one conſiders what incredible Multitudes of People it abounded with during the Reigns of the Roman Emperors: And notwithſtanding the Removal of the Imperial Seat, the Irruptions of the barbarous Nations, the Civil Wars of this Country, with the Hardſhips of its ſeveral Governments, one can ſcarce imagine how ſo plentiful a Soil ſhould become ſo miſerably unpeopled in compariſon of what it once was. We may reckon, by a very moderate Computation, more Inhabitants in the Campania of old Rome, than are now in all Italy. And if we could number up thoſe prodigious Swarms that had ſettled themſelves in every Part of this delightful Country, I queſtion not but that they would amount to more than can be found, at preſent, in any ſix Parts of Europe of the ſame Extent. This Deſolation appears no where greater than in the Pope's Territories; and yet there are ſeveral Reaſons would make a Man expect to ſee theſe Dominions the beſt regulated, and moſt flouriſhing of any other in Europe. Their Prince is generally a Man of Learning and Virtue, mature in Years and Experience, who has ſeldom any Vanity or Pleaſure to gratify at his People's Expence, and is neither incumber'd with Wife, Children, or Miſtreſſes; not to mention the ſuppos'd Sanctity of his Character, which obliges him in a more particular manner to conſult the Good and Happineſs of Mankind.

kind. The Direction of Church and State are lodg'd intirely in his own Hands, ſo that his Government is naturally free from thoſe Principles of Faction and Diviſion, which are mix'd in the very Compoſition of moſt others. His Subjects are always ready to fall in with his Deſigns, and are more at his Diſpoſal than any others of the moſt abſolute Government, as they have a greater Veneration for his Perſon, and not only court his Favour but his Bleſſing. His Country is extremely fruitful, and has good Havens both for the Adriatic and Mediterranean, which is an Advantage peculiar to himſelf, and the Neapolitans, above the reſt of the Italians. There is ſtill a Benefit the Pope enjoys above all other Sovereigns, in drawing great Sums out of Spain, Germany, and other Countries that belong to Foreign Princes, which one would fancy might be no ſmall Eaſe to his own Subjects. We may here add, that there is no Place in Europe ſo much frequented by Strangers, whether they are ſuch as come out of Curioſity or ſuch who are obliged to attend the Court of Rome on ſeveral Occaſions, as are many of the Cardinals and Prelates, that bring conſiderable Sums into the Pope's Dominions. But notwithſtanding all theſe promiſing Circumſtances, and the long Peace that has reign'd ſo many Years in Italy, there is not a more miſerable People in Europe than the Pope's Subjects. His State is thin of Inhabitants, and a great Part of his Soil uncultivated. His Subjects are wretchedly poor and idle, and have neither ſufficient Manufactures nor Traffic to employ them. Theſe ill Effects may ariſe, in a great meaſure, out of the Arbitrarineſs of the Government; but I think they are chiefly to be aſcrib'd to the very Genius of the Roman Catholic Religion, which here ſhews itſelf in its Perfection. It is not ſtrange to find a Country half unpeopled, where ſo great a Proportion of the Inhabitants of both Sexes is ty'd under ſuch Vows of Chaſtity, and where at the ſame time an Inquiſition forbids all Recruits out of any other Religion. Nor is it leſs eaſy to account for the great Poverty and Want that are to be met with in a Country, which invites into it ſuch Swarms of Vagabonds, under the Title of Pilgrims, and ſhuts up in Cloiſters ſuch an incredible Multitude of young and luſty Beggars, who, inſtead of increaſing the common Stock by their Labour and Induſtry, lie as a dead Weight on their Fellow-Subjects, and conſume the Charity that ought to ſupport the Sickly, Old and Decrepid. The many Hoſpitals, that are every where erected, ſerve rather to encourage Idleneſs in the People, than to ſet them at Work; not to mention the great Riches which lie uſeleſs in Churches and Religious Houſes, with the Multitude of Feſtivals that muſt never be violated by Trade or Buſineſs. To ſpeak truly, they are here ſo wholly taken up with Mens Souls, that they neglect the good of their Bodies; and when, to theſe natural Evils in the Government and Religion, there ariſes among them an avaricious Pope, who is for making a Family, it is no wonder if the People ſink under ſuch a Complication of Diſtempers. Yet it is to this Humour of Nepotiſm that Rome owes its preſent Splendor and Magnificence; for it would have been impoſſible to have furniſh'd out ſo many glorious Palaces with ſuch a Profuſion of Pictures, Statues, and the like Ornaments, had not the Riches of the People at ſeveral times fallen into the Hands of many different Families, and of particular Perſons; as we may obſerve, tho' the Bulk of the Roman People was more rich and happy in the times of the Common-

Commonwealth, the City of Rome receiv'd all its Beauties and Embelliſhments under the Emperors. It is probable the Campania of Rome, as well as other Parts of the Pope's Territories, would be cultivated much better than it is, were there not ſuch an exorbitant Tax on Corn, which makes them plow up only ſuch ſpots of Ground as turn to the moſt Advantage: Whereas were the Money to be rais'd on Lands, with an Exception to ſome of the more barren Parts, that might be Tax-free for a certain Term of Years, every one would turn his Ground to the beſt Account, and in a little time perhaps bring more Money into the Pope's Treaſury.

The greateſt Pleaſure I took in my Journey from Rome to Naples was in ſeeing the Fields, Towns, and Rivers, that have been deſcrib'd by ſo many Claſſic Authors, and have been the Scenes of ſo many great Actions; for this whole Road is extremely barren of Curioſities. It is worth while to have an Eye on Horace's Voyage to Brundiſi, when one paſſes this Way; for by comparing his ſeveral Stages, and the Road he took, with thoſe that are obſerv'd at preſent, we may have ſome Idea of the Changes that have been made in the Face of this Country ſince his time. If we may gueſs at the common travelling of Perſons of Quality, among the ancient Romans, from this Poet's Deſcription of his Voyage, we may conclude they ſeldom went above fourteen Miles a Day over the Appian Way, which was more us'd by the Noble Romans than any other in Italy, as it led to Naples, Baiæ, and the moſt delightful Parts of the Nation. It is indeed very diſagreeable to be carry'd in haſte over this Pavement.

Minùs eſt gravis Appia tardis.

Hor. Sat. 5. l. i. v. 6.

For to quick Trav'lers, 'tis a tedious Road;
But if you walk but ſlow, 'tis pretty good. Creech.

Lucan has deſcrib'd the very Road from Anxur to Rome, that Horace took from Rome to Anxur. It is not indeed the ordinary Way at preſent, nor is it mark'd out by the ſame Places in both Poets.

Jamque et præcipites ſuperaverat Anxuris arces,
*Et quà * Pontinas via dividit uda paludes;*
Quà ſublime nemus, Scythicæ quà regna Dianæ;
Quaque iter eſt Latiis ad ſummam faſcibus Albam:
Excelsâ de rupe procul jam conſpicit Urbem.

Lib. iii. v. 84.

He now had conquer'd Anxur's ſteep Aſcent,
And to Pontina's wat'ry Marſhes went;
A long Canal the muddy Fen divides,
And with a clear unſully'd Current glides;
Diana's woody Realms he next invades,
And croſſing through the conſecrated Shades,
Aſcends high Alba, whence with new Delight
He ſees the City riſing to his Sight.

In my way to Naples I croſs'd the two moſt conſiderable Rivers of the Campania Felice, that were formerly call'd the Liris and Vulturnus, and are at preſent the Garigliano and Vulturno. The firſt of theſe Rivers has been deſervedly celebrated by the Latin Poets for the Gentleneſs of its Courſe, as the other for its Rapidity and Noiſe.

The Warlike Arpine borders on the Sides
Of the ſlow Liris, that in Silence glides,
And in its tainted Stream the working Sulphur hides.

The rough Vulturnus, furious in its Courſe,
With rapid Streams divides the fruitful Grounds,
And from afar in hollow Murmurs ſounds.

The Ruins of Anxur and old Capua mark out the pleaſant Situation in which thoſe Towns formerly ſtood. The firſt of them was planted on the Mountain, where we now ſee Terracina, and by reaſon of the Breezes that came off the Sea, and the Height of its Situation, was one of the Summer Retirements of the ancient Romans.

O nemus, O fontes! ſolidumque madentis arenæ

Mart. Lib. x. Epigr. 51.

Ye warbling Fountains, and ye ſhady Trees,
Where Anxur feels the cool refreſhing Breeze
Blown off the Sea, and all the dewy Strand Lies cover'd with a ſmooth unſinking Sand.

On the cool Shore, near Baia's gentle Seats,
I lay retir'd in Anxur's ſoft Retreats:
Where Silver Lakes, with verdant Shadows crown'd,
Diſperſe a grateful Chilneſs all around:
The Graſhopper avoids th' untainted Air,
Nor in the midſt of Summer ventures there.

Murranus came from Anxur's ſhow'ry Height,
With ragged Rocks, and ſtony Quarries white;
Seated on Hills ——

I don't know whether it be worth while to take notice that the Figures which are cut in the Rock near Terracina, increaſe ſtill in a Decimal Proportion as they come nearer the Bottom. If one of our Voyage-Writers, who paſſed this way more than once, had obſerved the Situation of theſe Figures, he would would not have troubled himſelf with the Diſſertation that he has made upon them. Silius Italicus has given us the Names of ſeveral Towns and Rivers in the Campania Felice.

Jam verò quos dives opum, quos dives averum,
Et toto dabat ad bellum Campania tractu;

Illic Parthenope, et Pæno non pervia Nola, Alliphe, et Clanio contemtæ ſemper Acerræ.
Sarraſtes etiam populos totaſque videres

Now rich Campania ſends forth all her Sons,
And drains her populous Cities for the War:
The Oſci, firſt, in Arms their Leaders wait:
Warm Sinueſſa comes; Vulturnum too,
Whoſe Walls are deafen'd by the ſounding Main;
And fair Amyclæ, to the Foe betray'd
Thro' fatal Silence: Fundi too was there;
And Cajeta by ancient Lamus ruled:

Anti-

Antiphata, waſh'd by the rolling Sea;
And moiſt Linternum on its marſhy Soil:
Cume, the Sibyl's ancient Seat, was there;
Nuceriæ too, and woody Gaurus, came:
There was Parthenope, and Nola there,
Nola, impervious to the Punic Arms;
Alliphe, and Acerræ ſtill o'erflow'd
By the ſwift Clanius: there you might behold
Sarraſte's manly Sons, and all the Wealth
Of gentle Sarnus; thoſe whom Phlegra ſent
Steaming with Sulphur: Thither Baiæ came,
Built by Ulyſſes' Friend; Miſenus too;
Nor Prochyte was abſent, nor the fam'd
Inarime, where huge Typhæus lies Transfix'd with Thunder; nor the ſtony Iſle
Of Telon, nor Calatia's humble Walls;
Surrentum, and Avella's barren Soil:
But chiefly Capua, Capua, doom'd, alas!
By her own Pride and Inſolence to fall.

NAPLES.

MY firſt Days at Naples were taken up with the Sight of Proceſſions, which are always very magnificent in the Holy-Week. It would be tedious to give an Account of the ſeveral Repreſentations of our Saviour's Death and Reſurrection, of the Figures of himſelf, the bleſſed Virgin, and the Apoſtles, which are carried up and down on this Occaſion, with the cruel Penances that ſeveral inflict on themſelves, and the multitude of Ceremonies that attend theſe Solemnities. I ſaw, at the ſame time, a very ſplendid Proceſſion for the Acceſſion of the Duke of Anjou to the Crown of Spain, in which the Vice-Roy bore his Part at the left Hand of Cardinal Cantelmi. To grace the Parade, they expos'd, at the ſame time, the Blood of St. Januarius, which liquify'd at the Approach of the Saint's Head, tho', as they ſay, it was hard congeal'd before. I had twice an Opportunity of ſeeing the Operation of this pretended Miracle, and muſt confeſs I think it ſo far from being a real Miracle, that I look upon it as one of the moſt bungling Tricks that I ever ſaw: Yet it is this that makes as great a Noiſe as any in the Roman Church, and that Monſieur Paſchal has hinted at among the reſt, in his Marks of the true Religion. The modern Neapolitans ſeem to have copy'd it out from one, which was

was ſhewn in a Town of the Kingdom of Naples, as long ago as in Horace's Time.

——— Dehinc Gnatia lymphis
Iratis extructa dedit riſuſque jocoſque,
Dum, flammâ ſinè, thura liqueſcere limine Sacro
Perſuadere cupit: credat Judæus apella,
Non ego. ——— Lib. i. Sat. 5. v. 97.

At Gnatia next arriv'd, we laugh'd to ſee
The ſuperſtitious Crowd's Simplicity,
That in the ſacred Temple needs would try
Without a Fire th' unheated Gums to fry;
Believe who will the ſolemn Sham, not I.

One may ſee at leaſt that the heathen Prieſthood had the ſame kind of Secret among them, of which the Roman Catholics are now Maſters.

I muſt confeſs, tho' I had liv'd above a Year in a Roman Catholic Country, I was ſurpris'd to ſee many Ceremonies and Superſtitions in Naples, that are not ſo much as thought of in France. But as it is certain there has been a kind of ſecret Reformation made, tho' not publicly own'd, in the Roman Catholic Church, ſince the ſpreading of the Proteſtant Religion, ſo we find the ſeveral Nations are recover'd out of their Ignorance, in proportion as they converſe more or leſs with thoſe of the Reform'd Churches. For this Reaſon the French are much more enlighten'd than the Spaniards or Italians, on Occaſion of their frequent Controverſies with the Huguenots; and we find many of the Roman Catholic Gentlemen of our own Country, who will not ſtick to laugh at the Superſtitions they ſometimes meet with in other Nations.

I ſhall

I ſhall not be particular in deſcribing the Grandeur of the City of Naples, the Beauty of its Pavement, the Regularity of its Buildings, the Magnificence of its Churches and Convents, the Multitude of its Inhabitants, or the Delightfulneſs of its Situation, which ſo many others have done with a great deal of Leiſure and Exactneſs. If a War ſhould break out, the Town has reaſon to apprehend the exacting of a large Contribution, or a Bombardment. It has but ſeven Gallies, a Mole, and two little Caſtles, which are capable of hindering an Enemy's Approaches. Beſides that the Sea which lies near it is not ſubject to Storms, has no ſenſible Flux and Reflux, and is ſo deep that a Veſſel of Burden may come up to the very Mole. The Houſes are flat-roof'd to walk upon, ſo that every Bomb that fell on them would take Effect.

Pictures, Statues, and Pieces of Antiquity are not ſo common at Naples, as one might expect in ſo great and ancient a City of Italy; for the Vice-Roys take care to ſend into Spain every thing that is valuable of this nature. Two of their fineſt modern Statues are thoſe of Apollo and Minerva, plac'd on each ſide of Sannazarius's Tomb. On the Face of this Monument, which is all of Marble, and very neatly wrought, is repreſented, in Bas Relief, Neptune among the Satyrs, to ſhow that this Poet was the Inventor of Piſcatory Eclogues. I remember Hugo Grotius deſcribes himſelf, in one of his Poems, as the firſt that brought the Muſes to the Sea-ſide; but he muſt be underſtood only of the Poets of his own Country. I here ſaw the Temple that Sannazarius mentions in his Invocation of the bleſſed Virgin, at the beginning of his De partu Virginis, which was all rais'd at his own Expence.

— Niveis

— Niveis tibi ſi ſolennia templis
Serta damus; ſi manſuras tibi ponimus aras
Exciſo in ſcopulo, fluctus unde aurea canos
Deſpiciens celſo de culmine Mirgelline
Attollit, nautiſque procul venientibus offert;
Tu vatem ignarumque viæ inſuetumque labori
Diva mone ——— Lib. i.

Thou bright Celeſtial Goddeſs, if to Thee
An acceptable Temple I erect,
With faireſt Flow'rs and freſheſt Garlands deck'd,
On tow'ring Rocks, whence Mergellinè ſpies
The ruffled Deep in Storms and Tempeſts riſe;
Guide thou the Pious Poet, nor refuſe
Thine own propitious Aid to his unpractis'd Muſe.

There are ſeveral very delightful Proſpects about Naples, eſpecially from ſome of the Religious Houſes; for one ſeldom finds in Italy a Spot of Ground more agreeable than ordinary, that is not cover'd with a Convent. The Cupolas of this City, tho' there are many of them, don't appear to the beſt Advantage when one ſurveys them at a diſtance, as being generally too high and narrow. The Marquis of Medina Sidonia, in his Vice-Royalty, made the Shell of a Houſe, which he had not time to finiſh, that commands a View of the whole Bay, and would have been a very noble Building, had he brought it to Perfection. It ſtands ſo on the Side of a Mountain, that it would have had a Garden to every Story, by the help of a Bridge, which was to have been laid over each Garden.

The Bay of Naples is the moſt delightful one that I ever ſaw. It lies in almoſt a round Figure of about thirty Miles in the Diameter. Three Parts of it are ſhelter'd with a noble Circuit of Woods

Woods and Mountains. The high Promontory of Surrentum divides it from the Bay of Salernum. Between the utmoſt Point of this Promontory, and the Iſle of Caprea, the Sea enters by a Strait of about three Miles wide. This Iſland ſtands as a vaſt Mole, which ſeems to have been planted there on purpoſe to break the Violence of the Waves that run into the Bay. It lies longways, almoſt in a parallel Line to Naples. The exceſſive Height of its Rocks ſecures a great Part of the Bay from Winds and Waves, which enter again between the other End of this Iſland and the Promontory of Miſeno. The Bay of Naples is call'd the Crater by the old Geographers, probably from this its Reſemblance to a round Bowl half fill'd with Liquor. Perhaps Virgil, who compos'd here a great part of his Æneids, took from hence the Plan of that beautiful Harbour, which he has made in his firſt Book; for the Libyan Port is but the Neapolitan Bay in little.

Eſt in ſeceſſu longo locus: Inſula portum
Efficit objectu laterum, quibus omnis ab alto
Frangitur, inque ſinus ſcindit ſeſe unda reductos:
Hinc atque hinc vaſtæ rupes geminique minantur
In cœlum ſcopuli, quorum ſub vertice latè
Æquora tuta ſilent; tum Silvis Scena coruſcis
Deſuper, horrentique atrum nemus imminet umbrâ.
Æn. i. v. 163.

Within a long Receſs there lies a Bay;
An Iſland ſhades it from the rolling Sea,
And forms a Port ſecure for Ships to ride:
Broke by the jutting Land on either Side,
In double Streams the briny Waters glide
Between two Rows of Rocks: a Silvan Scene Appears above, and Groves for ever Green. Dryden.

Naples

Naples ſtands in the Boſom of this Bay, and has the pleaſanteſt Situation in the World, tho', by reaſon of its Weſtern Mountains, it wants an Advantage Vitruvius would have to the Front of his Palace, of ſeeing the ſetting Sun.

One would wonder how the Spaniards, who have but very few Forces in the Kingdom of Naples, ſhould be able to keep a People from Revolting, that has been famous for its Mutinies and Seditions in former Ages. But they have ſo well contriv'd it, that, tho' the Subjects are miſerably haraſs'd and oppreſs'd, the greateſt of their Oppreſſors are thoſe of their own Body. I ſhall not mention any thing of the Clergy, who are ſufficiently reproached in moſt Itineraries for the univerſal Poverty that one meets with in this noble and plentiful Kingdom. A great Part of the People is in a State of Vaſſalage to the Barons, who are the harſheſt Tyrants in the World to thoſe that are under them. The Vaſſals indeed are allow'd, and invited to bring in their Complaints and Appeals to the Vice-Roy, who, to foment Diviſions, and gain the Hearts of the Populace, does not ſtick at impriſoning and chaſtiſing their Maſters very ſeverely on Occaſion. The Subjects of the Crown are notwithſtanding much more rich and happy than the Vaſſals of the Barons. Inſomuch that when the King has been upon the Point of ſelling a Town to one of his Barons, the Inhabitants have rais'd the Sum upon themſelves, and preſented it to the King, that they might keep out of ſo inſupportable a Slavery. Another way the Spaniards have taken to grind the Neapolitans, and yet to take off the Odium from themſelves, has been by erecting ſeveral Courts of Juſtice, with a very ſmall Penſion for ſuch as ſit at the Head of them, ſo that they are tempted to take Bribes, keep Cauſes undecided, decided, encourage Law-ſuits, and do all they can to fleece the People, that they may have wherewithal to ſupport their own Dignity. It is incredible how great a Multitude of Retainers to the Law there are at Naples. It is commonly ſaid, that when Innocent the Eleventh had deſir'd the Marquis of Carpio to furniſh him with thirty thouſand Head of Swine, the Marquis anſwer'd him, that for his Swine he could not ſpare them, but if his Holineſs had occaſion for thirty thouſand Lawyers, he had them at his Service. Theſe Gentlemen find a continual Employ for the fiery Temper of the Neapolitans, and hinder them from uniting in ſuch common Friendſhips and Alliances as might endanger the Safety of the Government. There are very few Perſons of Conſideration who have not a Cauſe depending; for when a Neapolitan Cavalier has nothing elſe to do, he gravely ſhuts himſelf up in his Cloſet, and falls a tumbling over his Papers, to ſee if he can ſtart a Law-Suit, and plague any of his Neighbours. So much is the Genius of this People chang'd ſince Statius's Time.

Nulla foro rabies, aut ſtrictæ Jurgia Legis;
Morum jura viris, ſolum & ſine faſcibus Æquum.
Sylv. v. Lib. iii. v. 87.

By Love of Right and Native Juſtice led,
In the ſtraight Paths of Equity they tread;
Nor know the Bar, nor fear the Judge's Frown, Unpractis'd in the Wranglings of the Gown.

There is another Circumſtance, which makes the Neapolitans, in a very particular manner, the Oppreſſors of each other. The Gabels of Naples are are very high on Oil, Wine, Tobacco, and indeed on almoſt every thing that can be eaten, drank or worn. There would have been one on Fruit, had not Maſſianello's Rebellion aboliſh'd it, as it has probably put a ſtop to many others. What makes theſe Impoſts more intolerable to the poorer ſort, they are laid on all Butchers Meat, while at the ſame time the Fowl and Gibbier are Tax free. Beſides, all Meat being taxed equally by the Pound, it happens that the Duty lies heavieſt on the coarſer Sorts, which are moſt likely to fall to the ſhare of the common People, ſo that Beef perhaps pays a Third, and Veal a Tenth of its Price to the Government, a Pound of either Sort having the ſame Tax fix'd on it. Theſe Gabels are moſt of them at preſent in the Hands of private Men; for as the King of Spain has had occaſion for Money, he has borrow'd it of the rich Neapolitans, on condition that they ſhould receive the Intereſt out of ſuch or ſuch Gabels 'till he could repay them the Principal.

This he has repeated ſo often that at preſent there is ſcarce a ſingle Gabel unmortgag'd; ſo that there is no Place in Europe which pays greater Taxes, and at the ſame time no Prince who draws leſs Advantage from them. In other Countries the People have the Satisfaction of ſeeing the Money they give ſpent in the Neceſſities, Defence, or Ornament of their State, or at leaſt, in the Vanity or Pleaſures of their Prince: but here moſt of it goes to the enriching of their Fellow-Subjects. If there was not ſo great a Plenty of every thing in Naples the People could not bear it. The Spaniard however reaps this Advantage from the preſent Poſture of Affairs, that the Murmurs of the People are turn'd upon their own Countrymen, and what is more conſiderable, ble, that almoſt all the Perſons, of the greateſt Wealth and Power in Naples, are engag'd by their own Intereſts to pay theſe Impoſitions chearfully, and to ſupport the Government which has laid them on. For this Reaſon, tho' the poorer ſort are for the Emperor, few of the Perſons of Conſequence can endure to think of a Change in their preſent Eſtabliſhment; tho' there is no queſtion but the King of Spain will reform moſt of theſe Abuſes, by breaking or retrenching the Power of the Barons, by cancelling ſeveral unneceſſary Employs, or by ranſoming or taking the Gabels into his own Hands. I have been told too there is a Law of Charles the Fifth ſomething like our Statute of Mortmain, which has laid dormant ever ſince his Time, and will probably have new Life put into it under the Reign of an active Prince. The Inhabitants of Naples have been always very notorious for leading a Life of Lazineſs and Pleaſure, which I take to ariſe partly out of the wonderful Plenty of their Country, that does not make Labour ſo neceſſary to them, and partly out of the Temper of their Climate, that relaxes the Fibres of their Bodies, and diſpoſes the People to ſuch an idle indolent Humour. Whatever it proceeds from, we find they were formerly as famous for it as they are at preſent.

This was perhaps the Reaſon that the Ancients tell us one of the Sirens was bury'd in this City, which thence receiv'd the Name of Parthenope.

Here wanton Naples crowns the happy Shore,

These

These are the gentle Seats that I propose;
For not cold Scythia's undissolving Snows,
Nor the parch'd Libyan Sands thy Husband bore,
But mild Parthenope's delightful Shore;
Where hush'd in Calms the bord'ring Ocean laves
Her silent Coast, and rolls in languid Waves;
Refreshing Winds the Summer's Heats assuage;
And kindly Warmth disarms the Winter's Rage;
Remov'd from Noise and the tumultuous War,
Soft Sleep and downy Ease inhabit there,
And Dreams unbroken with intruding Care.

THE ANTIQUITIES AND Natural Curioſities That lie near the CITY of NAPLES.

AT about eight Miles diſtance from Naples lies a very noble Scene of Antiquities. What they call Virgil's Tomb is the firſt that one meets with on the Way thither. It is certain this Poet was bury'd at Naples; but I think it is almoſt as certain, that his Tomb ſtood on the other ſide of the Town, which looks towards Veſuvio. By this Tomb is the Entry into the Grotto of Pauſilypo. The common People of Naples believe it to have been wrought by Magic, and that Virgil was the Magician; who is in greater Repute among the Neapolitans for having made the Grotto than the Æneid.

If a Man would form to himſelf a juſt Idea of this Place, he muſt fancy a vaſt Rock undermin'd from one end to the other, and a Highway running thro' it, near as long and as broad as the Mall in St. James's Park. This ſubterraneous Paſſage is much mended ſince Seneca gave ſo bad a Character of it. The Entry at both Ends is higher than the middle Parts of it, and ſinks by degrees to fling in more Light upon the reſt. Towards the middle are two large Funnels, bor'd thro' the Roof of the Grotto, to let in Light and freſh Air.

There are no where about the Mountain any vaſt Heaps of Stones, tho' it is certain the great Quantities of 'em that are dug out of the Rock could not eaſily conceal themſelves, had they not probably been conſum'd in the Moles and Buildings of Naples. This confirm'd me in a Conjecture, which I made at the firſt ſight of this ſubterraneous Paſſage, that it was not at firſt deſign'd ſo much for a High-way as for a Quarry of Stone, but that the Inhabitants, finding a double Advantage by it, hew'd it into the Form we now ſee. Perhaps the ſame Deſign gave the Original to the Sibyl's Grotto, conſidering the prodigious multitude of Palaces that ſtood in its Neighbourhood.

I remember when I was at Chateaudun in France, I met with a very curious Perſon, a Member of one of the German Univerſities. He had ſtay'd a Day or two in the Town longer than ordinary, to take the Meaſures of ſeveral empty Spaces that had been cut in the Sides of a neighbouring Mountain. Some of 'em were ſupported with Pillars form'd out of the Rock; ſome were made in the Faſhion of Galleries, and ſome not unlike Amphitheatres. The Gentleman had made to himſelf ſeveral ingenious Hypotheſes concerning the uſe of theſe ſubterranean Apartments, and from thence collected the va Magnificence and Luxury of the ancient Chate dunois. But upon communicating his Thoughts o this Subject to one of the moſt learned of the Plac he was not a little ſurpris'd to hear, that theſe ſtu pendous Works of Art were only ſo many Quarri of Free-Stone, that had been wrought into differe Figures, according as the Veins of it directed th Workmen.

About five Miles from the Grotto of Pauſilypo, l the Remains of Puteoli and Baiæ, in a ſoft Air an a delicious Situation.

The Country about 'em, by reaſon of its vaſt Ca verns and ſubterraneous Fires, has been miſerabl torn in pieces by Earthquakes, ſo that the whole Fac of it is quite chang'd from what it was formerly. The Sea has overwhelm'd a multitude of Palaces, which may be ſeen at the bottom of the Water in a calm Day.

The Lucrine Lake is but a Puddle in compariſon of what it once was, its Springs having been ſunk in an Earthquake, or ſtopp'd up by Mountains that have fall'n upon 'em. The Lake of Avernus, formerly ſo famous for its Streams of Poiſon, is now plentifully ſtock'd with Fiſh and Fowl. Mount Gaurus, from one of the fruitfulleſt Parts in Italy, is become one of the moſt barren. Several Fields, which were laid out in beautiful Groves and Gardens, are now naked Plains, ſmoking with Sulphur, or incumber'd with Hills that have been thrown up by Eruptions of Fire. The Works of Art lie in no leſs Diſorder than thoſe of Nature; for that which was once the moſt beautiful Spot of Italy cover'd with Temples and Palaces, adorn'd by the greateſt of the Roman Commonwealth, embelliſh'd liſh'd by many of the Roman Emperors, and celebrated by the beſt of their Poets, has now nothing to ſhew but the Ruins of its ancient Splendor, and a great Magnificence in Confuſion.

The Mole of Puteoli has been miſtaken by ſeveral Authors for Caligula's Bridge. They have all been led into this Error from the Make of it, becauſe it ſtands on Arches. But to paſs over the many Arguments that may be brought againſt this Opinion, I ſhall here take away the Foundation of it, by ſetting down an Inſcription mention'd by Julius Capitolinus in the Life of Antoninus Pius, who was the Repairer of this Mole. Imp. Cæſari, Divi Hadriani filio, Divi Trajani, Parthici, Nepoti, Divi Nervæ pronepoti, T. Aël. Hadriano Antonino Aug. Pio, &c. quod ſuper cætera beneficia ad hujus etiam utelam portûs, Pilarum viginti molem cum ſumptu fornicum reliquo ex Ærario ſuo largitus eſt. i. e. To the Emperor Adrian Antoninus Pius, Son of the Emperor Adrian, Grandſon of the Emperor Trajan ſurnamed Parthicus, Great-Grandſon of the Emperor Nerva, &c. who, beſides other Benefactions, built, at his own Expence, a Mole of twenty Piles, for the Security of this Haven.

It would have been very difficult to have made ſuch a Mole as this of Puteoli, in a Place where they had not ſo natural a Commodity as the Earth of Puzzuola, which immediately hardens in the Water, and after a little lying in it looks rather like Stone than Mortar. It was this that gave the ancient Romans an Opportunity of making ſo many Incroachments on the Sea, and of laying the Foundations of their Villas and Palaces within the very Borders of it, as * Horace has elegantly deſcribed it more than once.

* Lib. 2. Od. 18. Lib. 3. Od. 1. Lib. 3. Od. 24. Epiſt. Lib. 1.

About four Years ago they dug up a great Pie of Marble near Puzzuola, with ſeveral Figures an Letters engraven round it, which have given occ ſion to ſome Diſputes among the Antiquaries *. B they all agree that it is the Pedeſtal of a Stat erected to Tiberius by the fourteen Cities of Aſi which were flung down by an Earthquake; t ſame that, according to the Opinion of many learn Men, happen'd at our Saviour's Crucifixion. The have found in the Letters, which are ſtill legibl the Names of the ſeveral Cities, and diſcover in ea Figure ſomething peculiar to the City, of whic it repreſents the Genius. There are two Medals Tiberius ſtamp'd on the ſame Occaſion, with th Inſcription to one of them, Civitatibus Aſiæ Reſtitut The Emperor is repreſented in both ſitting, with Patera in one Hand, and a Spear in the other.

* Vid. Gronovium, Fabretti, Bulifon. &c.

It is probable this might have been the Posture of the Statue, which in all likelihood does not lie far from the Place where they took up the Pedestal; for they say there were other great Pieces of Marble near it, and several of 'em inscrib'd, but that no body would be at the Charges of bringing them to light. The Pedestal itself lay neglected in an open Field when I saw it. I shall not be particular on the Ruins of the Amphitheatre, the ancient Reservoirs of Water, the Sibyl's Grotto, the Centum Cameræ, the Sepulchre of Agrippina, Nero's Mother, with several other Antiquities of less Note, that lie in the Neighbourhood of this Bay, and have been often describ'd by many others. I must confess, after having survey'd the Antiquities about Naples and Rome, I cannot but think that our Admiration of 'em does not so much arise out of their Greatness as Uncommonness.

There are indeed many extraordinary Ruins; but I believe a Traveller would not be so much astoniſh'd nish'd at 'em, did he find any Works of the sa kind in his own Country. Amphitheatres, T umphal Arches, Baths, Grottoes, Catacombs, R tunda's, Highways pav'd for so great a Leng Bridges of such an amazing Height, Subterrane Buildings for the Reception of Rain and Snow-W ter, are most of 'em at present out of Fashion, a only to be met with among the Antiquities of It We are therefore immediately surpris'd when we any considerable Sums laid out in any thing of th nature, tho' at the same time there is many a G thic Cathedral in England, that has cost more Pa and Money than several of these celebrated Work Among the Ruins of the old Heathen Temples the shew'd me what they call the Chamber of Ven which stands a little behind her Temple. It is wh ly dark, and has several Figures on the Ceili wrought in Stucco, that seem to represent Lust a Strength by the Emblems of naked Jupiters a Gladiators, Tritons, and Centaurs, &c. so that o would guess it has formerly been the Scene of man lewd Mysteries. On the other Side of Naples a the Catacombs. These must have been full Stench and Lothsomness, if the dead Bodies that la in 'em were left to rot in open Niches, as an Em nent Author of our own Country imagines. B upon examining 'em I find they were each of 'e stopp'd up; without doubt, as soon as the Corps wa laid in it. For at the Mouth of the Nich one al ways finds the Rock cut into little Channels, t fasten the Board or Marble that was to close it up and I think I did not see one which had not sti some Mortar sticking in it. In some I found Piece of Tiles that exactly tallied with the Channel, and in others a little Wall of Bricks, that sometime stopp'd up above a quarter of the Nich, the rest having ving been broken down. St. Proculus's Sepulcher ems to have a kind of Moſaic Work on its Cover- g; for I obſerv'd at one End of it ſeveral little ieces of Marble ranged together after that manner. Tis probable they were adorn'd, more or leſs, cording to the Quality of the Dead. One would deed wonder to find ſuch a Multitude of Niches nſtopp'd, and I can't imagine any Body ſhould take e Pains to do it, who was not in queſt of ſome ppos'd Treaſure.

Baiæ was the Winter Retreat of the old Romans, at being the proper Seaſon to enjoy the Baiani les, and the Mollis Lucrinus; as on the contrary, Tiber, Tuſculum, Preneſte, Alba, Cajeta, Mons Circeius, Anxur, and the like airy Mountains and romontaries, were their Retirements during the eats of Summer.

Dum nos blanda tenent jucundi Stagna Lucrini,

* Vid. Hor. Lib. ii. Od. 6.

You taste the cooling Breeze, where nearer home
The twentieth Pillar marks the Mile from Rome:

Then briny Seas and tasteful Springs farewel,
Where Fountain Nymphs confus'd with Nereids dwell;
In Winter You may all the World despise,
But now 'tis Tivoli that bears the Prize.

The Natural Curiosities about Naples are as numerous and extraordinary as the Artificial. I shall set them down as I have done the other, without any regard to their Situation. The Grotto del Cani is famous for the poisonous Steams which float within a Foot of its Surface. The Sides of the Grotto are mark'd with green, as high as the Malignity of the Vapour reaches. The common Experiments are as follow. A Dog, that has his Nose held in the Vapour, loses all Signs of Life in a very little time; but if carry'd into the open Air, or thrown into a Neighbouring Lake, he immediately recovers, if he is not quite gone. A Torch, Snuff and all, goes out in a Moment, when dipp'd into the Vapour. A Pistol cannot take fire in it. I split a Reed, and laid in the Channel of it a Train of Gun-powder, so that one End of the Reed was above the Vapour, and the other at the Bottom of it; and I found, tho' the Steam was strong enough to hinder a Pistol from taking fire in it, and to quench a lighted Torch, that it could not intercept the Train of Fire when it had once begun flashing, nor hinder it from running to the very End. This Experiment I repeated twice or thrice, to see if I could quite dissipate the Vapour, which I did in so great a Measure, that one might easily let off a Pistol in it. I observ'd how long a Dog

Dog was in expiring the firſt time, and after his Recovery, and found no ſenſible difference. A Viper bore it nine Minutes the firſt time we put him in, and ten the ſecond. When we brought it out after the firſt Trial, it took ſuch a vaſt quantity of Air into its Lungs, that it ſwell'd almoſt twice as big as before; and it was perhaps on this Stock of Air that it liv'd a Minute longer the ſecond time. Doctor Conner made a Diſcourſe in one of the Academies at Rome upon the Subject of this Grotto, which he has ſince printed in England. He attributes the Death of Animals, and the Extinction of Lights, to a great Rarefaction of the Air, caus'd by the Heat and Eruption of the Steams. But how is it poſſible for theſe Steams, tho' in never ſo great quantity, to reſiſt the preſſure of the whole Atmoſphere? And as for the Heat, it is but very inconſiderable. However, to ſatisfy myſelf, I plac'd a thin Vial, well ſtopp'd up with Wax, within the Smoke of the Vapour, which would certainly have burſt in an Air rarify'd enough to kill a Dog, or quench a Torch, but nothing follow'd upon it. However, to take away all further Doubt, I borrow'd a Weather-Glaſs, and ſo fix'd it in the Grotto, that the Stagnum was wholly cover'd with the Vapour; but I could not perceive the Quickſilver ſunk after half an Hour's ſtanding in it. This Vapour is generally ſuppos'd to be Sulphureous, tho' I can ſee no reaſon for ſuch a Suppoſition. He that dips his Hand in it finds no Smell that it leaves upon it; and tho' I put a whole Bundle of lighted Brimſtone Matches to the Smoke, they all went out in an Inſtant, as if immers'd in Water. Whatever is the Compoſition of the Vapour, let it have but one Quality of being very glewy or viſcous, and I believe it will mechanically ſolve all the Phænomena of the Grotto. Its Unctuouſneſs will make it heavy, and unfit for mounting higher than it does, unleſs the Heat of the Earth, which is juſt ſtrong enough to agitate, and bear it up at a little Diſtance from the Surface, were much greater than it is to rarify and ſcatter it. It will be too groſs and thick to keep the Lungs in play for any time, ſo that Animals will die in it ſooner or later, as their Blood circulates ſlower or faſter. Fire will live in it no longer than in Water, becauſe it wraps itſelf in the ſame manner about the Flame, and by its Continuity hinders any quantity of Air and Nitre from coming to its Succour. The Parts of it however are not ſo compact as thoſe of Liquors, nor therefore tenacious enough to intercept the Fire that has once caught a Train of Gun-powder; for which Reaſon they may be quite broken and diſpers'd by the Repetition of this Experiment. There is an unctuous clammy Vapour that ariſes from the Stum of Grapes, when they lie maſh'd together in the Vat, which puts out a Light when dipp'd into it, and perhaps would take away the Breath of weaker Animals, were it put to the Trial.

It would be endleſs to reckon up the different Baths, to be met with in a Country that ſo much abounds in Sulphur. There is ſcarce a Diſeaſe which has not one adapted to it. A Stranger is generally led into that they call Cicero's Bath, and ſeveral Voyage-Writers pretend there is a cold Vapour ariſing from the Bottom of it, which refreſhes thoſe who ſtoop into it. 'Tis true the Heat is much more ſupportable to one that ſtoops, than to one that ſtands upright, becauſe the Steams of Sulphur gather in the Hollow of the Arch about a Man's Head, and are therefore much thicker and warmer in that Part than at the Bottom. The three Lakes of Agnano, Avernus, and the Lucrin, have now nothing in them particular.

icular. The Monte Novo was thrown out by an Eruption of Fire that happen'd in the Place where the Mountain now ſtands. The Sulfatara is very ſurpriſing to one who has not ſeen Mount Veſuvio. But there is nothing about Naples, nor indeed in any Part of Italy, which deſerves our Admiration ſo much as this Mountain. I muſt confeſs the Idea I had of it did not anſwer the real Image of the Place when I came to ſee it; I ſhall therefore give the Deſcription of it as it then lay.

This Mountain ſtands at about ſix Engliſh Miles diſtance from Naples, tho', by reaſon of its Height, it ſeems much nearer to thoſe that ſurvey it from the Town. In our Way to it we paſs'd by what was one of thoſe Rivers of burning Matter, that ran from it in a late Eruption. This looks at a diſtance like new-plow'd Land; but as you come near it, you ſee nothing but a long Heap of heavy disjointed Clods lying one upon another. There are innumerable Cavities and Interſtices among the ſeveral Pieces, ſo that the Surface is all broken and irregular. Sometimes a great Fragment ſtands like a Rock above the reſt; ſometimes the whole Heap lies in a kind of Channel, and in other Places has nothing like Banks to confine it, but riſes four or five Foot high in the open Air, without ſpreading abroad on either Side. This, I think, is a plain Demonſtration that theſe Rivers were not, as they are uſually repreſented, ſo many Streams of running Matter; for how could a Liquid, that lay hardening by degrees, ſettle in ſuch a furrow'd uncompact Surface? Were the River a Confuſion of never ſo many different Bodies, if they had been all actually diſſolv'd, they would at leaſt have form'd one continu'd Cruſt, as we ſee the Scorium of Metals always gathers into a ſolid Piece, let it be compounded of a thouſand Heterogeneous Parts. I am apt

apt to think therefore that these huge unwieldy Lumps that now lie one upon another, as if thrown together by Accident, remain'd in the melted Matter rigid and unliquify'd, floating in it like Cakes of Ice in a River, and that, as the Fire and Ferment gradually abated, they adjusted themselves together as well as their irregular Figures would permit, and by this means fell into such an interrupted disorderly Heap as we now find it. What was the melted Matter lies at the Bottom out of Sight. After having quitted the Side of this long Heap, which was once a Stream of Fire, we came to the Roots of the Mountain, and had a very troublesom March to gain the Top of it. It is cover'd on all Sides with a kind of burnt Earth, very dry, and crumbled into Powder, as if it had been artificially sifted. It is very hot under the Feet, and mix'd with several burnt Stones and Cakes of Cinders, which have been thrown out at different times. A Man sinks almost a Foot in the Earth, and generally loses half a Step by sliding backwards. When we had climb'd this Mountain, we discover'd the Top of it to be a wide naked Plain, smoking with Sulphur in several Places, and probably undermin'd with Fire; for we concluded it to be hollow by the Sound it made under our Feet. In the midst of this Plain stands a high Hill in the shape of a Sugar-loaf, so very steep, that there would be no mounting or descending it, were it not made up of such a loose crumbled Earth as I have before described. The Air of this Place must be very much impregnated with Salt-petre, as appears by the Specks of it on the Sides of the Mountain, where one can scarce find a Stone that has not the Top white with it. After we had, with much ado, conquer'd this Hill, we saw in the midst of it the present Mouth of Vesuvio, that goes shelving down on all Sides, 'till above a hundred Yards Yards deep, as near as we could gueſs, and has about three or four hundred in the Diameter, for it ſeems a perfect Round. This vaſt Hollow is generally fill'd with Smoke; but, by the Advantage of a Wind that blew for us, we had a very clear and diſtinct ſight of it. The Sides appear all over ſtain'd with Mixtures of White, Green, Red, and Yellow, and have ſeveral Rocks ſtanding out of them that look like pure Brimſtone. The Bottom was intirely cover'd, and tho' we look'd very narrowly we could ſee nothing like a Hole in it; the Smoke breaking through ſeveral imperceptible Cracks in many Places. The very Middle was firm Ground when we ſaw it, as we concluded from the Stones we flung upon it, and I queſtion not but one might then have croſs'd the Bottom, and have gone up on the other Side of it with very little Danger, unleſs from ſome accidental Breath of Wind. In the late Eruptions this great Hollow was like a vaſt Cauldron fill'd with glowing and melted Matter, which, as it boil'd over in any Part, ran down the Sides of the Mountain, and made five ſuch Rivers as that beforemention'd. In proportion as the Heat ſlacken'd, this burning Matter muſt have ſubſided within the Bowels of the Mountain, and as it ſunk very leiſurely had time to Cake together, and form the Bottom which covers the Mouth of that dreadful Vault that lies underneath it. The next Eruption or Earthquake will probably break in pieces this falſe Bottom, and quite change the preſent Face of Things.

This whole Mountain, ſhap'd like a Sugar-loaf, has been made at ſeveral times, by the prodigious Quantities of Earth and Cinders, which have been flung up out of the Mouth that lies in the midſt of them; ſo that it increaſes in the Bulk at every Eruption, the Aſhes ſtill falling down the Sides of it, like the Sand in an Hour-Glaſs. A Gentleman of Naples told me, that in his Memory it had gained twenty Foot in thickneſs, and I queſtion not but in length of time it will cover the whole Plain, and make one Mountain with that on which it now ſtands.

In thoſe Parts of the Sea, that are not far from the Roots of this Mountain, they find ſometimes a very fragrant Oil, which is ſold dear, and makes a rich Perfume. The Surface of the Sea is, for a little Space, cover'd with its Bubbles, during the time that it riſes, which they skim off into their Boats, and afterwards ſet a ſeparating in Pots and Jars. They ſay its Sources never run but in calm warm weather. The Agitations of the Water perhaps hinder them from diſcovering it at other times.

Among the natural Curioſities of Naples, I cannot forbear mentioning their manner of furniſhing the Town with Snow, which they here uſe inſtead of Ice, becauſe, as they ſay, it cools or congeals any Liquor ſooner. There is a great Quantity of it conſum'd yearly; for they drink very few Liquors, not ſo much as Water, that have not lain in Freſco; and every Body, from the higheſt to the loweſt, makes uſe of it, inſomuch that a Scarcity of Snow would raiſe a Mutiny at Naples, as much as a Dearth of Corn or Proviſions in another Country. To prevent this the King has ſold the Monopoly of it to certain Perſons, who are oblig'd to furniſh the City with it all the Year at ſo much the Pound. They have a high Mountain at about eighteen Miles from the Town, which has ſeveral Pits dug into it. Here they employ many poor People at ſuch a Seaſon of the Year to roll in vaſt Balls of Snow, which they ram together, and cover from the Sunſhine. Out of theſe Reſervoirs of Snow they cut cut ſeveral Lumps, as they have occaſion for them, and ſend them on Aſſes to the Sea-ſide, where they are carry'd off in Boats, and diſtributed to ſeveral Shops at a ſettled Price, that from time to time ſupply the whole City of Naples. While the Banditti continu'd their Diſorders in this Kingdom, they often put the Snow-Merchants under Contribution, and threaten'd them, if they appear'd tardy in their Payments, to deſtroy their Magazines, which they ſay might eaſily have been effected by the Infuſion of ſome Barrels of Oil.

It would have been tedious to have put down the many Deſcriptions that the Latin Poets have made of ſeveral of the Places mention'd in this Chapter: I ſhall therefore conclude it with the general Map which Silius Italicus has given us of this great Bay of Naples. Moſt of the Places he mentions lie within the ſame Proſpect; and if I have paſs'd over any of them, it is becauſe I ſhall take them in my way by Sea, from Naples to Rome.

Lib. xii.

Averno next he ſhow'd his wond'ring Gueſt,
Averno now with milder Virtues bleſs'd;
Black with ſurrounding Foreſts then it ſtood,
That hung above, and darken'd all the Flood:
Clouds of unwholſom Vapours, rais'd on high,
The flutt'ring Bird intangled in the Sky,
Whilſt all around the gloomy Proſpect ſpread
An awful Horror, and religious Dread.
Hence to the Borders of the Marſh they go,
That mingles with the baleful Streams below,
And ſometimes with a mighty Yawn, 'tis ſaid,
Opens a diſmal Paſſage to the Dead,
Who pale with Fear the rending Earth ſurvey,
And ſtartle at the ſudden Flaſh of Day.
The dark Cimmerian Grotto then he paints,
Deſcribing all its old Inhabitants, That

That in the deep Infernal City dwell'd,
And lay in everlaſting Night conceal'd.
Advancing ſtill, the ſpacious Fields he ſhow'd,
That with the ſmother'd Heat of Brimſtone glow'd;
Through frequent Cracks the ſteaming Sulphur broke,
And cover'd all the blaſted Plain with Smoke:
Impriſon'd Fires, in the cloſe Dungeons pent,
Roar to get looſe, and ſtruggle for a Vent,
Eating their Way, and undermining all,
'Till with a mighty Burſt whole Mountains fall.
Here, as 'tis ſaid, the Rebel Giants lie,
And, when to move th' incumbent Load they try,
Aſcending Vapours on the Day prevail,
The Sun looks ſickly, and the Skies grow pale.
Next to the diſtant Iſle his Sight he turns,
That o'er the thunderſtruck Tiphœus burns:
Enrag'd his wide-extended Jaws expire
In angry Whirlwinds, Blaſphemies and Fire,
Threat'ning, if looſen'd from his dire Abodes,
Again to challenge Jove, and fight the Gods.
On Mount Veſuvio next he fixt his Eyes,
And ſaw the ſmoking Tops confus'dly riſe;
(A hideous Ruin!) that with Earthquakes rent
A ſecond Ætna to the View preſent.
Miſeno's Cape and Bauli laſt he view'd,
That on the Sea's extremeſt Borders ſtood.

Silius Italicus here takes notice, that the poiſonous Vapours, which aroſe from the Lake Averno in Hannibal's Time, were quite diſpers'd at the time when he wrote his Poem; becauſe Agrippa, who liv'd between Hannibal and Silius, had cut down the Woods, that incloſ'd the Lake, and hinder'd theſe noxious Steams from diſſipating, which were immediately ſcatter'd as ſoon as the Winds and freſh Air were let in among them.

ISLE of CAPREA.

HAving ſtaid longer at Naples than I at firſt deſign'd, I could not diſpenſe with myſelf from making a little Voyage to the Iſle of Caprea, as being very deſirous to ſee a Place, which had been the Retirement of Auguſtus for ſome time, and the Reſidence of Tiberius for ſeveral Years. The Iſland lies four Miles in Length from Eaſt to Weſt, and about one in Breadth. The Weſtern Part, for about two Miles in Length, is a continu'd Rock vaſtly high, and inacceſſible on the Sea-ſide. It has however the greateſt Town in the Iſland, that goes under the Name of Ano-Caprea, and is in ſeveral Places cover'd with a very fruitful Soil. The Eaſtern End of the Iſle riſes up in Precipices very near as high, tho' not quite ſo long as the Weſtern. Between theſe Eaſtern and Weſtern Mountains lies a Slip of lower Ground, which runs acroſs the Iſland, and is one of the pleaſanteſt Spots I have ſeen. It is hid with Vines, Figs, Oranges, Almonds, Olives, Myrtles, and Fields of Corn, which looks extremely freſh and beautiful, and make up the moſt delightful little Landskip imaginable, when they are ſurvey'd from the Tops of the neighbouring Mountains. Here ſtands the Town of Caprea, the Biſhop's Palace, and two or three Convents.

Convents. In the midſt of this fruitful Tract of Land riſes a Hill, that was probably cover'd with Buildings in Tiberius's Time. There are ſtill ſeveral Ruins on the Sides of it, and about the Top are found two or three dark Galleries, low built, and cover'd with Maſons Work, tho' at preſent they appear overgrown with Graſs. I enter'd one of them that is a hundred Paces in Length. I obſerved, as ſome of the Countrymen were digging into the Sides of this Mountain, that what I took for ſolid Earth was only Heaps of Brick, Stone, and other Rubbiſh, skinn'd over with a Covering of Vegetables. But the moſt conſiderable Ruin is that which ſtands on the very Extremity of the Eaſtern Promontory, where are ſtill ſome Apartments left, very high and arch'd at Top. I have not indeed ſeen the Remains of any ancient Roman Buildings, that have not been Roof'd with either Vaults or Arches. The Rooms I am mentioning ſtand deep in the Earth, and have nothing like Windows or Chimnies, which makes me think they were formerly either Bathing-places or Reſervoirs of Water. An old Hermit lives at preſent among the Ruins of this Palace, who loſt his Companion a few Years ago by a fall from the Precipice. He told me they had often found Medals and Pipes of Lead, as they dug among the Rubbiſh, and that not many Years ago they diſcover'd a pav'd Road running under Ground from the Top of the Mountain to the Sea-ſide, which was afterwards confirm'd to me by a Gentleman of the Iſland. There is a very noble Proſpect from this Place. On the one ſide lies a vaſt Extent of Seas, that runs abroad further than the Eye can reach. Juſt oppoſite ſtands the green Promontory of Surrentum, and on the other ſide the whole Circuit of the Bay of Naples. This Proſpect, according according to Tacitus, was more agreeable before the burning of Veſuvio. That Mountain probably, which after the firſt Eruption look'd like a great Pile of Aſhes, was in Tiberius's time ſhaded with Woods and Vineyards; for I think Martial's Epigram may ſerve here as a Comment to Tacitus.

Hic eſt pampineis viridis Veſuvius umbris,
Preſſerat hic madidos nobilis uva lacus.
Hæc juga, quàm Niſæ colles, plùs Bacchus amavit:
Hoc nuper Satyri monte dedere choros.
Hæc Veneris ſedes, Lacedæmone gratior illi;
Hic locus Herculeo nomine clarus erat.
Cuncta jacent flammis et triſti merſa favillâ:
Nec ſuperi vellent hoc licuiſſe ſibi.

Lib. ii. Epigr. 105.

Veſuvio, cover'd with the fruitful Vine,
Here flouriſh'd once, and ran with Floods of Wine;
Here Bacchus oft to the cool Shades retir'd,
And his own native Niſa leſs admir'd;
Oft to the Mountain's airy Tops advanc'd,
The friſking Satyrs on the Summits danc'd;
Alcides here, here Venus grac'd the Shore,
Nor lov'd her Fav'rite Lacedæmon more:
Now Piles of Aſhes, ſpreading all around,
In undiſtinguiſh'd Heaps deform the Ground.
The Gods themſelves the ruin'd Seats bemoan,
And blame the Miſchiefs that themſelves have done.

This View muſt ſtill have been more pleaſant, when the whole Bay was encompaſs'd with ſo long a Range of Buildings, that it appear'd to thoſe, who look'd on it at a diſtance, but as one continu'd City. On both the Shores of that fruitful Bottom, which I have before mention'd, are ſtill ſtill to be ſeen the Marks of ancient Edifices; particularly on that which looks towards the South there is a little kind of Mole, which ſeems to have been the Foundation of a Palace; unleſs we may ſuppoſe that the Pharos of Caprea ſtood there, which Statius takes notice of in his Poem that invites his Wife to Naples, and is, I think, the moſt natural among the Sylvæ.

Nec deſunt variæ circùm oblectamina vitæ;
Sive vaporiferas, blandiſſima littora, Baias,
Enthea fatidicæ ſeu viſere tecta Sibyllæ
Dulce ſit, Iliacoque jugum memorabile remo:
Seu tibi Bacchei vineta madentia Gauri,
Teleboumque domos, trepidis ubi dulcia nautis
Lumina noctivagæ tollit Pharus æmula Lunæ, Caraque non molli juga Surrentina Lyæo.
Sylv. 5. Lib. iii. v. 95.

The bliſsful Seats with endleſs Pleaſures flow,
Whether to Baia's Sunny Shores you go,
And view the Sulphur to the Baths convey'd,
Or the dark Grotte of the Prophetic Maid,
Or ſteep Miſeno from the Trojan nam'd,
Or Gaurus for its flowing Vintage fam'd,
Or Caprea, where the Lanthorn fix'd on high
Shines like a Moon through the benighted Sky,
While by its Beams the wary Sailor ſteers;
Or where Surrentum, clad in Vines, appears.

They found in Ano Caprea, ſome Years ago, a Statue and a rich Pavement under Ground, as they had occaſion to turn up the Earth that lay upon them. One ſtill ſees, on the Bendings of theſe Mountains, the Marks of ſeveral ancient Scales of Stairs, by which they us'd to aſcend them. The whole whole Iſland is ſo unequal that there were but few Diverſions to be found in it without Doors; but what recommended it moſt to Tiberius was its wholſome Air, which is warm in Winter and cool in Summer, and its inacceſſible Coaſts, which are generally ſo very ſteep, that a handful of Men might defend them againſt a powerful Army.

We need not doubt but Tiberius had his different Reſidences, according as the Seaſons of the Year, and his different Sets of Pleaſure requir'd. Suetonius ſays, Duodecim Villas totidem nominibus ornavit. i. e. He diſtinguiſh'd twelve Towns by as many Names. The whole Iſland was probably cut into ſeveral eaſy Aſcents, planted with variety of Palaces, and adorn'd with as great a multitude of Groves and Gardens as the Situation of the Place would ſuffer. The Works under Ground were however more extraordinary than thoſe above it; for the Rocks were all under-min'd with Highways, Grottoes, Galleries, Bagnios, and ſeveral ſubterraneous Retirements, that ſuited with the brutal Pleaſures of the Emperor. One would indeed very much wonder to ſee ſuch ſmall Appearances of the many Works of Art, that were formerly to be met with in this Iſland, were we not told that the Romans, after the Death of Tiberius, ſent hither an Army of Pioneers on purpoſe to demoliſh the Buildings, and deface the Beauties of the Iſland.

In ſailing round Caprea we were entertain'd with many rude Proſpects of Rocks and Precipices, that riſe in ſeveral Places half a Mile high in Perpendicular. At the Bottom of them are Caves and Grottoes form'd by the continual breaking of the Waves upon them. I enter'd one which the Inhabitants call Grotto Obſcuro, and, after the Light of the Sun was a little worn off my Eyes, could ſee all the Parts of ſ it diſtinctly, by a glimmering Reflexion that lay'd upon them from the Surface of the Water. The Mouth is low and narrow; but after having en-er'd pretty far in, the Grotto opens itſelf on both ſides in an oval Figure of an hundred Yards from ne Extremity to the other, as we were told, for it would not have been ſafe meaſuring of it. The Roof s vaulted, and diſtils freſh Water from every Part f it, which fell upon us as faſt as the firſt Drop-ings of a Shower. The Inhabitants and Neapoli-ans, who have heard of Tiberius's Grottoes, will ave this to be one of them; but there are ſeveral eaſons that ſhow it to be natural. For beſides the ittle uſe we can conceive of ſuch a dark Cavern of alt Waters, there are no where any Marks of the Chiſel; the Sides are of a ſoft mouldering Stone, nd one ſees many of the like hollow Spaces worn n the Bottoms of the Rocks, as they are more or ſs able to reſiſt the Impreſſions of the Water that eats againſt them.

Not far from this Grotto lie the Sirenum Scopuli, hich Virgil and Ovid mention in Æneas's Voyage; hey are two or three ſharp Rocks that ſtand about Stone's-throw from the South-ſide of the Iſland, nd are generally beaten by Waves and Tempeſts, hich are much more violent on the South than on he North of Caprea.

amque adeò Scopulos Sirenum advecta ſubibat; Difficiles quondam, multorumque oſſibus albos:
um rauca aſſiduo longè ſale ſaxa ſonabant.
Æn. 5. v. 864.

I have before said that they often find Medals i this Island. Many of those they call the Spintrie

I know none of the Antiquaries that have writte on this Subject, and find nothing satisfactory of where I thought it most likely to be met with,
Patin's Edition of Suetonius illustrated by Medal
Those I have convers'd with about it, are of op
nion they were made to ridicule the Brutality Tiberius, tho' I cannot but believe they were stamp by his Order. They are unquestionably antiqu and no bigger than Medals of the third Magnitud
They bear on one side some lewd Invention of th hellish Society, which Suetonius calls Monstrosi cu
cubitûs repertores, and on the other the Numb of the Medal. I have seen of them as high a to twenty. I can't think they were made as Jest on the Emperor, because Rallery on Coins of a modern Date. I know but two in the Upp Empire, besides the Spintriæ, that lie under an Suspicion of it. The first is one of Marcus Aurelius where, in Compliment to the Emperor and Empre
they have stamp'd on the Reverse the Figure Venus caressing Mars, and endeavouring to deta him from the Wars.

Who oft retires from fighting Fields, to prove

The Venus has Fauſtina's Face; her Lover is a naked Figure with a Helmet on his Head, and a Shield on his Arm.

Qui tegitur parmâ et galeâ — Juv. Sat. 5. v. 153.

Such ſcabbed Fruit you eat, as, in his Tent,
With Helmet arm'd and Shield, the Soldier gnaws.

This unluckily brings to mind Faustina's Fondne for the Gladiator, and is therefore interpreted b many as a hidden Piece of Satire. But, besides th such a Thought was inconsistent with the Gravi of a Senate, how can one imagine that the Fathe would have dar'd to affront the Wife of Aurelius and the Mother of Commodus, or that they cou think of giving Offence to an Empress whom the afterwards deify'd, and to an Emperor that was th Darling of the Army and People.

The other Medal is a golden one of Gallienus preserv'd in the French King's Cabinet; it is inscrib ed Gallienæ Augustæ, Pax Ubique, and was stamp at a time when the Emperor's Father was in Bon dage, and the Empire torn in pieces by several Pre tenders to it. Yet, if one considers the strange Stu pidity of this Emperor, with the senseless Securit which appears in several of his Sayings that are sti left on Record, one may very well believe this Coi was of his own Invention. We may be sure, i Rallery had once enter'd the old Roman Coins, we should have been overstock'd with Medals of this nature; if we consider there were often Rival Em perors proclaim'd at the same time, who endeavour'd at the lessening of each other's Character, and that most of them were succeeded by such as were Ene mies to their Predecessor. These Medals of Tiberius were never current Money, but rather of the na ture of Medalions, which seem to have been made on purpose to perpetuate the Discoveries of that infa mous Society. Suetonius tells us, that their mon strous Inventions were register'd several ways, and preserv'd in the Emperor's private Apartment. Cu bicula plurifariam disposita tabellis ac Sigillis lasciviss simarum picturarum et figurarum adornavit, libriqu Elephantidis instruxit: ne cui in Operâ edendâ exem

NAPLES

TO

ROME, by SEA.

I Took a Felucca at Naples to carry me to Rome, that I might not be forced to run over the ſame Sights a ſecond time, and might have an Opportunity of ſeeing many things in a Road, which our Voyage-Writers have not ſo particularly deſcrib'd. As, in my Journey from Rome to Naples, I had Horace for my Guide, ſo I had the Pleaſure of ſeeing my Voyage from Naples to Rome deſcribed by Virgil. It is indeed much eaſier to trace out the Way Æneas took, than that of Horace, becauſe Virgil has mark'd it out by Capes, Iſlands, and other Parts of Nature, which are not ſo ſubject to change or decay, as are Towns, Cities, and the Works of Art. Mount Pauſilypo makes a beautiful Proſpect to thoſe who paſs by it: At a ſmall diſtance from it lies the little Iſland of Niſida, adorned with a great variety of Plantations, riſing one above another in ſo beautiful an Order, that the whole

Iſland looks like a large Terrace-Garden. It h two little Ports, and is not at preſent troubl with any of thoſe noxious Steams that Luc mentions.

Neſis' high Rocks ſuch Stygian Air produce,
And the blue breathing Peſtilence diffuſe.

From Niſida we row'd to Cape Miſeno. The Ex tremity of this Cape has a long Cleft in it, whic was inlarg'd and cut into Shape by Agrippa, wh made this the great Port for the Roman Fleet tha ſerv'd in the Mediterranean; as that of Raven held the Ships deſign'd for the Adriatic and Archip lago. The higheſt End of this Promontory riſes i the faſhion of a Sepulcher or Monument to thoſe tha ſurvey it from the Land, which perhaps might occa
ſion Virgil's burying Miſenus under it. I have ſee a grave Italian Author, who has written a ver large Book on the Campania Felice, that, from Vir gil's Deſcription of this Mountain, concludes i was call'd Aërius before Miſenus had given it a new Name.

Thus was his Friend interr'd; and deathleſs Fame
Still to the lofty Cape conſigns his Name. Dryden.

There are ſtill to be ſeen a few Ruins of old Miſenum; but the moſt conſiderable Antiquity of the Place is a Set of Galleries that are hewn into the Rock, and are much more ſpacious than the Piſcina Mirabilis. Some will have them to have been a Reſervoir of Water; but others more probably ſuppoſe them to have been Nero's Baths. I lay the firſt Night on the Iſle of Procita, which is pretty well cultivated, and contains about four thouſand Inhabitants, who are all Vaſſals to the Marquis de Vaſto.

The next Morning I went to ſee the Iſle of Iſchia, that ſtands further out into the Sea. The ancient Poets call it Inarime, and lay Typhœus under it, by reaſon of its Eruptions of Fire. There has been no Eruption for near theſe three hundred Years. The laſt was very terrible, and deſtroy'd a whole City. At preſent there are ſcarce any Marks left of a ſubterraneous Fire; for the Earth is cold, and overrun with Graſs and Shrubs, where the Rocks will ſuffer it. There are indeed ſeveral little Cracks in it, thro' which there iſſues a conſtant Smoke; but 'tis probable this ariſes from the warm Springs that feed the many Baths, with which this Iſland is plentifully ſtock'd. I obſerv'd, about one of theſe breathing Paſſages, a Spot of Myrtles that flouriſh within the Steam of theſe Vapours, and have a continual Moiſture hanging upon them. On the South of Iſchia lies a round Lake of about three Quarters of a Mile diameter, ſeparate from the Sea by a narrow Tract of Land. It was formerly a Roman Port. On the North End of this Iſland ſtands the Town and Caſtle, on an exceeding high Rock, divided from the Body of the Iſland, and inacceſſible to an Enemy on all Sides. This Iſland is larger, but much more Rocky and Barren than Procita. Virgil makes them both ſhake at the Fall of part of the Mole of Baiæ, that ſtood at a few Miles diſtance from them.

Qualis in Euboico Baiarum littore quondam

Æn. ix. v. 710.

Not with leſs Ruin than the Baian Mole
(Rais'd on the Seas the Surges to control)
At once comes tumbling down the rocky Wall;
Prone to the Deep the Stones disjointed fall
Off the vaſt Pile; the ſcatter'd Ocean flies;
Black Sands, diſcolour'd Froth, and mingled Mud ariſe.
The frighted Billows roll, and ſeek the Shores:
Trembles high Prochyta, and Iſchia rores:
Typhœus rores beneath, by Jove's Command,
Aſtoniſh'd at the Flaw that ſhakes the Land;
Soon ſhifts his weary Side, and ſcarce awake,
With Wonder feels the Weight preſs lighter on his Back. Dryden.

I don't ſee why Virgil, in this noble Compariſon, has given the Epithet of Alta to Prochyta; for it is not only no high Iſland in itſelf, but is much lower than Iſchia, and all the Points of Land that lie within its Neighbourhood. I ſhould think Alta was join'd adverbially with Tremit, did Virgil make uſe of ſo equivocal equivocal a Syntax. I cannot forbear inſerting, in this Place, the lame Imitation Silius Italicus has made of the foregoing Paſſage.

Haud aliter ſtructo Tyrrhena ad littora Saxo,
Pugnatura fretis ſubter cæciſque procellis
Pila immane ſonans, impingitur ardua ponto;
Immugit Nereus, diviſaque cærula pulſu
Illiſum accipiunt irata ſub æquora montem. Lib. iv.

So vaſt a Fragment of the Baian Mole,
That, fix'd amid the Tyrrhene Waters, braves
The beating Tempeſts and inſulting Waves,
Thrown from its Baſis with a dreadful Sound,
Daſhes the broken Billows all around,
And with reſiſtleſs Force the Surface cleaves,
That in its angry Waves the falling Rock receives.

The next Morning going to Cumæ thro' a very pleaſant Path, by the Mare Mortuum, and the Elyſian Fields, we ſaw in our way a great many Ruins of Sepulchers, and other ancient Edifices. Cumæ is at preſent utterly deſtitute of Inhabitants, ſo much is it chang'd ſince Lucan's time, if the Poem to Piſa be his.

—— Acidaliâ quæ condidit Alite muros

Where the fam'd Walls of fruitful Naples lie,
That may for Multitudes with Cumæ vie.

They ſhow here the Remains of Apollo's Temple, which all the Writers of the Antiquities of this Place ſuppoſe to have been the ſame Virgil deſcribes in his Sixth Æneid, as built by Dædalus, and that the very Story, which Virgil there mentions, was actually engraven on the Front of it.

Redditus his primùm terris tibi, Phœbe, ſacravit Remigium Alarum, poſuitque immania Templa.
In foribus lethum Androgeo: tum pendere pœnas
Cecropidæ juſſi, miſerum! Septena quotannis Corpora Natorum: Stat ductis ſortibus urna.
Contra elata mari reſpondet Gneſſia tellus, &c.
Æn. vi. v. 19.

To the Cumæan Coaſt at length he came,
And, here alighting, built his coſtly Frame
Inſcrib'd to Phœbus, here he hung on high
The Steerage of his Wings that cut the Sky;
Then o'er the lofty Gate his Art emboſs'd
Androgeos' Death, and Off'rings to his Ghoſt,
Sev'n Youths from Athens yearly ſent to meet
The Fate appointed by revengeful Crete;
And next to thoſe the dreadful Urn was plac'd,
In which the deſtin'd Names by Lots were caſt.
Dryden.

Among other ſubterraneous Works there is the beginning of a Paſſage, which is ſtopp'd up, within leſs than a hundred Yards of the Entrance, by the Earth that is fallen into it. They ſuppoſe it to have been the other Mouth of the Sibyl's Grotto. It lies indeed in the ſame Line with the Entrance near the Avernus, is fac'd alike with the Opus Reticulatum, and has ſtill the Marks of Chambers that have been cut into the Sides of it. Among the many Fables and Conjectures which have been made on this Grotto, I think it is highly probable, that it was once inhabited by ſuch as perhaps thought it a better Shelter againſt the Sun than than any other kind of Building, or at leaſt that it was made with ſmaller Trouble and Expence. As for the Moſaic and other Works that may be found in it, they may very well have been added in later Ages, according as they thought fit to put the Place to different Uſes. The Story of the Cimmerians is indeed clogg'd with Improbabilities, as Strabo relates it; but it is very likely there was in it ſome Foundation of Truth. Homer's Deſcription of the Cimmerians, whom he places in theſe Parts, anſwers very well to the Inhabitants of ſuch a long dark Cavern.

The gloomy Race, in ſubterraneous Cells,
Among ſurrounding Shades and Darkneſs dwells;
Hid in th' unwholſom Covert of the Night,
They ſhun the Approaches of the chearful Light:
The Sun ne'er viſits their obſcure Retreats,
Nor when he runs his Courſe, nor when he ſets.
Unhappy Mortals! —— Odyſſ. Lib. x.

Tu quoque littoribus noſtris, Æneïa nutrix,
Æternam moriens famam, Cajeta, dediſti:
Et nunc ſervat honos ſedem tuus, oſſaque nomen
Heſperiâ in magnâ, ſi qua eſt ea gloria, ſignat.
Æn. vii. v. 1.

And thou, O Matron of Immortal Fame,
Here dying, to the Shore haſt left thy Name:
Cajeta ſtill the Place is call'd from Thee,
The Nurſe of great Æneas' Infancy.
Here reſt thy Bones in rich Heſperia's Plains;
Thy Name ('tis all a Ghoſt can have) remains.
Dryden.

I ſaw at Cajeta the Rock of Marble, ſaid to be cleft by an Earthquake at our Saviour's Death. There is written over the Chapel Door, that leads into into the Crack, the Words of the Evangeliſt Ecce terræ motus factus eſt magnus: Behold, there was a great Earthquake! I believe every one who ſees this vaſt Rent in ſo high a Rock, and obſerves how exactly the Convex Parts of one Side tally with the Concave of the other, muſt be ſatisfy'd that it was the Effect of an Earthquake, tho' I queſtion not but it either happen'd long before the time of the Latin Writers, or in the darker Ages ſince; for otherwiſe I cannot but think they would have taken notice of its Original. The Port, Town, Caſtle, and Antiquities of this Place have been often deſcribed.

We touch'd next at Monte Circeio, which Homer calls Inſula Æëa, whether it be that it was formerly an Iſland, or that the Greek Sailors of his time thought it ſo. It is certain they might eaſily have been deceiv'd by its Appearance, as being a very high Mountain join'd to the main Land by a narrow Tract of Earth, that is many Miles in Length, and almoſt of a level with the Surface of the Water. The End of this Promontory is very rocky, and mightily expos'd to the Winds and Waves, which perhaps gave the firſt Riſe to the howlings of Wolves, and the roarings of Lions, that us'd to be heard thence. This I had a very lively Idea of, being forc'd to lie under it a whole Night. Virgil's Deſcription of Æneas paſſing by this Coaſt can never be enough admir'd. It is worth while to obſerve how, to heighten the Horror of the Deſcription, he has prepar'd the Reader's Mind, by the Solemnity of Cajeta's Funeral, and the dead Stilneſs of the Night.

At pius exequiis Æneas ritè ſolutis,
Aggere compoſito tumuli, poſtquam alta quierunt Æquora,

Æquora, tendit iter velis, portumque relinquit.
Adſpirant auræ in noctem, nec candida curſus
Luna negat: Splendet tremulo ſub lumine pontus.
Proxima Circææ raduntur littora terræ:
Dives inacceſſos ubi Solis filia lucos
Aſſiduo reſonat cantu, tectiſque ſuperbis
Urit odoratam nocturna in lumina cedrum,
Arguto tenues percurrens pectine telas:
Hinc exaudiri gemitus, iræque Leonum
Vincla recuſantum, et ſerâ ſub nocte rudentum:
Setigerique ſues atque in præſepibus urſi
Sævire, ac formæ magnorum ululare luporum:
Quos hominum ex facie Dea ſæva potentibus herbis
Induerat Circe in vultus ac terga ferarum.
Quæ ne monſtra pii paterentur talia Troës
Delati in portus, neu littora dira ſubirent,
Neptunus ventis implevit vela ſecundis,
Atque fugam dedit, et præter vada fervida vexit.

Æn. vii. v. 5.

Now when the Prince her Funeral Rites had paid,
He plow'd the Tyrrhene Seas with Sails diſplay'd;
From Land a gentle Breeze aroſe, by Night
Serenely ſhone the Stars, the Moon was bright,
And the Sea trembled with her Silver Light.
Now near the Shelves of Circe's Shores they run,
(Circe the rich, the Daughter of the Sun)
A dang'rous Coaſt: The Goddeſs waſtes her Days
In joyous Songs, the Rocks reſound her Lays:
In Spinning or the Loom, ſhe ſpends her Night,
And Cedar Brands ſupply her Father's Light.
From hence were heard, (rebellowing to the Main)
The roars of Lions that refuſe the Chain,
The Grunts of briſtled Boars, and Groans of Bears,
And Herds of howling Wolves that ſtun the Sailors Ears.

Theſe

Theſe from their Caverns, at the Cloſe of Night,
Fill the ſad Iſle with Horror and Affright.
Darkling they mourn their Fate, whom Circe's Pow'r,
(That watch'd the Moon, and Planetary Hour)
With Words and wicked Herbs, from Human Kind
Had alter'd, and in brutal Shapes confin'd.
Which Monſters leſt the Trojan's pious Hoſt
Should bear, or touch upon th' inchanted Coaſt;
Propitious Neptune ſteer'd their Courſe by Night
With riſing Gales, that ſped their happy Flight.
Dryden.

Virgil calls this Promontory Æëæ Inſula Circæ in the third Æneid; but 'tis the Hero, and not the Poet that ſpeaks. It may however be look'd upon as an Intimation, that he himſelf thought it an Iſland in Æneas's Time. As for the thick Woods, which not only Virgil but Homer mentions, in the beautiful Deſcription that Plutarch and Longinus have taken notice of, they are moſt of them grubbed up ſince the Promontory has been cultivated and inhabited; tho' there are ſtill many Spots of it which ſhow the natural Inclination of the Soil leans that way.

The next Place we touch'd upon was Nettuno, where we found nothing remarkable beſides the extreme Poverty and Lazineſs of the Inhabitants. At two Miles diſtance from it lie the Ruins of Antium, that are ſpread over a great Circuit of Land. There are ſtill left the Foundations of ſeveral Buildings, and, what are always the laſt Parts that periſh in a Ruin, many ſubterraneous Grottoes and Paſſages of a great Length. The Foundations of Nero's Port are ſtill to be ſeen. It was altogether Artificial, and compos'd of huge Moles running round it, in a kind of Circular Figure, except where the Ships were were to enter, and had about three quarters of a Mile in its ſhorteſt Diameter. Tho' the making of this Port muſt have coſt prodigious Sums of Money, we find no Medal of it, and yet the ſame Emperor has a Medal ſtruck in his own Name for the Port of Oſtia, which in reality was a Work of his Predeceſſor Claudius. The laſt Pope was at conſiderable Charges to make a little kind of Harbour in this Place, and to convey freſh Water to it, which was one of the Artifices of the Grand Duke, to divert his Holineſs from his Project of making Civitavecchia a free Port. There lies, between Antium and Nettuno, a Cardinal's Villa, which is one of the pleaſanteſt for Walks, Fountains, Shades, and Proſpects that I ever ſaw.

Antium was formerly famous for the Temple of Fortune that ſtood in it. All agree there were two Fortunes worſhipped here, which Suetonius calls the Fortunæ Antiates, and Martial the Sorores Antii. Some are of Opinion, that by theſe two Goddeſſes were meant the two Nemeſes, one of which rewarded good Men, as the other puniſh'd the wicked. Fabretti and others are apt to believe, that by the two Fortunes were only meant in general the Goddeſs who ſent Proſperity, or ſhe who ſent Afflictions to Mankind, and produce in their Behalf an ancient Monument found in this very Place, and ſuperſcrib'd Fortunæ Felici; which indeed may favour one Opinion as well as the other, and ſhows at leaſt they are not miſtaken in the general Senſe of their Diviſion. I don't know whether any Body has taken notice, that this double Function of the Goddeſs gives a conſiderable Light and Beauty to the Ode which Horace has addreſs'd to her. The whole Poem is a Prayer to Fortune, that ſhe would proſper Cæſar's Arms, and confound his Enemies,

ſo

ſo that each of the Goddeſſes has her Task aſſign'd in the Poet's Prayer; and we may obſerve the Invocation is divided between the two Deities, the firſt Line relating indifferently to either. That which I have mark'd ſpeaks to the Goddeſs of Proſperity, or, if you pleaſe, to the Nemeſis of the Good, and the other to the Goddeſs of Adverſity, or to the Nemeſis of the Wicked.

O Diva gratum quæ regis Antium,
Præſens vel imo tollere de gradu
Mortale corpus, vel ſuperbos
Vertere funeribus triumphos! &c. Od. xxv. Lib. i.

Great Goddeſs, Antium's Guardian Power,
Whoſe Force is ſtrong, and quick to raiſe
The loweſt to the higheſt Place;
Or with a wondrous Fall
To bring the haughty lower,
And turn proud Triumphs to a Funeral, &c.
Creech.

If we take the firſt Interpretation of the two Fortunes for the double Nemeſis, the Compliment to Cæſar is the greater, and the fifth Stanza clearer than the Commentators uſually make it; for the Clavi trabales, cunei, uncus, liquidumque plumbum, were actually uſed in the Puniſhment of Criminals.

Our next Stage brought us to the Mouth of the Tiber, into which we enter'd with ſome Danger, the Sea being generally very rough in the Parts, where the River ruſhes into it. The Seaſon of the Year, the Muddineſs of the Stream, with the many green Trees hanging over it, put me in mind of the delightful Image that Virgil has given us when Æneas took the firſt View of it.

Atque

Atque hic Æneas ingentem ex æquore lucum
Proſpicit: hunc inter fluvio Tiberinus amœno,
Vorticibus rapidis et multâ flavus arenâ,
In mare prorumpit: variæ circumque ſupraque
Aſſuetæ ripis volucres et fluminis alveo,
Æthera mulcebant cantu, lucoque volabant.
Flectere iter Sociis, terræque advertere proras
Imperat, et lætus fluvio ſuccedit opaco. Æn. vii. v. 29.

The Trojan from the Main beheld a Wood,
Which thick with Shades, and a brown Horror ſtood:
Betwixt the Trees the Tiber took his Courſe,
With Whirlpools dimpled, and with downward Force
That drove the Sand along, he took his Way,
And roll'd his yellow Billows to the Sea:
About him, and above, and round the Wood,
The Birds that haunt the Borders of his Flood,
That bath'd within, or bask'd upon his Side,
To tuneful Songs their narrow Throats apply'd.
The Captain gives Command, the joyful Train
Glide through the gloomy Shade, and leave the Main.
Dryden.

It is impoſſible to learn from the Ruins of the Port of Oſtia what its Figure was when it ſtood whole and entire. I ſhall therefore ſet down the Medal, that I have before mention'd, which repreſents it as it was formerly.

It is worth while to compare Juvenal's Deſcription of this Port with the Figure it makes on the Coin.

Tandem intrat poſitas incluſa per æquora moles,
Tyrrhenamque Pharon, porrectaque brachia, rurſus
Quæ pelago occurrunt medio, longéque relinquunt
Italiam: non ſic igitur mirabere portus
Quos Natura dedit —— Juv. Sat. xii. v. 75.

At laſt within the mighty Mole ſhe gets,
Our Tyrrhene Pharos, that the mid Sea meets
With its Embrace, and leaves the Land behind;
A Work ſo wondrous Nature ne'er deſign'd.
Dryden.

The Seas may very properly be ſaid to be inclos'd (Incluſa) between the two Semicircular Moles that almoſt ſurround them. The Coloſſus, with ſomething like a lighted Torch in its Hand, is probably the Pharos in the ſecond Line. The two Moles, that we we muſt ſuppoſe are join'd to the Land behind the Pharos, are very Poetically deſcrib'd by the

—— Porrectaque brachia, rurſus
Quæ pelago occurrunt medio, longéque relinquunt
Italiam ——— ———

as they retire from one another in the Compaſs they make, 'till their two Ends almoſt meet a ſecond time in the midſt of the Waters, where the Figure of Neptune ſits. The Poet's Reflexion on the Haven is very juſt, ſince there are few natural Ports better land-lock'd, and cloſed on all Sides than this ſeems to have been. The Figure of Neptune has a Rudder by him, to mark the Convenience of the Harbour for Navigation, as he is repreſented himſelf at the Entrance of it, to ſhew it ſtood in the Sea. The Dolphin diſtinguiſhes him from a River God, and figures out his Dominion over the Seas. He holds the ſame Fiſh in his Hand on other Medals. What it means we may learn from the Greek Epigram on the Figure of a Cupid, that had a Dolphin in one Hand, and a Flower in the other.

Οὐδὲ μάτην παλάμαις κεῖται δελφῖνα καὶ ἄνθος,
Τὴν μὲν γὰρ γαῖαν, τὴνδε θάλασσαν ἔχει.

A proper Emblem graces either Hand,
In one he holds the Sea, in one the Land.

Half a Day more brought us to Rome, thro' a Road that is commonly viſited by Travellers.

ROME.

ROME.

IT is generally obſerv'd, that Modern Rome ſtands higher than the Ancient; ſome have computed it about fourteen or fifteen Feet, taking one Place with another. The Reaſon given for it is, that the preſent City ſtands upon the Ruins of the former; and indeed I have often obſerved, that where any conſiderable Pile of Building ſtood anciently, one ſtill finds a riſing Ground, or a little kind of Hill, which was doubtleſs made up out of the Fragments and Rubbiſh of the ruin'd Edifice. But beſides this particular Cauſe, we may aſſign another that has very much contributed to the raiſing the Situation of ſeveral Parts of Rome: It being certain the great Quantities of Earth, that have been waſh'd off from the Hills by the Violence of Showers have had no ſmall ſhare in it. This any one may be ſenſible of, who obſerves how far ſeveral Buildings, that ſtand near the Roots of Mountains, are ſunk deeper in the Earth than thoſe that have been on the Tops of Hills, or in open Plains; for which reaſon the preſent Face of Rome is much more Even and Level than it was formerly; the ſame Cauſe, that has rais'd the low Grounds, having contributed to ſink thoſe that were higher.

There are in Rome two Sets of Antiquities, the Chriſtian and the Heathen. The former, tho' of a freſher Date, are ſo embroil'd with Fable and Legend, gend, that one receives but little Satisfaction from ſearching into them. The other give a great deal of Pleaſure to ſuch as have met with them before in ancient Authors; for a Man who is in Rome can ſcarce ſee an Object that does not call to mind a Piece of a Latin Poet or Hiſtorian. Among the Remains of old Rome, the Grandeur of the Commonwealth ſhows itſelf chiefly in Works that were either neceſſary or convenient, ſuch as Temples, Highways, Aqueducts, Walls, and Bridges of the City. On the contrary the Magnificence of Rome, under the Emperors, was rather for Oſtentation or Luxury, than any real Uſefulneſs or Neceſſity, as in Baths, Amphitheatres, Circus's, Obelisks, Triumphant Pillars, Arches, and Mauſoleums; for what they added to the Aqueducts was rather to ſupply their Baths and Naumachias, and to embelliſh the City with Fountains, than out of any real Neceſſity there was for them. Theſe ſeveral Remains have been ſo copiouſly deſcrib'd by abundance of Travellers, and other Writers, particularly by thoſe concern'd in the learned Collection of Grævius, that it is very difficult to make any new Diſcoveries on ſo beaten a Subject. There is however ſo much to be obſerv'd in ſo ſpacious a Field of Antiquities, that it is almoſt impoſſible to ſurvey them without taking new Hints, and raiſing different Reflexions, according as a Man's natural Turn of Thoughts, or the Courſe of his Studies direct him.

No Part of the Antiquities of Rome pleas'd me ſo much as the ancient Statues, of which there is ſtill an incredible Variety. The Workmanſhip is often the moſt exquiſite of any thing in its kind. A Man would wonder how it were poſſible for ſo much Life to enter into Marble, as may be diſcover'd in ſome of the beſt of them; and even in the meaneſt one has

has the Satisfaction of seeing the Faces, Postures, Airs and Dress of those that have liv'd so many Ages before us. There is a strange Resemblance between the Figures of the several Heathen Deities, and the Descriptions that the Latin Poets have given us of them; but as the first may be look'd upon as the ancienter of the two, I question not but the Roman Poets were the Copiers of the Greek Statuaries. Tho' on other Occasions we often find the Statuaries took their Subjects from the Poets. The Laocoon is too known an Instance, among many others that are to be met with at Rome. In the Villa Aldobrandina are the Figures of an old and young Man, engaged together at the Cæstus, who are probably the Dares and Entellus of Virgil; where by the way one may observe the Make of the ancient Cæstus, that it only consisted of many large Thongs about the Hand, without any thing like a Piece of Lead at the End of them, as some Writers of Antiquities have falsly imagin'd.

I question not but many Passages in the old Poets hint at several Parts of Sculpture, that were in vogue in the Author's Time, tho' they are now never thought of, and that therefore such Passages lose much of their Beauty in the Eye of a modern Reader, who does not look upon them in the same Light with the Author's Cotemporaries. I shall only mention two or three out of Juvenal, that his Commentators have not taken notice of: The first runs thus;

Multa pudicitiæ veteris vestigia forsan,
Aut aliqua extiterint, et sub Jove, sed Jove nondum
Barbato. ——— ——— Sat. vi. v. 14.

Some thin Remains of Chastity appear'd
Ev'n under Jove, but Jove without a Beard. Dryden.

I appeal

I appeal to any Reader, if the Humour here would not appear much more natural and unforced to a People that ſaw every Day ſome or other Statue of this God with a thick buſhy Beard, as there are ſtill many of them extant at Rome, than it can to us who have no ſuch Idea of him; eſpecially if we conſider there was in the ſame City a Temple dedicated to the young Jupiter, call'd Templum Vejovis, where, in all probability, there ſtood the particular Statue of a * Jupiter Imberbis. Juvenal, in another Place, makes his Flatterer compare the Neck of one that is feebly built to that of Hercules holding up Antæus from the Earth.

Et longum invalidi collum cervicibus æquat
Herculis Antæum procul à tellure tenentis.
Sat. iii. v. 88.

His long Crane Neck and narrow Shoulders praiſe;
You'd think they were deſcribing Hercules Lifting Antæus ——— ——— Dryden.

What a ſtrain'd unnatural Similitude muſt this ſeem to a modern Reader, but how full of Humour, if we ſuppoſe it alludes to any celebrated Statues of theſe two Champions, that ſtood perhaps in ſome public Place or Highway near Rome? And, what makes it more than probable there were ſuch Statues, we meet with the Figures, which Juvenal here deſcribes, on antique Intaglios and Medals. Nay, Propertius has taken notice of the very Statues.

* Vid. Ovid. de Faſtis, Lib. iii.

— Luctantum

—— Luctantum in pulvere ſigna
Herculis Antæique —— Lib. iii. Eleg. 22. v. 9.

Antæus here and ſtern Alcides ſtrive,
And both the grappling Statues ſeem to live.

I cannot forbear obſerving here, that the Turn of the Neck and Arms is often commended in the Latin Poets among the Beauties of a Man, as in Horace we find both put together, in that beautiful Deſcription of Jealouſy:

Dum tu, Lydia, Telephi
Cervicem roſeam, & cerea Telephi
Laudas Brachia, væ meum
Fervens difficili bile tumet jecur.
Tunc nec mens mihi, nec color
Certâ ſede manent: humor in genas
Furtim labitur, arguens
Quàm lentis penitus macerer ignibus.
Od. 13. Lib. i. v. 1.

While Telephus's youthful Charms,
His roſy Neck, and winding Arms,
With endleſs Rapture you recite,
And in the tender Name delight;
My Heart, enrag'd by jealous Heats,
With numberleſs Reſentment beats;
From my pale Cheeks the Colour flies,
And all the Man within me dies;
By Fits my ſwelling Grief appears
In riſing Sighs, and falling Tears,
That ſhow too well the warm Deſires,
The ſilent, ſlow, conſuming Fires,
Which on my inmoſt Vitals prey,
And melt my very Soul away.

This

This we ſhould be at a loſs to account for, did we not obſerve in the old Roman Statues, that theſe two Parts were always bare, and expos'd to View, as much as our Hands and Face are at preſent. I cannot leave Juvenal without taking notice that his

Ventilat æſtivum digitis ſudantibus aurum,
Nec ſufferre queat majoris pondera Gemmæ.
Sat. i. v. 28.

Charg'd with light Summer Rings his Fingers ſweat, Unable to ſupport a Gem of Weight; Dryden.

was not anciently ſo great an Hyperbole as it is now; for I have ſeen old Roman Rings ſo very thick about, and with ſuch large Stones in them that 'tis no wonder a Fop ſhould reckon them a little cumberſom in the Summer Seaſon of ſo hot a Climate.

It is certain that Satire delights in ſuch Alluſions and Inſtances as are extremely natural and familiar: When therefore we ſee any thing in an old Satiriſt that looks forc'd and pedantic, we ought to conſider how it appear'd in the time the Poet writ, and whether or no there might not be ſome particular Circumſtances to recommend it to the Readers of his own Age, which we are now deprived of. One of the fineſt ancient Statues in Rome is a Meleager with a Spear in his Hand, and the Head of a wild Boar on one Side of him. It is of Parian Marble, and as yellow as Ivory. One meets with many other Figures of Meleager in the ancient Baſſo Relievos, and on the Sides of the Sarcophagi, or Funeral Monuments. Perhaps it was the Arms or Device of the old Roman Hunters; which Conjecture I have found confirm'd in a Paſſage of Manilius, that lets us know the Pagan Hunters had Meleager for their Patron, as the Chriſtians have their St. Hubert. He ſpeaks of the Conſtellation which makes a good Sportſman.

——Quibus aſpirantibus orti
Te, Meleagre, colunt —— Manil. Lib. v.

They, on whoſe Birth this Conſtellation ſhone,
Thee, Meleager, for their Patron own.

I queſtion not but this ſets a Verſe, in the fifth Satire of Juvenal, in a much better Light than if we ſuppoſe that the Poet aims only at the old Story of Meleager, without conſidering it as ſo very common and familiar a one among the Romans.

—— Flavi dignus ferro Meleagri
Spumat aper —— Juv. Sat. 5. v. 115.

A Boar intire, and worthy of the Sword
Of Meleager, ſmokes upon the Board. Bowles.

In the Beginning of the ninth Satire, Juvenal asks his Friend, why he looks like Marſya when he was overcome?

Scire velim quare toties mihi, Nævole, triſtis
Occurris fronte obductâ, ſeu Marſya victus? v. 1.

Tell me why ſantring thus from Place to Place,
I meet thee, Nævolus, with a clouded Face?
Dryden's Juvenal.

Some

Some of the Commentators tell us, that Marſya was a Lawyer who had loſt his Cauſe; others ſay that this Paſſage alludes to the Story of the Satyr Marſyas, who contended with Apollo; which I think is more humourous than the other, if we conſider there was a famous Statue of Apollo fleaing Marſya in the midſt of the Roman Forum, as there are ſtill ſeveral ancient Statues of Rome on the ſame Subject.

There is a Paſſage in the ſixth Satire of Juvenal, that I could never tell what to make of, 'till I had got the Interpretation of it from one of Bellorio's ancient Baſſo Relievos.

Magnorum Artificum frangebat pocula miles,
Ut phaleris gauderet Equus: cælataque caſſis
Romuleæ ſimulachra feræ manſueſcere juſſæ
Imperii fato, et geminos ſub rupe Quirinos,
Ac nudam effigiem clypeo fulgentis et haſtâ,
Pendentiſque Dei perituro oſtenderet hoſti.

Juv. Sat. xi. v. 102.

Or elſe a Helmet for himſelf he made,
Where various Warlike Figures were inlaid:
The Roman Wolf ſuckling the Twins was there,
And Mars himſelf, arm'd with his Shield and Spear,
Hov'ring above his Creſt, did dreadful ſhow,
As threatning Death to each reſiſting Foe.

Dryden's Juvenal.

Juvenal here deſcribes the Simplicity of the old Roman Soldiers, and the Figures that were generally engraven on their Helmets. The firſt of them was the Wolf giving Suck to Romulus and Remus: The ſecond, which is comprehended in the two laſt Verſes is not ſo intelligible. Some of the Commentators tell us, that the God here mentioned is Mars, that he comes to ſee his two Sons ſucking the Wolf, and that the old Sculptors generally drew their Figures naked, that they might have the Advantage of repreſenting the different ſwelling of the Muſcles, and the turns of the Body. But they are extremely at a loſs to know what is meant by the Word Pendentis; ſome fancy it expreſſes only the great Emboſſment of the Figure; others believe it hung off the Helmet in Alto Relievo, as in the foregoing Tranſlation. Lubin ſuppoſes, that the God Mars was engraven on the Shield, and that he is ſaid to be hanging, becauſe the Shield which bore him hung on the left Shoulder. One of the old Interpreters is of Opinion, that by hanging is only meant a Poſture of bending forward to ſtrike the Enemy. Another will have it, that whatever is placed on the Head may be ſaid to hang, as we call Hanging-Gardens ſuch as are planted on the Top of the Houſe. Several learned Men, who like none of theſe Explications, believe there has been a Fault in the Tranſcriber, and that Pendentis ought to be Perdentis; but they quote no Manuſcript in favour of their Conjecture. The true meaning of the Words is certainly as follows. The Roman Soldiers, who were not a little proud of their Founder, and the Military Genius of their Republic, us'd to bear on their Helmets the firſt Hiſtory of Romulus, who was begot by the God of War, and ſuckled by a Wolf. The Figure of the God was made as if deſcending on the Prieſteſs Ilia, or as others call her Rhea Silvia. The Occaſion required his Body ſhould be naked.

Tu quoque inermis eras cum te formoſa Sacerdos
Cepit, ut hinc urbi Semina magna dares.
Ovid. de Faſt. Lib. iii. v. 10.

Then

Then too, our mighty Sire, thou ſtood'ſt diſarm'd,
When thy rapt Soul the lovely Prieſteſs charm'd,
That Rome's high Founder bore ———

Tho' on other Occaſions he is drawn, as Horace has deſcrib'd him, Tunicâ cinctum adamantinâ — Girt with a Veſt of Adamant. The Sculptor however, to diſtinguiſh him from the reſt of the Gods, gave him, what the Medalliſts call his proper Attributes, a Spear in one Hand, and a Shield in the other. As he was repreſented deſcending, his Figure appeared ſuſpended in the Air over the Veſtal Virgin, in which Senſe the Word Pendentis is extremely proper and Poetical. Beſides the Antique Baſſo Relievo, that made me firſt think of this Interpretation, I have ſince met with the ſame Figures in the Reverſes of a couple of ancient Coins, which were ſtamp'd in the Reign of Antoninus Pius, as a Compliment to that Emperor, whom, for his excellent Government and Conduct of the City of Rome, the Senate regarded as a ſecond kind of Founder.

Ilia Veſtalis (quid enim vetat inde moveri)
Sacra lavaturas manè petebat aquas:
Feſſa reſedit humi, ventoſque accepit aperto
Pectore, turbatas reſtituitque comas.
Dum ſedet, umbroſæ ſalices volucreſque canoræ
Fecerunt Somnos & leve murmur aquæ.
Blanda quies victis furtim ſubrepit ocellis,
Et cadit à mento languida facta manus.

Mars

Mars videt hanc, viſamque cupit, potiturque cupitâ:
Et ſua divinâ furta fefellit ope.
Somnus abit: jacet illa gravis; jam ſcilicet intra Viſcera Romanæ conditor urbis erat.
Ovid. de Faſtis, Lib. iii. v. 11.

As the fair Veſtal to the Fountain came,
(Let none be ſtartled at a Veſtal's Name)
Tir'd with the Walk, ſhe laid her down to reſt,
And to the Winds expos'd her glowing Breaſt
To take the Freſhneſs of the Morning Air,
And gather'd in a Knot her flowing Hair:
While thus ſhe reſted on her Arm reclin'd,
The hoary Willows waving with the Wind,
And feather'd Quires that warbled in the Shade,
And purling Streams that through the Meadow ſtray'd,
In drowſy Murmurs lull'd the gentle Maid.
The God of War beheld the Virgin lie,
The God beheld her with a Lover's Eye,
And by ſo tempting an Occaſion preſs'd,
The beauteous Maid, whom he beheld, poſſeſs'd:
Conceiving, as ſhe ſlept, her fruitful Womb
Swell'd with the Founder of Immortal Rome.

I cannot quit this Head without taking notice of a Line in Seneca the Tragedian.

——— Primus emergit ſolo
Dextrâ ferocem cornibus premens taurum Zetus ——— ——— Sen. Œdip. Act. 3.

— Firſt Zetus riſes through the Ground,
Bending the Bull's tough Neck with Pain,
That toſſes back his Horns in vain.

I cannot doubt but the Poet had here in View the Poſture of Zetus in the famous Groupe of Figures, which repreſents the two Brothers binding Dirce to the Horns of a mad Bull.

I could not forbear taking particular notice of the ſeveral Muſical Inſtruments that are to be ſeen in the Hands of the Apollos, Muſes, Fauns, Satyrs, Bacchanals, and Shepherds, which might certainly give a great Light to the Diſpute for Preference between the ancient and modern Muſic. It would perhaps be no impertinent Deſign to take off all their Models in Wood, which might not only give us ſome Notion of the ancient Muſic, but help us to pleaſanter Inſtruments than are now in uſe. By the Appearance they make in Marble, there is not one String-Inſtrument that ſeems comparable to our Violins; for they are all play'd on, either by the bare Fingers, or the Plectrum; ſo that they were incapable of adding any Length to their Notes, or of varying them by thoſe inſenſible Swellings, and wearings-away of Sound upon the ſame String, which give ſo wonderful a Sweetneſs to our modern Muſic. Beſides, that the String-Inſtruments muſt have had very low and feeble Voices, as may be gueſs'd from the ſmall Proportion of Wood about them, which could not contain Air enough to render the Strokes, in any conſiderable meaſure, full and ſonorous. There is a great deal of difference in the Make, not only of the ſeveral kinds of Inſtruments, but even among thoſe of the ſame Name. The Syringa, for Example, has ſometimes four, and ſometimes more Pipes, as high as to twelve. The ſame variety of Strings may be obſerved on their Harps, and of Stops on their Tibiæ; which ſhows the little Foundation that ſuch Writers have gone upon, who from a Verſe perhaps in Virgil's Eclogues, or a ſhort Paſſage in a Claſſic Author, have been been ſo very nice in determining the preciſe Shape of the ancient Muſical Inſtruments, with the exact Number of their Pipes, Strings, and Stops. It is indeed the uſual Fault of the Writers of Antiquities, to ſtraiten and confine themſelves to particular Models. They are for making a kind of Stamp on every thing of the ſame Name, and, if they find any thing like an old Deſcription of the Subject they treat on, they take care to regulate it, on all Occaſions, according to the Figure it makes in ſuch a Paſſage: As the learned German Author, quoted by Monſieur Baudelot, who had probably never ſeen any thing of a Houſhold-God, more than a Canopus, affirms roundly, that all the ancient Lares were made in the Faſhion of a Jug-Bottle. In ſhort, the Antiquaries have been guilty of the ſame Fault as the Syſtem-Writers, who are for cramping their Subjects into as narrow a Space as they can, and for reducing the whole Extent of a Science into a few general Maxims. This a Man has occaſion of obſerving more than once, in the ſeveral Fragments of Antiquity that are ſtill to be ſeen in Rome. How many Dreſſes are there for each particular Deity? What a Variety of Shapes in the ancient Urns, Lamps, Lachrymary Veſſels, Priapus's, Houſhold-Gods, which have ſome of them been repreſented under ſuch a particular Form, as any one of them has been deſcrib'd with in an ancient Author, and would probably be all ſo, were they not ſtill to be ſeen in their own Vindication? Madam Dacier, from ſome old Cuts of Terence, fancies that the Larva or Perſona of the Roman Actors, was not only a Vizard for the Face, but had falſe Hair to it, and came over the whole Head like a Helmet. Among all the Statues at Rome, I remember to have ſeen but two that are the Figures of Actors, which are both in the Villa Matthei.

One ſees on 'em the Faſhion of the old Sock and Larva, the latter of which anſwers the Deſcription that is given of it by this learned Lady, tho' I queſtion not but ſeveral others were in uſe; for I have ſeen the Figure of Thalia, the Comic Muſe, ſometimes with an intire Head-piece in her Hand, ſometimes with about half the Head, and a little Friz, like a Tower, running round the Edges of the Face, and ſometimes with a Mask for the Face only, like thoſe of a modern Make. Some of the Italian Actors wear at preſent theſe Masks for the whole Head. I remember formerly I could have no Notion of that Fable in Phædrus, before I had ſeen the Figures of theſe intire Head pieces.

Perſonam Tragicam fortè Vulpes viderat:
O quanta Species, inquit, cerebrum non habet!
Lib. i. Fab. 7.

As wily Renard walk'd the Streets at Night,
On a Tragedian's Mask he chanc'd to light;
Turning it o'er he mutter'd with Diſdain,
How vaſt a Head is here without a Brain!

I find Madam Dacier has taken notice of this Paſſage in Phædrus, upon the ſame Occaſion; but not of the following one in Martial, which alludes to the ſame kind of Masks;

Non omnes fallis, ſcit te Proſerpina canum;
Perſonam capiti detrahet illa tuo.
Lib. iii. Epigr. 43.

Why ſhould'ſt thou try to hide thyſelf in Youth?
Impartial Proſerpine beholds the Truth,
And, laughing at ſo fond and vain a Task,
Will ſtrip thy hoary Noddle of its Mask.

In

In the Villa Borgheſe is the Buſt of a young Nero, which ſhows us the Form of an ancient Bulla on the Breaſt, which is neither like a Heart, as Macrobius deſcribes it, nor altogether reſembles that in Cardinal Chigi's Cabinet; ſo that, without eſtabliſhing a particular Inſtance into a general Rule, we ought, in Subjects of this nature, to leave Room for the Humour of the Artiſt or Wearer. There are many Figures of Gladiators at Rome, tho' I don't remember to have ſeen any of the Retiarius, the Samnite, or the Antagoniſt to the Pinnirapus. But what I could not find among the Statues, I met with in two Antique Pieces of Moſaic, which are in the Poſſeſſion of a Cardinal. The Retiarius is engag'd with the Samnite, and has had ſo lucky a throw, that his Net covers the whole Body of his Adverſary from Head to Foot; yet his Antagoniſt recover'd himſelf out of the Toils, and was Conqueror, according to the Inſcription. In another Piece is repreſented the Combat of the Pinnirapus, who is arm'd like the Samnite, and not like the Retiarius, as ſome learned Men have ſuppoſed: On the Helmet of his Antagoniſt are ſeen the two Pinnæ, that ſtand up on either ſide like the Wings in the Petaſus of a Mercury, but riſe much higher and are more pointed.

There is no part of the Roman Antiquities that we are better acquainted with, than what relates to their Sacrifices. For as the old Romans were very much devoted to their Religion, we ſee ſeveral Parts of it entering their ancient Baſſo Relievos, Statues, and Medals; not to mention their Altars, Tombs, Monuments, and thoſe particular Ornaments of Architecture, which were borrow'd from it. An Heathen Ritual could not inſtruct a Man better than theſe ſeveral Pieces of Antiquity, in the particular Cere-

Ceremonies and Punctilios that attended the diffe-rent kinds of Sacrifices. Yet there is a much greater Variety in the Make of the ſacrificing In-ſtruments, than one finds in thoſe who have treated of them, or have given us their Pictures. For not to inſiſt too long on ſuch a Subject, I ſaw in Signior Antonio Politi's Collection a Patera with-out any riſing in the middle, as it is generally engraven, and another with a Handle to it, as Macrobius deſcribes it, tho' it is quite contrary to any that I have ever ſeen cut in Marble; and I have obſerved perhaps ſeveral Hundreds. I might here inlarge on the Shape of the triumphal Cha-riot, which is different in ſome pieces of Sculpture from what it appears in others; and on the Figure of the Diſcus, that is to be ſeen in the Hand of the celebrated Caſtor at Don Livio's, which is perfectly round, and not oblong, as ſome Antiquaries have re-preſented it, nor has it any thing like a Sling faſten'd to it, to add force to the toſs.

Protinus imprudens, actuſque cupidine luſus
Tollere Tænarides orbem properabat ———
—— De Hyacinthi diſco.
Ovid. Metam. Lib. x. v. 182.

Th' unwary Youth, impatient for the Caſt,
Went to ſnatch up the rolling Orb in haſte.

Notwithſtanding there are ſo great a multitude of cloth'd Statues at Rome, I could never diſcover the ſeveral different Roman Garments; for 'tis very dif-ficult to trace out the Figure of a Veſt, thro' all the Plaits and Foldings of the Drapery; beſides that the Roman Garments did not differ from each other ſo much by the Shape, as by the Embroidery and Co-lour, our, the one of which was too nice for the Statuary's Obſervation, as the other does not lie within the Expreſſion of the Chiſel. I obſerved, in abundance of Bas Reliefs, that the Cinctus Gabinus is nothing elſe but a long Garment, not unlike a Surplice, which would have trail'd on the Ground had it hung looſe, and was therefore gather'd about the middle with a Girdle. After this it is worth while to read the laborious Deſcription that Ferrarius has made of it. Cinctus Gabinus non aliud fuit quàm cum togæ lacinia lævo brachio ſubducta in tergum ita rejiciebatur, ut contracta retraheretur ad pectus, atque ita in nodum nectetur; qui nodus ſive cinctus togam contrahebat, brevioremque et ſtrictiorem reddidit. De re Veſtiar. Lib. i. Cap. 14. The Cinctus Gabinus was nothing more, than, when the bottom of the Garment, being thrown over the left Shoulder behind the Back, was brought round to the Breaſt, in ſuch a manner as to be gather'd into a Knot; which Knot or Cincture, ſtraiten'd the Garment, and made it both leſs and tighter. Lipſius's Deſcription of the Samnite Armour, ſeems drawn out of the very Words of Livy; yet not long ago a Statue, which was dug up at Rome, dreſs'd in this kind of Armour, gives a much different Explication of Livy from what Lipſius has done. This Figure was ſuperſcrib'd BA. TO. NI. from whence Fabretti concludes, that it was a Monument erected to the Gladiator Bato, who, after having ſucceeded in two Combats, was kill'd in the third, and honourably interr'd, by Order of the Emperor Caracalla. The manner of Punctuation after each Syllable is to be met with in other Antique Inſcriptions. I confeſs I could never learn where this Figure is now to be ſeen; but I think it may ſerve as an Inſtance ſtance of the great Uncertainty of this Science of Antiquities *.

In a Palace of Prince Ceſarini I ſaw Buſts of all the Antonine Family, which were dug up about two Years ſince, not far from Albano, in a Place where is ſuppoſed to have ſtood a Villa of Marcus Aurelius. There are the Heads of Antoninus Pius, the Fauſtina's, Marcus Aurelius, Lucius Verus, a young Commodus, and Annius Verus, all incomparably well cut.

Tho' the Statues that have been found among the Ruins of old Rome are already very numerous, there is no queſtion but Poſterity will have the Pleaſure of ſeeing many noble Pieces of Sculpture which are ſtill undiſcover'd; for doubtleſs there are greater Treaſures of this nature under Ground, than what are yet brought to Light. They have often dug into Lands that are deſcrib'd in old Authors, as the Places where ſuch particular Statues and Obelisks ſtood, and have ſeldom fail'd of Succeſs, in their Purſuits. There are ſtill many ſuch promiſing Spots of Ground that have never been ſearched into. A great part of the Palatine Mountain, for Example, lies untouch'd, which was formerly the ſeat of the Imperial Palace, and may be preſum'd to abound with more Treaſures of this Nature than any other Part of Rome.

Ecce Palatino crevit reverentia monti,
Exultatque habitante Deo, poticraque Delphis
Supplicibus latè populis oracula pandit.
Non alium certè decuit rectoribus orbis

Claud. de ſexto Conſulat. Honorii.

The Palatine, proud Rome's Imperial Seat,
(An awful Pile!) ſtands venerably Great:
Thither the Kingdoms and the Nations come,
In ſupplicating Crowds to learn their Doom:
To Delphi leſs th' enquiring Worlds repair,
Nor does a greater God inhabit there:
This ſure the pompous Manſion was deſign'd
To pleaſe the mighty Rulers of Mankind;
Inferior Temples riſe on either Hand,
And on the Borders of the Palace ſtand,
While o'er the reſt her Head ſhe proudly rears,
And lodg'd amidſt her Guardian Gods appears.

But whether it be that the richeſt of theſe Diſcoveries fall into the Pope's Hands, or for ſome other Reaſon, it is ſaid that the Prince Farneſe, who is the preſent Owner of this Seat, will keep it from being turn'd up, 'till he ſees one of his own Family in the Chair. There are Undertakers in Rome who often purchaſe the digging of Fields, Gardens, or Vineyards, where they find any likelihood of ſucceeding, and ſome have been known to arrive at great Eſtates by it. They pay according to the Dimenſions of the Surface they are to break up, and after having made Eſſays into it, as they do for Coal in England, they rake into the moſt promiſing Parts of it, tho' they often find to their Diſappointment, that others have been beforehand with 'em. However they generally gain enough by the Rubbiſh Rubbiſh and Bricks, which the preſent Architects value much beyond thoſe of a modern Make, to defray the Charges of their Search. I was ſhown two Spaces of Ground, where part of Nero's golden Houſe ſtood, for which the Owner has been offer'd an extraordinary Sum of Money. What encourag'd the Undertakers are ſeveral very ancient Trees, which grow upon the Spot, from whence they conclude that theſe particular Tracts of Ground muſt have lain untouch'd for ſome Ages. 'Tis pity there is not ſomething like a public Regiſter, to preſerve the Memory of ſuch Statues as have been found from time to time, and to mark the particular Places where they have been taken up, which would not only prevent many fruitleſs Searches for the future, but might often give a conſiderable Light into the Quality of the Place, or the Deſign of the Statue.

But the great Magazine for all kinds of Treaſure, is ſuppoſed to be the Bed of the Tiber. We may be ſure, when the Romans lay under the Apprehenſions of ſeeing their City ſack'd by a barbarous Enemy, as they have done more than once, that they would take care to beſtow ſuch of their Riches this way as could beſt bear the Water: beſides what the Inſolence of a brutiſh Conqueror may be ſuppoſed to have contributed, who had an Ambition to waſte and deſtroy all the Beauties of ſo celebrated a City. I need not mention the old Common-ſhore of Rome, which ran from all Parts of the Town with the Current and Violence of an ordinary River, nor the frequent Inundations of the Tiber, which may have ſwept away many of the Ornaments of its Banks, nor the ſeveral Statues that the Romans themſelves flung into it, when they would revenge themſelves on the

the Memory of an ill Citizen, a dead Tyrant, or a diſcarded Favourite. At Rome they have ſo general an Opinion of the Riches of this River, that the Jews have formerly proffer'd the Pope to cleanſe it, ſo they might have, for their Pains, what they found in the Boſom of it. I have ſeen the Valley near Ponte molle, which they propos'd to faſhion into a new Channel for it, 'till they had clear'd the old for its Reception. The Pope however would not comply with the Propoſal, as fearing the Heats might advance too far before they had finiſhed their Work, and produce a Peſtilence among his People; tho' I don't ſee why ſuch a Deſign might not be executed now with as little Danger as in Auguſtus's Time, were there as many Hands employed upon it. The City of Rome would receive a great Advantage from the Undertaking, as it would raiſe the Banks and deepen the Bed of the Tiber, and by Conſequence free 'em from thoſe frequent Inundations to which they are ſo ſubject at preſent; for the Channel of the River is obſerved to be narrower within the Walls, than either below or above them.

Before I quit this Subject of the Statues, I think it very obſervable, that, among thoſe which are already found, there ſhould be ſo many not only of the ſame Perſons, but made after the ſame Deſign. One would not indeed wonder to ſee ſeveral Figures of particular Deities and Emperors, who had a Multitude of Temples erected to 'em, and had their ſeveral Sets of Worſhippers and Admirers. Thus Ceres, the moſt beneficent and uſeful of the Heathen Divinities, has more Statues than any other of the Gods or Goddeſſes, as ſeveral of the Roman Empreſſes took a Pleaſure to be repreſented in her Dreſs. And I believe one finds as many Figures of that excellent Emperor Marcus Aurelius, as of all the reſt together;

together; becauſe the Romans had ſo great a Veneration for his Memory, that it grew into a Part of their Religion to preſerve a Statue of him in almoſt every private Family. But how comes it to paſs, that ſo many of theſe Statues are cut after the very ſame Model, and not only of theſe, but of ſuch as had no Relation, either to the Intereſt or Devotion of the Owner, as the dying Cleopatra, the Narciſſus, the Fawn leaning againſt the Trunk of a Tree, the Boy with a Bird in his Hand, the Leda and her Swan, with many others of the ſame Nature? I muſt confeſs I always look'd on Figures of this kind as the Copies of ſome celebrated Maſter-piece, and queſtion not but they were famous Originals, that gave Riſe to the ſeveral Statues which we ſee with the ſame Air, Poſture, and Attitudes. What confirms me in this Conjecture, there are many ancient Statues of the Venus de Medicis, the Silenus with the young Bacchus in his Arms, the Hercules Farneſe, the Antinous, and other beautiful Originals of the Ancients, that are already drawn out of the Rubbiſh, where they lay conceal'd for ſo many Ages. Among the reſt I have obſerved more that are form'd after the Deſign of the Venus of Medicis, than of any other; from whence I believe one may conclude, that it was the moſt celebrated Statue among the Ancients, as well as among the Moderns. It has always been uſual for Sculptors to work upon the beſt Models, as it is for thoſe that are Curious to have Copies of them.

I am apt to think ſomething of the ſame Account may be given of the Reſemblance that we meet with in many of the Antique Baſſo Relievos. I remember I was very well pleaſed with the Device of one that I met with on the Tomb of a young Roman Lady, which had been made for her by her Mother.

Mother. The Sculptor had choſen the Rape of Proſerpine for his Device, where in one End you might ſee the God of the Dead (Pluto) hurrying away a beautiful young Virgin (Proſerpine) and at the other the Grief and Diſtraction of the Mother (Ceres) on that Occaſion. I have ſince obſerved the ſame Device upon ſeveral Sarcophagi, that have inclos'd the Aſhes of Men or Boys, Maids or Matrons; for when the Thought took, tho' at firſt it received its Riſe from ſuch a particular Occaſion as I have mention'd, the Ignorance of the Sculptors apply'd it promiſcuouſly. I know there are Authors who diſcover a Myſtery in this Device.

A Man is ſometimes ſurpriſed to find ſo many extravagant Fancies as are cut on the old Pagan Tombs. Masks, Hunting-matches, and Bacchanals, are very common; ſometimes one meets with a lewd Figure of a Priapus, and in the Villa Pamphilia is ſeen a Satyr coupling with a Goat. There are however many of a more ſerious Nature, that ſhadow out the Exiſtence of the Soul after Death, and the Hopes of a happy Immortality. I cannot leave the Baſſo Relievos, without mentioning one of 'em, where the Thought is extremely noble. It is call'd Homer's Apotheoſis, and conſiſts of a Groupe of Figures cut in the ſame Block of Marble, and riſing one above another by four or five different Aſcents. Jupiter ſits at the Top of it with a Thunderbolt in his Hand, and, in ſuch a Majeſty as Homer himſelf repreſents him, preſides over the Ceremony.

Εὗρον δ' ἐυμίτρα Κεφαλλῆνα ἄτερ θυμὸν ἄλλων,
Ἀκροτάτῃ κορυφῇ πολυδειράδος Οὐλύμποιο.
Il. i. v. 498.

There,

There, far apart, and high above the reſt,
The Thund'rer ſat; where old Olympus ſhrouds
His hundred Heads in Heav'n, and props the Clouds.
Pope.

Immediately beneath him are the Figures of the nine Muſes, ſuppos'd to be celebrating the Praiſes of the Poet. Homer himſelf is placed at one End of the loweſt Row, ſitting in a Chair of State, which is ſupported on each Side by the Figure of a kneeling Woman. The one holds a Sword in her Hand to repreſent the Iliad, or Actions of Achilles, as the other has an Apluſtre to repreſent the Odyſſey, or Voyage of Ulyſſes. About the Poet's Feet are creeping a Couple of Mice, as an Emblem of the Batrachomyomachia. Behind the Chair ſtands Time, and the Genius of the Earth, diſtinguiſh'd by their proper Attributes, and putting a Garland on the Poet's Head, to intimate the mighty Reputation he has gain'd in all Ages, and in all Nations of the World. Before him ſtands an Altar with a Bull ready to be ſacrific'd to the new God, and behind the Victim a Train of the ſeveral Virtues that are repreſented in Homer's Works, or to be learnt out of them, lifting up their Hands in Admiration of the Poet, and in Applauſe of the Solemnity. This antique Piece of Sculpture is in the Poſſeſſion of the Conſtable Colonna, but never ſhown to thoſe who ſee the Palace, unleſs they particularly deſire it.

Among the great Variety of ancient Coins which I ſaw at Rome, I could not but take particular notice of ſuch as relate to any of the Buildings or Statues that are ſtill extant. Thoſe of the firſt kind have been already publiſhed by the Writers of the Roman Antiquities, and may be moſt of them met with in the laſt Edition of Donatus, as the Pillars of Trajan

Trajan and Antonine, the Arches of Druſus Germanicus and Septimius Severus, the Temples of Janus, Concord, Veſta, Jupiter tonans, Apollo and Fauſtina, the Circus Maximus, Agonalis, and that of Caracalla, or, according to Fabretti, of Galienus, of Veſpaſian's Amphitheatre, and Alexander Severus's Baths; tho', I muſt confeſs, the Subject of the laſt may be very well doubted of. As for the Metaſudans and Pons Ælius, which have gain'd a Place among the Buildings that are now ſtanding, and to be met with on old Reverſes of Medals; the Coin that ſhows the firſt is generally rejected as ſpurious, nor is the other, tho' cited in the laſt Edition of Monſieur Vaillant, eſteem'd more Authentic by the preſent Roman Medaliſts, who are certainly the moſt skilful in the World, as to the mechanical Part of this Science. I ſhall cloſe up this ſet of Medals with a very curious one, as large as a Medalion, that is ſingular in its kind. On one Side is the Head of the Emperor Trajan, the Reverſe has on it the Circus Maximus, and a View of the Side of the Palatine Mountain that faces it, on which are ſeen ſeveral Edifices, and among the reſt the famous Temple of Apollo, that has ſtill a conſiderable Ruin ſtanding. This Medal I ſaw in the Hands of Monſeigneur Strozzi, Brother to the Duke of that Name, who has many Curioſities in his Poſſeſſion, and is very obliging to a Stranger who deſires the Sight of 'em. It is a ſurpriſing thing, that among the great Pieces of Architecture repreſented on the old Coins, one can never meet with the Pantheon, the Mauſoleum of Auguſtus, Nero's Golden Houſe, the Moles Adriani, the Septizonium of Severus, the Baths of Dioclefian, &c. But ſince it was the Cuſtom of the Roman Emperors thus to regiſter their moſt remarkable Buildings as well as Actions, and ſince there are ſeveral in either of theſe kinds not to be found on Medals, more extraordinary than thoſe that are, we may, I think, with great Reaſon ſuſpect our Collections of the old Coins to be extremely deficient, and that thoſe which are already found out ſcarce bear a Proportion to what are yet undiſcover'd. A Man takes a great deal more Pleaſure in ſurveying the ancient Statues, who compares them with Medals, than it is poſſible for him to do without ſome little Knowledge this way; for theſe two Arts illuſtrate each other; and as there are ſeveral Particulars in Hiſtory and Antiquities which receive a great Light from ancient Coins, ſo would it be impoſſible to decipher the Faces of the many Statues that are to be ſeen at Rome, without ſo univerſal a Key to them. It is this that teaches to diſtinguiſh the Kings and Conſuls, Emperors and Empreſſes, the Deities and Virtues, with a thouſand other Particulars relating to Statuary, and not to be learnt by any other Means. In the Villa Pamphilia ſtands the Statue of a Man in Woman's Clothes, which the Antiquaries do not know what to make of, and therefore paſs it off for an Hermaphrodite: But a learned Medaliſt in Rome has lately fix'd it to Clodius, who is ſo famous for having intruded into the Solemnities of the Bona Dea in a Woman's Habit; for one ſees the ſame Features and Make of Face in a Medal of the Clodian Family.

I have ſeen on Coins the four fineſt Figures perhaps that are now extant: The Hercules Farneſe, the Venus of Medicis, the Apollo in the Belvidere, and the famous Marcus Aurelius on Horſeback. The oldeſt Medal that the firſt appears upon is one of Commodus, the Second on one of Fauſtina, the Third on one of Antoninus Pius, and the laſt on one of Lucius Verus. We may conclude, I think, from hence, that theſe Statues were extremely celebrated among among the old Romans, or they would never have been honoured with a Place among the Emperor's Coins. We may further obſerve, that all four of 'em make their firſt Appearance in the Antonine Family; for which reaſon I am apt to think they are all of them the Product of that Age. They would probably have been mention'd by Pliny the Naturaliſt, who liv'd in the next Reign, ſave one, before Antoninus Pius, had they been made in his Time. As for the Brazen Figure of Marcus Aurelius on Horſeback, there is no doubt of its being of this Age, tho' I muſt confeſs it may be doubted, whether the Medal I have cited repreſents it. All I can ſay for it is, that the Horſe and Man on the Medal are in the ſame Poſture as they are on the Statue, and that there is a Reſemblance of Marcus Aurelius's Face; for I have ſeen this Reverſe on a Medalion of Don Livio's Cabinet, and much more diſtinctly in another very beautiful one, that is in the Hands of Signior Marcus Antonio. It is generally objected, that Lucius Verus would rather have plac'd the Figure of himſelf on Horſeback upon the Reverſe of his own Coin, than the Figure of Marcus Aurelius. But it is very well known that an Emperor often ſtamp'd on his Coins the Face or Ornaments of his Collegue, as an Inſtance of his Reſpect or Friendſhip for him; and we may ſuppoſe Lucius Verus would omit no Opportunity of doing Honour to Marcus Aurelius, whom he rather rever'd as his Father, than treated as his Partner in the Empire. The famous Antinous in the Belvidere muſt have been made too about this Age; for he dy'd towards the Middle of Adrian's Reign, the immediate Predeceſſor of Antoninus Pius. This intire Figure, tho' not to be found in Medals, may be ſeen in ſeveral precious Stones. Monſieur La Chauſſe, the Author of the Muſæum Romanum, ſhew'd ſhew'd me an Antinous that he has publiſh'd in his laſt Volume, cut in a Cornelian, which he values at fifty Piſtoles. It repreſents him in the Habit of Mercury, and is the fineſt Intaglia that I ever ſaw.

Next to the Statues, there is nothing in Rome more ſurpriſing than that amazing Variety of ancient Pillars of ſo many kinds of Marble. As moſt of the old Statues may be well ſuppos'd to have been cheaper to their firſt Owners, than they are to a modern Purchaſer, ſeveral of the Pillars are certainly rated at a much lower Price at preſent than they were of old. For, not to mention what a huge Column of Granite, Serpentine, or Porphyry muſt have coſt in the Quarry, or in its Carriage from Ægypt to Rome, we may only conſider the great Difficulty of hewing it into any Form, and of giving it the due Turn, Proportion and Poliſh. It is well known how theſe ſorts of Marble reſiſt the Impreſſions of ſuch Inſtruments as are now in uſe. There is indeed a Milaneſe at Rome who works in them; but his Advances are ſo very ſlow, that he ſcarce lives upon what he gains by it. He ſhow'd me a Piece of Porphyry work'd into an ordinary Salver, which had coſt him four Months continual Application, before he could bring it into that Form. The Ancients had probably ſome Secret to harden the Edges of their Tools, without recurring to thoſe extravagant Opinions of their having an Art to mollify the Stone, or that it was naturally ſofter at its firſt cutting from the Rock, or, what is ſtill more abſurd, that it was an artificial Compoſition, and not the natural Product of Mines and Quarries. The moſt valuable Pillars about Rome, for the Marble of which they are made, are the four Columns of Oriental Jaſper in St. Paulina's Chapel at St. Mary Maggiore; two of Oriental Granite in St. Pudenziana; one of tranſparent Oriental ental Jaſper in the Vatican Library; four of Nero-Bianco in St. Cecilia Tranſtevere; two of Brocatello, and two of Oriental Agate in Don Livio's Palace; two of Giallo Antico in St. John Lateran, and two of Verdi Antique in the Villa Pamphilia. Theſe are all intire and ſolid Pillars, and made of ſuch kinds of Marble as are no where to be found but among Antiquities, whether it be that the Veins of it are undiſcover'd, or that they were quite exhauſted upon the ancient Buildings. Among theſe old Pillars I cannot forbear reckoning a great Part of an Alabaſter Column, which was found in the Ruins of Livia's Portico. It is of the Colour of Fire, and may be ſeen over the high Altar of St. Maria in Campitello; for they have cut it into two Pieces, and fix'd it in the Shape of a Croſs in a Hole of the Wall that was made on purpoſe to receive it; ſo that the Light, paſſing thro' it from without, makes it look, to thoſe who are in the Church, like a huge tranſparent Croſs of Amber. As for the Workmanſhip of the old Roman Pillars, Monſieur Deſgodetz, in his accurate Meaſures of theſe Ruins, has obſerved, that the Ancients have not kept to the nicety of Proportion, and the Rules of Art, ſo much as the Moderns in this particular. Some, to excuſe this Defect, lay the Blame of it on the Workmen of Ægypt, and of other Nations, who ſent moſt of the ancient Pillars ready ſhap'd to Rome: Others ſay, that the Ancients, knowing Architecture was chiefly deſign'd to pleaſe the Eye, only took care to avoid ſuch Diſproportions as were groſs enough to be obſerv'd by the Sight, without minding whether or no they approach'd to a Mathematical Exactneſs: Others will have it rather to be an Effect of Art, and of what the Italians call the Guſto grande, than of any Negligence in the Architect; for they ſay, the Ancients always conſider'd the Situation of a Building, whether it were high or low, in an open Square or in a narrow Street, and more or leſs deviated from their Rules of Art, to comply with the ſeveral Diſtances and Elevations from which their Works were to be regarded. It is ſaid there is an Ionic Pillar in the Santa Maria Tranſtevere, where the Marks of the Compaſs are ſtill to be ſeen on the Volute, and that Palladio learnt from hence the working of that difficult Problem; but I never could find time to examine all the old Columns of that Church. Among the Pillars I muſt not paſs over the two nobleſt in the World, thoſe of Trajan and Antonine. There could not have been a more magnificent Deſign than that of Trajan's Pillar. Where could an Emperor's Aſhes have been ſo nobly lodg'd, as in the midſt of his Metropolis, and on the top of ſo exalted a Monument, with the greateſt of his Actions underneath him? Or, as ſome will have it, his Statue was on the Top, his Urn at the Foundation, and his Battles in the midſt. The Sculpture of it is too well known to be here mention'd. The moſt remarkable Piece in Antonine's Pillar is the Figure of Jupiter Pluvius, ſending down Rain on the fainting Army of Marcus Aurelius, and Thunderbolts on his Enemies, which is the greateſt Confirmation poſſible of the Story of the Chriſtian Legion, and will be a ſtanding Evidence for it, when any Paſſage in an old Author may be ſuppoſed to be forged. The Figure, that Jupiter here makes among the Clouds, puts me in mind of a Paſſage in the Æneid, which gives juſt ſuch another Image of him. Virgil's Interpreters are certainly to blame, that ſuppoſe it is nothing but the Air which is here meant by Jupiter.

Quantus ab occaſu veniens pluvialibus hædis
Verberat imber humum, quàm multâ grandine nimbi

In vada præcipitant, quum Jupiter horridus auſtris
Torquet aquoſam hyemem, et cœlo cava nubila rumpit.
Æn. ix. v. 668.

The Combat thickens, like the Storm that flies
From Weſtward, when the ſhow'ry Kids ariſe:
Or patt'ring Hail comes pouring on the Main,
When Jupiter deſcends in harden'd Rain,
Or bellowing Clouds burſt with a ſtormy Sound,
And with an armed Winter ſtrew the Ground.
Dryden.

I have ſeen a Medal, that, according to the Opinion of many learned Men, relates to the ſame Story. The Emperor is intitled on it Germanicus, (as it was in the Wars of Germany that this Circumſtance happened) and carries on the Reverſe a Thunderbolt in his Hand; for the Heathens attributed the ſame Miracle to the Piety of the Emperor, that the Chriſtians aſcribed to the Prayers of their Legion. Fulmen de cœlo precibus ſuis contra hoſtium Machinamentum Marcus extorſit, ſuis pluviâ impetratâ cùm ſiti laborarent. Jul. Capit.

The Emperor Marcus Aurelius, by his Prayers, extorted Thunder from Heav'n againſt the Enemy's battering Engine, having obtain'd Rain for his Army, when it was oppreſs'd with Thirſt.

Claudian takes notice of this Miracle, and has given the ſame Reaſon for it.

De ſexto Conſ. Hon.

So mild Aurelius to the Gods repaid
The grateful Vows that in his Fears he made,
When Latium from unnumber'd Foes was freed:
Nor did he Then by his own Force ſucceed;
But with deſcending Show'rs of Brimſtone fir'd,
The wild Barbarian in the Storm expir'd.
Wrapt in devouring Flames the Horſeman rag'd,
And ſpurr'd his Steed in equal Flames engag'd:
Another pent in his ſcorch'd Armour glow'd,
While from his Head the melting Helmet flow'd;
Swords by the Lightning's ſubtile Force diſtill'd,
And the cold Sheath with running Metal fill'd:
No human Arm its weak Aſſiſtance brought,
But Heav'n, offended Heav'n, the Battle fought;
Whether dark Magic and Chaldean Charms
Had fill'd the Skies, and ſet the Gods in Arms;
Or good Aurelius (as I more believe)
Deſerv'd whatever Aid the Thunderer could give.

I do not remember that M. Dacier, among ſeveral Quotations on this Subject, in the Life of Marcus Aurelius, has taken notice, either of the foremen-tioned Figure on the Pillar of Marcus Antoninus, or of the beautiful Paſſage I have quoted out of Claudian.

It is pity the Obeliſks in Rome had not been charged with ſeveral Parts of the Ægyptian Hiſtories inſtead of Hieroglyphics, which might have given no ſmall

Light

Light to the Antiquities of that Nation, which are now quite ſunk out of ſight in thoſe remoter Ages of the World. Among the triumphal Arches, that of Conſtantine is not only the nobleſt of any in Rome, but in the World. I ſearch'd narrowly into it, eſpecially among thoſe Additions of Sculpture made in the Emperor's own Age, to ſee if I could find any Mark of the Apparition, that is ſaid to have preceded the very Victory which gave occaſion to the triumphal Arch. But there are not the leaſt Traces of it to be met with, which is not very ſtrange, if we conſider that the greateſt Part of the Ornaments were taken from Trajan's Arch, and ſet up to the new Conqueror, in no ſmall haſte, by the Senate and People of Rome, who were then moſt of them Heathens. There is however ſomething in the Inſcription, which is as old as the Arch itſelf, which ſeems to hint at the Emperor's Viſion. Imp. Cæſ. Fl. Conſtantino maximo P. F. Auguſto S. P. Q. R. quod inſtinctu Divinitatis mentis magnitudine cum exercitu ſuo tam de Tyranno quàm de omni ejus Factione uno tempore juſtis Rempublicam ultus eſt armis arcum triumphis inſignem dicavit. To the Emperor Conſtantine, &c. the Senate and People of Rome have dedicated this Triumphal Arch, becauſe, through a Divine Impulſe, with a Greatneſs of Mind, and by force of Arms, he deliver'd the Commonwealth at once from the Tyrant and all his Faction. There is no Statue of this Emperor at Rome with a Croſs to it, tho' the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians ſay there were many ſuch erected to him. I have ſeen his Medals that were ſtamp'd with it, and a very remarkable one of his Son Conſtantius, where he is crown'd by a Victory on the Reverſe, with this Inſcription, In hoc Signo

Victor eris. This triumphal Arch, and ſome other Buildings of the ſame Age, ſhow us that Architecture held up its Head after all the other Arts of Deſigning were in a very weak and languiſhing Condition, as it was probably the firſt among them that revived. If I was ſurpriſed not to find the Croſs in Conſtantine's Arch, I was as much diſappointed not to ſee the Figure of the Temple of Jeruſalem on that of Titus, where are repreſented the Golden Candleſtick, the Table of Shew-bread, and the River Jordan. Some are of Opinion, that the compoſite Pillars of this Arch were made in imitation of the Pillars of Solomon's Temple, and obſerve that theſe are the moſt ancient of any that are found of that Order.

It is almoſt impoſſible for a Man to form, in his Imagination, ſuch beautiful and glorious Scenes as are to be met with in ſeveral of the Roman Churches and Chapels; for having ſuch a prodigious Stock of ancient Marble within the very City, and at the ſame time ſo many different Quarries in the Bowels of their Country, moſt of their Chapels are laid over with ſuch a rich Variety of Incruſtations, as cannot poſſibly be found in any other Part of the World. And notwithſtanding the incredible Sums of Money, which have been already laid out this way, there is ſtill the ſame Work going forward in other Parts of Rome, the laſt ſtill endeavouring to out ſhine thoſe that went before them. Painting, Sculpture and Architecture, are at preſent far from being in a flouriſhing Condition; but 'tis thought they may all all recover themſelves under the preſent Pontificate, if the Wars and Confuſions of Italy will give them leave. For as the Pope is himſelf a Maſter of polite Learning, and a great Encourager of Arts, ſo at Rome any of theſe Arts immediately thrives under the Encouragement of the Prince, and may be fetched up to its Perfection in ten or a dozen Years, which is the Work of an Age or two in other Countries, where they have not ſuch excellent Models to form themſelves upon.

I ſhall conclude my Obſervations on Rome with a Letter of King Henry the Eighth to Anne of Bullein, tranſcribed out of the famous Manuſcript in the Vatican, which the Biſhop of Salisbury aſſures us is written with the King's own Hand.

" The Cauſe of my writing at this time is to " hear of your Health and Proſperity, of which " I would be as glad as in a manner of my own, " praying God that it be his Pleaſure to ſend us " ſhortly together, for, I promiſe, I long for it; " howbeit I truſt it ſhall not be long too, and " ſeeing my Darling is abſent, I can no leſs do " than ſend her ſome Fleſh, prognoſticating that " hereafter thou muſt have ſome of mine, which, " if he pleaſe, I wou'd have now. As touching " your Siſter's Mother, I have conſign'd Walter " Welſh to write to my Lord Manwring my Mind " therein; whereby I truſt he ſhall not have Power " to diſſeid her; for ſurely, whatever is ſaid, it " cannot ſo ſtand with his Honour, but that he " muſt needs take his natural Daughter in her " extreme Neceſſity. No more to you at this " time, my own Darling, but that with a Whiſtle

" I wiſh we were together one Evening; by the " Hand of Yours,

HENRY.

Theſe Letters are always ſhown to an Engliſhman that viſits the Vatican Library.

TOWNS

Within the Neighbourhood of

ROME.

I Spent three or four Days on Tivoli, Frescati, Palestrina and Albano. In our way to Tivoli I saw the Rivulet of Salforata, formerly call'd Albula, and smelt the Stench that arises from its Waters some time before I saw them. Martial mentions this offensive Smell in an Epigram of the fourth Book, as he does the Rivulet itself in the first.

Quod siccæ redolet lacus lacunæ,
Crudarum nebulæ quod Albularum. Lib. iv. Epigr. 43

The drying Marshes such a Stench convey,
Such the rank Steams of reeking Albula.

Itur ad Herculeæ gelidas quà Tiburis arces,
Canaque sulphureis Albula fumat aquis.
Lib. i. Epigr. 5.

As from high Rome to Tivoli you go,
Where Albula's sulphureous Waters flow.

The little Lake that gives riſe to this River, with its floating Iſlands, is one of the moſt extraordinary natural Curioſities about Rome. It lies in the very Flat of Campania; and as it is the Drain of theſe Parts, 'tis no Wonder that it is ſo impregnated with Sulphur. It has at bottom ſo thick a Sediment of it, that, upon throwing in a Stone, the Water boils for a conſiderable time over the Place which has been ſtirr'd up. At the ſame time are ſeen little Flakes of Scurf riſing up, that are probably the Parts which compoſe the Iſlands; for they often mount of themſelves, tho' the Water is not troubled.

I queſtion not but this Lake was formerly much larger than it is at preſent, and that the Banks have grown over it by degrees, in the ſame manner as the Iſlands have been form'd on it. Nor is it improbable but that, in proceſs of time, the whole Surface of it may be cruſted over, as the Iſlands inlarge themſelves, and the Banks cloſe in upon them. All about the Lake, where the Ground is dry, we found it to be hollow by the trampling of our Horſes Feet. I could not diſcover the leaſt Traces of the Sibyls Temple and Grove, which ſtood on the Borders of this Lake. Tivoli is ſeen at a diſtance lying along the Brow of a Hill. Its Situation has given Horace occaſion to call it Tibur Supinum, as Virgil perhaps for the ſame Reaſon intitles it Superbum. The Villa de Medicis with its Water-works, the Caſcade of the Teverone, and the Ruins of the Sibyls Temple (of which Vignola has made a little Copy at St. Peter's de Monterio) are deſcribed in every Itinerary. I muſt confeſs I was moſt pleaſed with a beautiful Proſpect that none of them have mention'd, which lies at about a Mile diſtance from the Town. It opens on one Side into the Roman

Cam-

Campania, where the Eye loſes itſelf on a ſmooth ſpacious Plain. On the other Side is a more broken and interrupted Scene, made up of an infinite Variety of Inequalities and Shadowings that naturally ariſe from an agreeable Mixture of Hills, Groves and Valleys. But the moſt enlivening Part of all is the River Teverone, which you ſee at about a quarter of a Mile's diſtance throwing itſelf down a Precipice, and falling by ſeveral Caſcades from one Rock to another, 'till it gains the Bottom of the Valley, where the Sight of it would be quite loſt, did not it ſometimes diſcover itſelf thro' the Breaks and Openings of the Woods that grow about it. The Roman Painters often work upon this Landskip, and I am apt to believe that Horace had his eye upon it in thoſe two or three beautiful Touches which he has given us of theſe Seats. The Teverone was formerly call'd the Anio.

Me nec tam patiens Lacedæmon,
Nec tam Lariſſæ percuſſit campus opimæ,
Quàm domus Albuneæ reſonantis,
Et præceps Anio, et Tiburni lucus, et uda Mobilibus pomaria rivis. Lib. i. Od. vii. v. 10.

Not fair Lariſſa's fruitful Shore,
Nor Lacedæmon, charms me more
Than high Albunea's airy Walls,
Reſounding with her Water-falls,
And Tivoli's delightful Shades,
And Anio rolling in Caſcades,
That through the flow'ry Meadows glides
And all the beauteous Scene divides.

I remember Monſieur Dacier explains Mobilibus by Ductilibus, and believes that the Word relates to the the Conduits, Pipes, and Canals, that were made to diſtribute the Waters up and down, according to the Pleaſure of the Owner. But any one who ſees the Teverone muſt be of another Opinion, and conclude it to be one of the moſt moveable Rivers in the World, that has its Stream broken by ſuch a multitude of Caſcades, and is ſo often ſhifted out of one Channel into another. After a very turbulent and noiſy Courſe of ſeveral Miles among the Rocks and Mountains, the Teverone falls into the Valley before-mention'd, where it recovers its Temper, as it were, by little and little, and after many Turns and Windings glides peaceably into the Tiber. In which Senſe we are to underſtand Silius Italicus's Deſcription, to give it its proper Beauty.

Sulphureis gelidus quà ſerpit leniter undis,
Ad genitorem Anio labens ſine murmure Tibrim.

Here the loud Anio's boiſt'rous Clamours ceaſe,
That with ſubmiſſive Murmurs glides in Peace
To his old Sire the Tiber ———

At Freſcati I had the Satisfaction of ſeeing the firſt Sketch of Verſailles in the Walks and Water-works. The Proſpect from it was doubtleſs much more delightful formerly, when the Campania was ſet thick with Towns, Villas, and Plantations. Cicero's Tuſculum was at a Place call'd Grotto Ferrate, about two Miles off this Town, tho' moſt of the modern Writers have fix'd it to Freſcati. Nardini ſays, there was found among the Ruins at Grotto Ferrate a Piece of Sculpture, which Cicero himſelf mentions in one of his familiar Epiſtles. In going to Freſcati we had a fair View of Mount Algido.

On

On our Way to Palæſtrina we ſaw the Lake Regillus, famous for the Apparition of Caſtor and Pollux, who were here ſeen to give their Horſes Drink after the Battle between the Romans and the Son-in-law of Tarquin. At ſome diſtance from it we had a View of the Lacus Gabinus, that is much larger than the former. We left the Road for about half a Mile to ſee the Sources of a modern Aqueduct. It is entertaining to obſerve how the little Springs and Rills, that break out of the Sides of the Mountain, are glean'd up, and convey'd thro' little cover'd Channels into the main Hollow of the Aqueduct. It was certainly very lucky for Rome, ſeeing it had occaſion for ſo many Aqueducts, that there chanc'd to be ſuch a Range of Mountains within its Neighbourhood. For by this means they could take up their Water from what height they pleaſed, without the Expence of ſuch an Engine as that of Marli. Thus the Claudian Aqueduct run thirty-eight Miles, and ſunk after the proportion of five Foot and a half every Mile, by the Advantage only of a high Source and the low Situation of Rome. Palæſtrina ſtands very high, like moſt other Towns in Italy, for the Advantage of the cool Breezes; for which Reaſon Virgil calls it Altum, and Horace Frigidum Præneste. Statius calls it Præneste Sacrum, becauſe of the famous Temple of Fortune that ſtood in it. There are ſtill great Pillars of Granite, and other Fragments of this ancient Temple. But the moſt conſiderable Remnant of it is a very beautiful Moſaic Pavement, the fineſt I have ever ſeen in Marble. The Parts are ſo well join'd together, that the whole Piece looks like a continu'd Picture. There are in it the Figures of a Rhinoceros, of Elephants, and of ſeveral other Animals, with little Landskips, which look very lively and well painted, tho' they are made out of the natural Colours and Shadows of the Marble. I do not remember ever to have met with any old Roman Moſaic, compoſed of little Pieces of Clay half vitrify'd, and prepar'd at the Glaſs houſes which the Italians call Smalte. Theſe are much in uſe at preſent, and may be made of what Colour and Figure the Workman pleaſes; which is a modern Improvement of the Art, and enables thoſe who are employ'd in it to make much finer Pieces of Moſaic than they did formerly.

In our Excurſion to Albano we went as far as Nemi, that takes its Name from the Nemus Dianæ. The whole Country thereabouts is ſtill over-run with Woods and Thickets. The Lake of Nemi lies in a very deep Bottom, ſo ſurrounded on all ſides with Mountains and Groves, that the Surface of it is never ruffled with the leaſt Breath of Wind, which, perhaps, together with the Clearneſs of its Waters, gave it formerly the Name of Diana's Looking-glaſs.

——— Speculumque Dianæ. Virg.

Prince Cæſarini has a Palace at Jenſano, very near Nemi in a pleaſant Situation, and ſet off with many beautiful Walks. In our Return from Jenſano to Albano, we paſſed through la Ricca, the Aricia of the Ancients, Horace's firſt Stage from Rome to Brundiſi. There is nothing at Albano ſo remarkable as the Proſpect from the Capuchins Garden, which for the Extent and Variety of pleaſing Incidents is, I think, the moſt delightful one that I ever ſaw. It takes in the whole Campania, and terminates in a full View of the Mediterranean. You have a Sight at the ſame time of the Alban Lake, which lies juſt by in an Oval Figure of about ſeven Miles

Miles round, and, by reaſon of the continu'd Circuit of high Mountains that incompaſs it, looks like the Area of ſome vaſt Amphitheatre. This, together with the ſeveral green Hills and naked Rocks, within the Neighbourhood, makes the moſt agreeable Confuſion imaginable. Albano keeps up its Credit ſtill for Wine, which perhaps would be as good as it was anciently, did they preſerve it to as great an Age; but as for Olives, there are now very few here, tho' they are in great Plenty at Tivoli;

The Places mention'd in this Chapter were all of them formerly the cool Retirements of the Romans, where they uſed to hide themſelves among the Woods

Woods and Mountains, during the exceſſive Heat of their Summer; as Baiæ was the general Winter Rendezvous.

Jam terras volucremque polum fuga veris Aquoſi

All ſhun the raging Dog-Star's ſultry Heat,
And from the half-unpeopled Town retreat:
Some hid in Nemi's gloomy Foreſts lie,

Others to catch the Breeze of breathing Air,
To Tuſculum or Algido repair;
Or in moiſt Tivoli's Retirements find
A cooling Shade, and a refreſhing Wind.

On the contrary, at preſent, Rome is never fuller of Nobility than in Summer-time: for the Country Towns are ſo infeſted with unwholſom Vapours, that they dare not truſt themſelves in them while the Heats laſt. There is no queſtion but the Air of the Campania would be now as healthful as it was formerly, were there as many Fires burning in it, and as many Inhabitants to manure the Soil. Leaving Rome about the latter end of October, in my Way to Sienna, Sienna, I lay the firſt Night at a little Village in the Territories of the ancient Veii.

The Ruins of their Capital City are at preſent ſo far loſt, that the Geographers are not able to determine exactly the Place where they once ſtood: So litterally is that noble Prophecy of Lucan fulfill'd, of this and other Places of Latium.

Erepto natale feret; tunc omne Latinum
Fabula nomen erit: Gabios, Veioſque, Coramque
Pulvere vix tectæ poterunt monſtrare ruinæ,
Albanoſque lares, Laurentinoſque penates,

Invitus ——— ——— Lib. vii. v. 389.

Succeeding Nations by the Sword ſhall die,
And ſwallow'd up in dark Oblivion lie;
Almighty Latium, with her Cities crown'd,
Shall like an antiquated Fable ſound;
The Veian and the Gabian Tow'rs ſhall fall,
And one promiſcuous Ruin cover all;
Nor, after length of Years, a Stone betray
The Place where once the very Ruins lay:
High Alba's Walls and the Lavinian Strand,
(A lonely Deſert, and an empty Land)
Shall ſcarce afford, for needful Hours of Reſt,
A ſingle Houſe to their benighted Gueſt.

We

We here ſaw the Lake Bacca, that gives Riſe to the Cremera, on whoſe Banks the Fabii were ſlain.

Trecentum numerabat avos, quos turbine Martis
Abſtulit una Dies, cùm fors non æqua labori
Patricio Cremeræ maculavit ſanguine ripas.
Sil. Ital. Lib. i.

Fabius a num'rous Anceſtry could tell,
Three hundred Heroes that in Battle fell,
Near the fam'd Cremera's diſaſt'rous Flood,
That ran polluted with Patrician Blood.

We ſaw afterwards, in the Progreſs of our Voyage, the Lakes of Vico and Bolſena. The laſt is reckon'd one and twenty Miles in Circuit, and is plentifully ſtock'd with Fiſh and Fowl. There are in it a couple of Iſlands, that are perhaps the two floating Iſles mentioned by Pliny, with that improbable Circumſtance of their appearing ſomething like a Circle, and ſometimes like a Triangle, but never like a Quadrangle. It is eaſy enough to conceive how they might become fix'd, tho' they once floated; and it is not very credible, that the Naturaliſt could be deceived in his Account of a Place that lay, as it were, in the Neighbourhood of Rome. At the end of this Lake ſtands Monteſiaſcone, the Habitation of Virgil's Æqui Faliſci, Æn. 7. and on the Side of it the Town of the Volſinians, now call'd Bolſena.

Aut poſitis nemoroſa inter juga Volſiniis.
Juv. Sat. iii. v. 191.

——— Volſinium ſtood
Cover'd with Mountains, and inclos'd with Wood.

I ſaw

I ſaw in the Churchyard of Bolſena an antique Funeral Monument (of that kind which they called a Sarcophagus) very intire, and, what is particular, engraven on all Sides with a curious Repreſentation of a Bacchanal. Had the Inhabitants obſerved a couple of lewd Figures at one End of it, they would not have thought it a proper Ornament for the Place where it now ſtands. After having travell'd hence to Aquapendente, that ſtands in a wonderful pleaſant Situation, we came to the little Brook which ſeparates the Pope's Dominions from the Great Duke's. The Frontier Caſtle of Radicofani is ſeated on the higheſt Mountain in the Country, and is as well fortify'd as the Situation of the Place will permit. We here found the natural Face of the Country quite chang'd from what we had been entertain'd with in the Pope's Dominions. For inſtead of the many beautiful Scenes of green Mountains and fruitful Valleys, that we had been preſented with for ſome Days before, we ſaw now nothing but a wild naked Proſpect of Rocks and Hills, worn out on all Sides with Gutters and Channels, and not a Tree or Shrub to be met with in a vaſt Circuit of ſeveral Miles. This ſavage Proſpect put me in mind of the Italian Proverb, that The Pope has the Fleſh, and the Great Duke the Bones of Italy. Among a large Extent of theſe barren Mountains I ſaw but a ſingle Spot that was cultivated, on which there ſtood a Convent.

SIENNA, LEGHORNE, PISA.

SIENNA ſtands high, and is adorn'd with a great many Towers of Brick, which in the Time of the Commonwealth were erected to ſuch of the Members as had done any conſiderable Service to their Country. Theſe Towers gave us a Sight of the Town a great while before we enter'd it. There is nothing in this City ſo extraordinary as the Cathedral, which a Man may view with Pleaſure after he has ſeen St. Peter's, tho' it is quite of another Make, and can only be look'd upon as one of the Maſter-pieces of Gothic Architecture. When a Man ſees the prodigious Pains and Expence that our Forefathers have been at in theſe barbarous Buildings, one cannot but fancy to himſelf what Miracles of Architecture they would have left us, had they only been inſtructed in the right way; for when the Devotion of thoſe Ages was much warmer than it is at preſent, and the Riches of the People much more at the Diſpoſal of the Prieſts, there was ſo much Money conſum'd on theſe Gothic Cathe-

Cathedrals, as would have finiſh'd a greater Variety of noble Buildings, than have been raiſed either before or ſince that time.

One would wonder to ſee the vaſt Labour that has been laid out on this ſingle Cathedral. The very Spouts are loaden with Ornaments; the Windows are form'd like ſo many Scenes of Perſpective, with a multitude of little Pillars retiring one behind another; the great Columns are finely engraven with Fruits and Foliage that run twiſting about them from the very Top to the Bottom; the whole Body of the Church is checquer'd with different Lays of white and black Marble, the Pavement curiouſly cut out in Deſigns and Scripture-Stories, and the Front cover'd with ſuch a Variety of Figures, and over-run with ſo many little Mazes and Labyrinths of Sculpture, that nothing in the World can make a prettier Shew to thoſe, who prefer falſe Beauties, and affected Ornaments, to a Noble and Majeſtic Simplicity. Over-againſt this Church ſtands a large Hoſpital, erected by a Shoe-maker, who has been Beatify'd, tho' never Sainted. There ſtands a Figure of him ſuperſcrib'd, Sutor ultra Crepidam. —— A Shoemaker beyond his Laſt. I ſhall ſpeak nothing of the Extent of this City, the Cleanlineſs of its Streets, nor the Beauty of its Piazza, which ſo many Travellers have deſcrib'd. As this is the laſt Republic that fell under the Subjection of the Duke of Florence, ſo it is ſtill ſuppoſed to retain many Hankerings after its ancient Liberty. For this Reaſon, when the Keys and Pageants of the Duke's Towns and Governments paſs in Proceſſion before him, on St. John's Baptiſt's Day, I was told that Sienna comes in the Rear of his Dominions, and is puſh'd forward by thoſe that follow, to ſhow the Reluctancy it has to appear in ſuch a Solemnity. I

ſhall

ſhall ſay nothing of the many groſs and abſur Traditions of St. Catharine of Sienna, who is th great Saint of this Place. I think there is as muc Pleaſure in hearing a Man tell his Dreams, as i reading Accounts of this Nature. A Traveller, tha thinks them worth his Obſervation, may fill a Boo with them at every great Town in Italy.

From Sienna we went forward to Leghorne, wher the two Ports, the Bagnio, and Donatelli's Statu of the Great Duke, amidſt the four Slaves chain to his Pedeſtal, are very noble Sights. The Squar is one of the largeſt, and will be one of the mo beautiful in Italy, when this Statue is erected in i and a Town-houſe built at one End of it to fron the Church that ſtands at the other. They are at continual Expence to cleanſe the Ports, and kee 'em from being chok'd up, which they do by th help of ſeveral Engines that are always at work and employ many of the Great Duke's Slaves. What ever part of the Harbour they ſcoop in, it has a Influence on all the reſt; for the Sea immediatel works the whole Bottom to a Level. They draw a double Advantage from the Dirt that is taken up as it clears the Port, and at the ſame time dries u ſeveral Marſhes about the Town, where they lay i from time to time. One can ſcarce imagine how great Profits the Duke of Tuſcany receives from thi ſingle Place, which are not generally thought ſ conſiderable, becauſe it paſſes for a free Port. But i is very well known how the Great Duke, on a late occaſion, notwithſtanding the Privileges of the Mer chants, drew no ſmall Sums of Money out of them tho' ſtill in reſpect of the exorbitant Dues that ar paid at moſt other Ports, it deſervedly retains th Name of Free. It brings into his Dominions a great Increaſe of People from all other Nations

They

They reckon in it near ten thouſand Jews, many of them very Rich, and ſo great Traffickers, that our Engliſh Factors complain they have moſt of our Country Trade in their Hands. 'Tis true the Strangers pay little or no Taxes directly; but out of every thing they buy there goes a large Gabel to the Government. The very Ice-Merchant at Leghorne pays above a thouſand Pound Sterling annually for his Privilege, and the Tobacco-Merchant ten thouſand. The Ground is ſold by the Great Duke at a very high Price, and Houſes are every Day riſing on it. All the Commodities that go up into the Country, of which there are great Quantities, are clogg'd with Impoſitions as ſoon as they leave Leghorne. All the Wines, Oils, and Silks, that come down from the fruitful Valleys of Piſa, Florence, and other Parts of Tuſcany, muſt make their Way thro' ſeveral Duties and Taxes before they can reach the Port. The Canal that runs from the Sea into the Arno gives a convenient Carriage to all Goods that are to be ſhipp'd off, which does not a little enrich the Owners: and in proportion as private Men grow wealthy, their Legacies, Law-Suits, Daughters Portions, &c. increaſe, in all which the Great Duke comes in for a conſiderable Share. The Lucqueſe, who traffic at this Port, are ſaid to bring in a great deal into the Duke's Coffers. Another Advantage, which may be of great uſe to him, is, that at five or ſix Days warning he might find Credit in this Town for very large Sums of Money, which no other Prince in Italy can pretend to. I need not take notice of the Reputation that this Port gives him among foreign Princes; but there is one Benefit ariſing from it, which, tho' never thrown into the Account, is doubtleſs very conſiderable. It is well known how the Piſans and Florentines long regretted the the Loſs of their ancient Liberty, and their Subjection to a Family that ſome of them thought themſelves equal to, in the flouriſhing Times of their Commonwealths. The Town of Leghorne has accidentally done what the greateſt Fetch of Politics would have found difficult to have brought about; for it has almoſt unpeopled Piſa, if we compare it with what it was formerly; and every Day leſſens the Number of the Inhabitants of Florence. This does not only weaken thoſe Places, but at the ſame time turns many of their buſieſt Spirits, from their old Notions of Honour and Liberty, to the Thoughts of Traffic and Merchandiſe: And as Men engag'd in a Road of Thriving are no Friends to Changes and Revolutions, they are at preſent worn into a Habit of Subjection, and puſh all their Purſuits another way. It is no wonder therefore that the Great Duke has ſuch Apprehenſions of the Pope's making Civita Vecchia a Free Port, which may in time prove ſo very prejudicial to Leghorne. It would be thought an improbable Story, ſhould I ſet down the ſeveral Methods that are commonly reported to have been made uſe of, during the laſt Pontificate, to put a ſtop to this Deſign. The Great Duke's Money was ſo well beſtow'd in the Conclave, that ſeveral of the Cardinals diſſuaded the Pope from the Undertaking, and at laſt turn'd all his Thoughts upon the little Port which he made at Antium, near Nettuno. The chief Workmen, that were to have convey'd the Water to Civita Vecchia, were bought off; and when a poor Capuchin, that was thought Proof againſt all Bribes, had undertaken to carry on the Work, he died a little after he had enter'd upon it. The preſent Pope, however, who is very well acquainted with the Secret Hiſtory, and the Weakneſs of his Predeceſſor, ſeems reſolved reſolved to bring the Project to its Perfection. He has already been at vaſt Charges in finiſhing the Aqueduct, and had ſome Hopes that, if the War ſhould drive our Engliſh Merchants from Sicily and Naples, they would ſettle here. His Holineſs has told ſome Engliſh Gentlemen, that thoſe of our Nation ſhould have the greateſt Privileges of any but the Subjects of the Church. One of our Countrymen, who makes a good Figure at Rome, told me, the Pope has this Deſign extremely at his Heart, but that he fears the Engliſh will ſuffer nothing like a Reſident or Conſul in his Dominions, tho' at the ſame time he hoped the Buſineſs might as well be tranſacted by one that had no public Character. This Gentleman has ſo buſied himſelf in the Affair, that he has offended the French and Spaniſh Cardinals, inſomuch that Cardinal Janſon refuſed to ſee him, when he would have made his Apology for what he had ſaid to the Pope on this Subject. There is one great Objection to Civita Vecchia, that the Air of the Place is not wholſom; but this, they ſay, proceeds from want of Inhabitants, the Air of Leghorne having been worſe than this before the Town was well peopled.

The great Profits, which have accrued to the Duke of Florence from his Free Port, have ſet ſeveral of the States of Italy on the ſame Project. The moſt likely to ſucceed in it would be the Genoeſe, who lie more convenient than the Venetians, and have a more inviting Form of Government, than that of the Church, or that of Florence. But as the Port of Genoa is ſo very ill guarded againſt Storms, that no Privileges can tempt the Merchants from Leghorne into it, ſo dare not the Genoeſe make any other of their Ports Free, leſt it ſhould draw to it moſt of their Commerce and Inhabitants, and by conſequence ruin their chief City.

From Leghorne I went to Piſa, where there is ſtill the Shell of a great City, tho' not half furniſh'd with Inhabitants. The great Church, Baptiſtery, and leaning Tower, are very well worth ſeeing, and are built after the ſame Fancy with the Cathedral of Sienna. Half a Day's Journey more brought me into the Republic of Lucca.

THE REPUBLIC OF LUCCA.

IT is very pleaſant to ſee how the ſmall Territories of this little Republic are cultivated to the beſt Advantage, ſo that one cannot find the leaſt Spot of Ground, that is not made to contribute its utmoſt to the Owner. In all the Inhabitants there appears an Air of Chearfulneſs and Plenty, not often to be met with in thoſe of the Countries which lie about 'em. There is but one Gate for Strangers to enter at, that it may be known what Numbers of them are in the Town. Over it is written in Letters of Gold, Libertas.

This Republic is ſhut up in the Great Duke's Dominions, who at preſent is very much incenſed againſt it, and ſeems to threaten it with the Fate of Florence, Piſa, and Sienna. The Occaſion as follows.

The Lucqueſe plead Preſcription for Hunting in one of the Duke's Foreſts, that lies upon their Frontiers, which about two Years ſince was ſtrictly forbidden them, the Prince intending to preſerve the Game for his own Pleaſure. Two or three Sportſmen of the Republic, who had the Hardineſs to offend againſt the Prohibition, were ſeized, and kept in a neighbouring Priſon. Their Countrymen, to the number of Threeſcore, attack'd the Place where they were kept in Cuſtody, and reſcued them. The Great Duke redemands his Priſoners, and, as a further Satisfaction, would have the Governor of the Town, where the threeſcore Aſſailants had combined together, deliver'd into his Hands; but receiving only Excuſes, he reſolved to do himſelf Juſtice. Accordingly he order'd all the Lucqueſe to be ſeiz'd that were found on a Market-Day, in one of his Frontier Towns. Theſe amounted to Fourſcore, among whom were Perſons of ſome Conſequence in the Republic. They are now in Priſon at Florence, and, as it is ſaid, treated hardly enough; for there are fifteen of the Number dead within leſs than two Years. The King of Spain, who is Protector of the Commonwealth, received Information from the Great Duke of what had paſs'd, who approv'd of his Proceedings, and order'd the Lucqueſe, by his Governor of Milan, to give a proper Satisfaction. The Republic, thinking themſelves ill uſed by their Protector, as they ſay at Florence, have ſent to Prince Eugene to deſire the Emperor's Protection, with an Offer of Winter-Quarters, as it is ſaid, for four Thouſand Germans. The Great Duke riſes on them in his Demands, and will not be ſatisfied with leſs than a hundred Thouſand Crowns, and a ſolemn Embaſſy to beg Pardon for the paſt, and promiſe Amendment for the future. Thus ſtands

ſtands the Affair at preſent, that may end in the Ruin of the Commonwealth, if the French ſucceed in Italy. It is pleaſant however to hear the Diſcourſe of the Common People of Lucca, who are firmly perſuaded that one Lucqueſe can beat five Florentines, who are grown low-ſpirited, as they pretend, by the Great Duke's Oppreſſions, and have nothing worth fighting for. They ſay, they can bring into the Field twenty or Thirty thouſand fighting Men, all ready to ſacrifice their Lives for their Liberty. They have Quantity of Arms and Ammunition, but few Horſe. It muſt be own'd theſe People are more happy, at leaſt in Imagination, than the reſt of their Neighbours, becauſe they think themſelves ſo; tho' ſuch a Chimerical Happineſs is not peculiar to Republicans, for we find the Subjects of the moſt abſolute Prince in Europe are as proud of their Monarch as the Lucqueſe of being ſubject to none. Should the French Affairs proſper in Italy, it is poſſible the Great Duke may bargain for the Republic of Lucca, by the help of his great Treaſures, as his Predeceſſors did formerly with the Emperor for that of Sienna. The Great Dukes have never yet attempted any thing on Lucca, as not only fearing the Arms of their Protector, but becauſe they are well aſſured, that, ſhould the Lucqueſe be reduced to the laſt Extremity, they would rather throw themſelves under the Government of the Genoeſe, or ſome ſtronger Neighbour, than ſubmit to a State for which they have ſo great an Averſion. And the Florentines are very ſenſible, that it is much better having a weak State within their Dominons, than the Branch of one as ſtrong as themſelves. But ſhould ſo formidable a Power, as that of the French King, ſupport them in their Attempts, there is no Government in Italy that would dare to interpoſe.

This Republic, for the Extent of its Dominions, is eſteemed the richeſt and beſt peopled State of Italy. The whole Adminiſtration of the Government paſſes into different Hands at the End of every two Months, which is the greateſt Security imaginable to their Liberty, and wonderfully contributes to the quick Diſpatch of all public Affairs: But in any Exigence of State, like that they are now preſſed with, it certainly asks a much longer time to conduct any Deſign, for the Good of the Commonwealth, to its Maturity and Perfection.

FLORENCE.

I HAD the good Luck to be at Florence when there was an Opera acted, which was the eighth I had ſeen in Italy. I could not but ſmile to read the ſolemn Proteſtation of the Poet in the firſt Page, where he declares that he believes neither in the Fates, Deities, or Deſtinies; and that, if he has made uſe of the Words, it is purely out of Poetical Liberty, and not from his real Sentiments, for that in all theſe Particulars he believes as the Holy Mother Church believes and commands.

PROTESTA.

Le voci Fato, Deità, Deſtino, e ſimili, che per entro queſto Drama trovarai, ſon meſſe per iſcherzo poetico, e non per Sentimento vero, credendo ſempre en tutto quello, che crede, e comanda Santa Madre chieſa.

There are ſome beautiful Palaces in Florence; and as Tuſcan Pillars and Ruſtic Work owe their Original to this Country, the Architects always take care to give them a Place in the great Edifices that are raiſed in Tuſcany. The Duke's new Palace is a very noble Pile, built after this manner, which makes it look extremely Solid and Majeſtic. It is not unlike that of Luxemburg at Paris, which was built by Mary of Medicis, and for that reaſon perhaps the Workmen fell into the Tuſcan Humour. I found in the Court of this Palace what I could not meet with any where in Rome: I mean an antique Statue of Hercules lifting up Antæus from the Earth, which I have already had occaſion to ſpeak of. It was found in Rome, and brought hither under the Reign of Leo the Tenth. There are abundance of Pictures in the ſeveral Apartments, by the Hands of the greateſt Maſters.

But 'tis the famous Gallery of the Old Palace, where are perhaps the nobleſt Collections of Curioſities to be met with in any Part of the whole World. The Gallery itſelf is made in the Shape of an L, according to Mr. Laſſel; but, if it muſt needs be like a Letter, it reſembles the Greek Π moſt. It is adorned with admirable Pieces of Sculpture, as well modern as ancient. Of the laſt Sort I ſhall mention thoſe that are rareſt either for the Perſon they repreſent, or the Beauty of the Sculpture. Among the Buſts of the Emperors and Empreſſes, there are theſe that follow, which are all very ſcarce, and ſome of them almoſt ſingular in their kind: Agrippa, Caligula, Otho, Nerva, Ælius, Verus, Pertinax, Geta, Didius Julianus, Albinus extremely well wrought, and, what is ſeldom ſeen in Alabaſter, Gordianus, Africanus the elder, Eliogabalus, Galien the elder, and the younger Pupienus. I have put Agrippa among the Emperors, becauſe he is generally rang'd ſo in Sets of Medals, as ſome that follow among the Empreſſes have no other right to the Company they are joined with: Domitia, Agrippina Wife of Germanicus, Antonia, Matidia, Plotina, Mallia Scantilla, falſly inſcrib'd under her Buſt Julia Severi, Aquilia Severa, Julia

Julia Mæſa. I have generally obſerv'd at Rome which is the great Magazine of theſe Antiquities, that the ſame Heads which are rare in Medals, are alſo rare in Marble, and indeed one may commonly aſſign the ſame Reaſon for both, which was the Shortneſs of the Emperor's Reigns, that did not give the Workmen time to make many of their Figures; and as the Shortneſs of their Reigns was generally occaſioned by the Advancement of a Rival, it is no wonder that nobody worked on the Figure of a Deceaſed Emperor, when his Enemy was in the Throne. This Obſervation however does not always hold. An Agrippa or Caligula, for Example, is a common Coin, but a very extraordinary Buſt; and a Tiberius a rare Coin, but a common Buſt; which one would the more wonder at, if we conſider the Indignities that were offer'd to this Emperor's Statues after his Death. The Tiberius in Tiberim is a known Inſtance.

Among the Buſts of ſuch Emperors as are common enough, there are ſeveral in the Gallery that deſerve to be taken notice of for the Excellence of the Sculpture; as thoſe of Auguſtus, Veſpaſian, Adrian, Marcus Aurelius, Lucius Verus, Septimius Severus, Caracalla, Geta. There is in the ſame Gallery a beautiful Buſt of Alexander the Great, caſting up his Face to Heaven, with a noble Air of Grief or Diſcontentedneſs in his Looks. I have ſeen two or three antique Buſts of Alexander in the ſame Air and Poſture, and am apt to think the Sculptor had in his Thoughts the Conqueror's weeping for new Worlds, or ſome other the like Circumſtance of his Hiſtory. There is alſo in Porphyry the Head of a Fawn, and of the God Pan. Among the intire Figures I took particular notice of a Veſtal Virgin, with the Holy Fire burning before her.

This Statue, I think, may decide that notable Controverſy among the Antiquaries, whether the Veſtals, after having receiv'd the Tonſure, ever ſuffer'd their Hair to come agnin; for it is here full grown, and gather'd under the Veil. The brazen Figure of the Conſul, with the Ring on his Finger, reminded me of Juvenal's majoris pondera Gemmæ. There is another Statue in Braſs, ſuppoſed to be of Apollo, with this modern Inſcription on the Pedeſtal, which I muſt confeſs I don't know what to make of, Ut potui huc veni muſis et fratre relicto. I ſaw in the ſame Gallery the famous Figure of the wild Boar, the Gladiator, the Narciſſus, the Cupid and Pſyche, the Flora, with ſome modern Statues that ſeveral others have deſcribed. Among the antique Figures there is a fine one of Morpheus in Touchſtone. I have always obſerved, that this God is repreſented by the ancient Statuaries under the Figure of a Boy aſleep, with a Bundle of Poppy in his Hand. I at firſt took it for a Cupid, 'till I had taken notice that it had neither Bow nor Quiver. I ſuppoſe Dr. Liſter has been guilty of the ſame Miſtake, in the Reflexions he makes on what he calls the ſleeping Cupid with Poppy in his Hands.

Such are the Cupids that in Paint we view;

'Tis

'Tis probable they choſe to repreſent the God of Sleep under the Figure of a Boy, contrary to all our modern Deſigners, becauſe it is that Age, which has its Repoſe the leaſt broken by Cares and Anxieties. Statius, in his celebrated Invocation of Sleep, addreſſes himſelf to him under the ſame Figure.

Crimine quo merui, juvenis placidiſſime Divûm,
Quove errore miſer, donis ut ſolus egerem,
Somne, tuis? tacet omne pecus, volucreſque feræque, &c.

Tell me my ſad Offence; that only I,
While huſh'd at Eaſe thy drouſy Subjects lie,
In the dead Silence of the Night complain,
Nor taſte the Bleſſings of thy peaceful Reign.

I never ſaw any Figure of Sleep that was not of black Marble, which has probably ſome Relation to the Night, that is the proper Seaſon for Reſt. I ſhould not have made this Remark, but that I remember to have read in one of the ancient Authors, that the Nile is generally repreſented in Stone of this Colour, becauſe it flows from the Country of the Æthiopians; which ſhows us that Statuaries had ſometimes an Eye to the Perſon they were to repreſent, in the Choice they made of their Marble. There are ſtill at Rome ſome of theſe black Statues of the Nile which are cut in a kind of Touchſtone.

At

At one End of the Gallery ſtand two antique marble Pillars, curiouſly wrought with the Figures of the old Roman Arms and Inſtruments of War. After a full ſurvey of the Gallery, we were led into four or five Chambers of Curioſities that ſtand on the Side of it. The firſt was a Cabinet of Antiquities, made up chiefly of Idols, Taliſmans, Lamps, and Hieroglyphics. I ſaw nothing in it that I was not before acquainted with, except the four following Figures in Braſs.

I. A little Image of Juno Siſpita, or Soſpita, which perhaps is not to be met with any where elſe but on Medals. She is clothed in a Goat's Skin, the Horns ſticking out above her Head. The Right Arm is broken that probably ſupported a Shield, and the left a little defac'd, tho' one may ſee it held ſomething in its Graſp formerly. The Feet are bare. I remember Tully's Deſcription of this Goddeſs in the following Words. Illam noſtram Soſpitam, quam tu nunquam ne in Somniis vides, niſi cum pelle Caprinâ, cum haſtâ, cum ſcutulo, cum calceolis repandis.—Our Goddeſs Soſpita, whom you never ſee, ev'n in a Dream, without a Goat-ſkin, a Spear, a little Shield, and broad Sandals.

II. An

A Medal of Juno Sispita. Vid. Fulv. Urſin. in Familiâ Thoriâ & Porciliâ.

This is a Reverſe of Anton. Pius.

II. An antique Model of the famous Laocoon and his two Sons, that ſtands in the Belvidera at Rome. This is the more remarkable, as it is intire in thoſe Parts where the Statue is maim'd. It was by the help of this Model that Bandinelli finiſhed his admirable Copy of the Laocoon, which ſtands at one End of this Gallery.

III. An Apollo or Amphion. I took notice of this little Figure for the Singularity of the Inſtrument, which I never before ſaw in ancient Sculpture. It is not unlike a Violin, and play'd on after the ſame manner. I doubt however whether this Figure be not of a later Date than the reſt, by the Meanneſs of the Workmanſhip.

IV. A Corona Radialis with only eight Spikes to it. Every one knows the uſual Number was twelve, ſome ſay in alluſion to the Signs of the Zodiac, and others to the Labours of Hercules.

Dryden.

The two next Chambers are made up of ſeveral artificial Curioſities in Ivory, Amber, Cryſtal, Marble, and precious Stones, which all Voyage-Writers are full of. In the Chamber that is ſhown laſt ſtands the celebrated Venus of Medicis. The Statue ſeems much leſs than the Life, as being perfectly naked, and in Company with others of a larger Make: It is notwithſtanding as big as the ordinary ſize of a Woman, as I concluded from the Meaſure of her Wriſt; for from the Bigneſs of any one Part it is eaſy to gueſs at all the reſt, in a Figure of ſuch nice Proportions. The Softneſs of the Fleſh, the Delicacy of the Shape, Air, and Poſture, and the Correctneſs of Deſign in this Statue are inexpreſſible. I have ſeveral Reaſons to believe that the Name of the Sculptor on the Pedeſtal is not ſo old as the Statue. This Figure of Venus put me in mind of a Speech ſhe makes in one of the Greek Epigrams.

Γυμνὴν οἶδε Πάρις μὲ καὶ Ἀγχίσης καὶ Ἄδωνις,
Τὲς τρεῖς οἶδα μόνες· Πραξιτέλης δὲ πόθεν;

Anchiſes, Paris, and Adonis too,
Have ſeen me naked and expos'd to view;
All theſe I frankly own without denying;
But where has this Praxiteles been prying?

There

There is another Venus in the ſame Circle, that would make a good Figure any where elſe. There are among the old Roman Statues ſeveral of Venus in different Poſtures and Habits, as there are many particular Figures of her made after the ſame Deſign. I fancy it is not hard to find among them ſome that were made after the three Statues of this Goddeſs, which Pliny mentions. In the ſame Chamber is the Roman Slave whetting his Knife and liſt'ning, which from the Shoulders upward is incomparable. The two Wreſtlers are in the ſame Room. I obſerved here likewiſe a very curious Buſt of Annius Veras, the young Son of Marcus Aurelius, who dy'd at nine Years of Age. I have ſeen ſeveral other Buſts of him at Rome, tho' his Medals are exceeding rare.

The Great Duke has ordered a large Chamber to be fitted up for old Inſcriptions, Urns, Monuments, and the like Sets of Antiquities. I was ſhown ſeveral of them which are not yet put up. There are the two famous Inſcriptions that give ſo great a light to the Hiſtories of Appius, who made the Highway, and of Fabius the Dictator; they contain a ſhort Account of the Honours they paſſed through, and the Actions they performed. I ſaw too the Buſts of Tranquillina, Mother to Gordianus Pius, and of Quintus Herennius, Son to Trajan Decius, which are extremely valuable for their Rarity; and a beautiful old Figure made after the celebrated Hermaphrodite in the Villa Borgheſe. I ſaw nothing that has not been obſerved by ſeveral others in the Argentaria, the Tabernacle of St. Lawrence's Chapel, and the Chamber of Painters. The Chapel of St. Lawrence will be perhaps the moſt coſtly Piece of Work on the Face of the Earth, when compleated; but it advances ſo very ſlowly, that 'tis not impoſſible ble but the Family of Medicis may be extinct befo their Burial-Place is finiſh'd.

The Great Duke has liv'd many Years separa from the Dutcheſs, who is at preſent in the Court France, and intends there to end her Days. The Ca dinal his Brother is old and infirm, and could never b induced to reſign his Purple for the uncertain Proſpe of giving an Heir to the Dukedom of Tuſcany The great Prince has been married ſeveral Year without any Children; and notwithſtanding all th Precautions in the World were taken for the Mar riage of the Prince his younger Brother (as the find ing out a Lady for him who was in the Vigour an Flower of her Age, and had given Marks of he Fruitfulneſs by a former Husband) they have all hi therto proved unſucceſsful. There is a Branch o the Family of Medicis in Naples: The Head of i has been own'd as a Kinſman by the Great Duke and 'tis thought will ſucceed to his Dominions, in caſe the Princes his Sons die Childleſs; though 'tis not impoſſible but, in ſuch a Conjuncture, the Commonwealths, that are thrown under the Great Dutchy, may make ſome Efforts towards the Re covery of their ancient Liberty.

I was in the Library of Manuſcripts belonging to St. Laurence, of which there is a Printed Catalogue. I look'd into the Virgil, which diſputes its Antiquity with that of the Vatican. It wants the Ille ego qui quondam, &c. and the twenty two Lines in the ſe cond Æneid, beginning at Jamque adeò ſuper unus eram.----I muſt confeſs I always thought this Paſ ſage left out with a great deal of Judgment by Tucca and Varius, as it ſeems to contradict a Part in the ſixth Æneid, and repreſents the Hero in a Paſſion, that is, at leaſt, not at all becoming the Greatneſs of his Character. Beſides, I think the Apparition of Venus comes in very properly to draw him away from the Sight of Priam's Murder; for without ſuch a Machine to take him off, I can't ſee how the Hero could, with Honour, leave Neoptolemus triumphant, and Priam unrevenged. But ſince Virgil's Friends thought fit to let drop this Incident of Helen, I wonder they would not blot out, or alter a Line in Venus's Speech, that has a relation to the Rencounter, and comes in improperly without it;

Non tibi Tyndaridæ facies inviſa Lacænæ,
Culpatuſve Paris ——— Æn. 2. v. 601.

Not Helen's Face, nor Paris was in Fault.
Dryden.

Florence for modern Statues I think excels even Rome; but theſe I ſhall paſs over in Silence, that I may not tranſcribe out of others.

The Way from Florence to Bolonia runs over ſeveral Ranges of Mountains, and is the worſt Road, I believe, of any over the Apennines; for this was my third time of croſſing them. It gave me a lively Idea of Silius Italicus's Deſcription of Hannibal's March.

Quoque magis ſubiere jugo atque evadere niſi
Erexere gradum, creſcit labor, ardua ſuprà
Seſe aperit feſſis, et naſcitur altera moles. Lib. 3.

From Steep to Steep the Troops advanc'd with Pain,
In hopes at laſt the topmaſt Cliff to gain;
But ſtill by new Aſcents the Mountain grew,
And a freſh Toil preſented to their View.

I ſhall conclude this Chapter with the Deſcriptions which which the Latin Poets have given us of the Apennines. We may obſerve in them all the remarkable Qualities of this prodigious length of Mountains, that run from one Extremity of Italy to the other, and give Riſe to an incredible Variety of Rivers that water this delightful Country.

Deform'd with Ice, the ſhady Apennine
Mix'd with the Skies; and, cover'd deep with Mows,
High as the Stars his hoary Summit roſe.

And ſee the Billows riſe on either Side;
At Piſa here the Range of Mountains ends,
And here to high Ancona's Shores extends:
In their dark Womb a thouſand Rivers lie,
That with continu'd Streams the double Sea ſupply.

BOLONIA, MODENA, PARMA, TURIN, &c.

AFTER a very tedious Journey over the Apennines, we at last came to the River that runs at the Foot of them, and was formerly call'd the little Rhine. Following the Course of this River we arrived in a short time at Bolonia.

——Parvique Bononia Rheni. Sil. Ital. Lib. 8.

Bolonia water'd by the petty Rhine.

We here quickly felt the Difference of the Northern from the Southern Side of the Mountains, as well in the Coldness of the Air, as in the Badness of the Wine. This Town is famous for the Richness of the Soil that lies about it, and the Magnificence of its Convents. It is likewise esteemed the Third in Italy for Pictures, as having been the School of the Lombard Painters. I saw in it three Rarities of different kinds, which pleased me more than any other Shows of the Place. The first was an authentic Silver Medal of the younger Brutus, in the Hands of an eminent Antiquary. One may see the Character of the e Perſon in the Features of the Face, which is xquiſitely well cut. On the Reverſe is the Cap f Liberty, with a Dagger on each Side of it, ſub-ribed Id. Mar. for the Ides of March, the famous ate of Cæſar's Murder. The Second was a Picture f Raphael's in St. Giouanni in Monte. It is ex-emely well preſerved, and repreſents St. Cecilia ith an Inſtrument of Muſic in her Hands. On e ſide of her are the Figures of St. Paul, and t. John; and on the other, Mary Magdalene, nd St. Auſtin. There is ſomething wonderfully Divine in the Airs of this Picture. I cannot forbear entioning, for my Third Curioſity, a new Stair-aſe that Strangers are generally carried to ſee, here the Eaſineſs of the Aſcent within ſo ſmall a Compaſs, the Diſpoſition of the Lights, and the nvenient Landing are admirably well contrived. The Wars of Italy, and the Seaſon of the Year, ade me paſs thro' the Dutchies of Modena, Parma, nd Savoy, with more haſte than I would have one at another time. The Soil of Modena and arma is very rich and well cultivated. The Pa-aces of the Princes are magnificent, but neither of hem is yet finiſhed. We procured a Licence of the Duke of Parma to enter the Theatre and Gallery, hich deſerve to be ſeen as well as any thing of that ature in Italy. The Theatre is, I think, the moſt acious of any I ever ſaw, and at the ſame time ſo dmirably well contrived, that from the very Depth f the Stage the loweſt ſound may be heard di-inctly to the fartheſt Part of the Audience, as in a Whiſpering-Place; and yet if you raiſe your Voice s high as you pleaſe, there is nothing like an Echo o cauſe in it the leaſt Confuſion. The Gallery is ung with a numerous Collection of Pictures, all one by celebrated Hands. On one Side of the Gallery is a large Room adorned with Inla Tables, Cabinets, Works in Amber, and ot Pieces of great Art and Value. Out of this were led into another great Room, furniſhed w old Inſcriptions, Idols, Buſts, Medals, and the l Antiquities. I could have ſpent a Day with gr Satisfaction in this Apartment, but had only ti to paſs my Eye over the Medals, which are great Number, and many of them very ra The ſcarceſt of all is a Peſcennius Niger on Medalion well preſerved. It was coined at tioch, where this Emperor trifled away his Ti 'till he loſt his Life and Empire. The Reve is a Dea Salus. There are two of Otho, the R verſe a Serapis; and two of Meſſalina and P pæa in middle Braſs, the Reverſes of the Emp ror Claudius. I ſaw two Medalions of Plotina a Matidia, the Reverſe to each a Pietas: with tw Medals of Pertinax, the Reverſe of one Vota D cennalia, and of the other Diis Cuſtodibus; an another of Gordianus Africanus, the Reverſe I ha forgot.

Gallery

The Principalities of Modena and Parma a much about the ſame Extent, and have each them two large Towns, beſides a great Number little Villages. The Duke of Parma however much richer than the Duke of Modena. The Subjects would live in great Plenty amidſt ſo ric and well cultivated a Soil, were not the Taxes an Impoſitions ſo very Exorbitant; for the Courts a much too ſplendid and magnificent for the Territo ries that lie about them, and one cannot but b amazed to ſee ſuch a Profuſion of Wealth laid ou in Coaches, Trappings, Tables, Cabinets, and th like precious Toys, in which there are few Prince of Europe who equal them, when at the ſame tim the

they have not had the Generoſity to make Bridges over the Rivers of their Countries, for the Convenience of their Subjects, as well as Strangers, who are forced to pay an unreaſonable Exaction at every Ferry upon the leaſt riſing of the Waters. A Man might well expect in theſe ſmall Governments, a much greater Regulation of Affairs, for the Eaſe and Benefit of the People, than in large over-grown States, where the Rules of Juſtice, Beneficence, and Mercy, may be eaſily put out of their Courſe, in paſſing thro' the Hands of Deputies, and a long Subordination of Officers. And it would certainly be for the Good of Mankind to have all the mighty Empires and Monarchies of the World cantoned out into petty States and Principalities, that, like ſo many large Families, might lie under the Eye and Obſervation of their proper Governors; ſo that the Care of the Prince might extend itſelf to every individual Perſon under his Protection. But ſince ſuch a general Scheme can never be brought about, and, if it were, it would quickly be deſtroyed by the Ambition of ſome particular State aſpiring above the reſt, it happens very ill at preſent to be born under one of theſe petty Sovereigns, that will ſtill be endeavouring, at his Subjects Coſt, to equal the Pomp and Grandeur of greater Princes, as well as to outvy thoſe of his own Rank.

For this Reaſon there are no People in the World, who live with more Eaſe and Proſperity, than the Subjects of little Commonwealths, as on the contrary there are none who ſuffer more under the Grievances of a hard Government, than the Subjects of little Principalities. I left the Road of Milan on my Right Hand, having before ſeen that City, and after having paſſed through Aſti, Aſti, the Frontier Town of Savoy, I at laſt came within Sight of the Po, which is a fine River even at Turin, though within ſix Miles of its Source. This River has been made the Scene of two or three Poetical Stories. Ovid has choſen it out to throw his Phaeton into it, after all the ſmaller Rivers had been dry'd up in the Conflagration.

I have read ſome Botanical Critics, who tell us the Poets have not rightly followed the Traditions of Antiquity, in Metamorphoſing the Siſters of Phaeton into Poplars, who ought to have been turned into Larch-trees; for that it is this kind of Tree which ſheds a Gum, and is commonly found on the Banks of the Po. The Change of Cycnus into a Swan, which cloſes up the Diſaſters of Phaeton's Family, was wrought on the ſame Place where the Siſters were turned into Trees. The Deſcriptions that Virgil and Ovid have made of it cannot be ſufficiently admired.

Claudian has ſet off his Deſcription of the Eridanus with all the Poetical Stories that have been made of it.

His Head above the Floods he gently rear'd,
And as he roſe his golden Horns appear'd,
That on the Forehead ſhone divinely bright,
And o'er the Banks diffus'd a yellow Light:
No interwoven Reeds a Garland made,
To hide his Brows within the vulgar Shade;
But Poplar Wreaths around his Temples ſpread,
And Tears of Amber trickled down his Head:
A ſpacious Veil from his broad Shoulders flew,
That ſet th' unhappy Phaeton to view:
The flaming Chariot and the Steeds it ſhow'd,
And the whole Fable in the Mantle glow'd:
Beneath his Arm and Urn ſupported lies,
With Stars embelliſh'd and fictitious Skies.
For Titan, by the mighty Loſs diſmay'd,
Among the Heav'ns th' Immortal Fact diſplay'd,
Leſt the Remembrance of his Grief ſhould fail,
And in the Conſtellations wrote his Tale.
A Swan in Memory of Cycnus ſhines;
The Mourning Siſters weep in watry Signs;
The burning Chariot, and the Charioteer,
In bright Bootes and his Wane appear;
Whilſt in a Track of Light the Waters run,
That waſh'd the Body of his blaſted Son.

The River Po gives a Name to the chief Street of Turin, which fronts the Duke's Palace, and, when finiſh'd will be one of the nobleſt in Italy for its Length. There is one Convenience in this City that I never obſerved in any other, and which makes ſome amends for the Badneſs of the Pavement. By the help of a River, that runs on the upper Side of the Town, they can convey a little Stream of Water through all the moſt conſiderable Streets, which ſerve to cleanſe the Gutters, and carries away all the Filth that is ſwept into it. The Manager opens his Sluice every Night, and diſtributes the Water into what Quarters of the Town he pleaſes. Beſides the ordinary Convenience that ariſes from it, it is of great uſe when a Fire chances to break out; for at a few Minutes warning they have a little River running by the very Walls of the Houſe that is burning. The Court of Turin is reckon'd the moſt ſplendid and polite of any in Italy; but by reaſon of its being in Mourning, I could not ſee it in its Magnificence. The common People of this State are more exaſperated againſt the French than even the reſt of the Italians. For the great Miſchiefs they have ſuffer'd from them are ſtill freſh upon their Memories, and, notwithſtanding this Interval of Peace, one may eaſily trace out the ſeveral Marches, which the French Armies have made through their Country, by the Ruin and Deſolation they have left behind them. I paſſed through Piedmont and Savoy, at a time when the Duke was forced, by the Neceſſity of his Affairs, to be in Alliance with the French.

I came directly from Turin to Geneva, and had a very eaſy Journey over Mount Cennis, though about the Beginning of December, the Snows having not yet fallen. On the Top of this high Mountain is a large Plain, and in the midſt of the Plain a beautiful

a beautiful Lake which would be very extraordinary, were there not ſeveral Mountains in the Neighbourhood riſing over it. The Inhabitants thereabout pretend that it is unfathomable, and I queſtion not but the Waters of it fill up a deep Valley, before they come to a level with the Surface of the Plain. It is well-ſtock'd with Trouts, though they ſay it is cover'd with Ice three quarters of a Year.

There is nothing in the natural Face of Italy that is more delightful to a Traveller, than the ſeveral Lakes which are diſperſed up and down among the many Breaks and Hollows of the Alps and Apennines. For as theſe vaſt Heaps of Mountains are thrown together with ſo much Irregularity and Confuſion, they form a great Variety of hollow Bottoms, that often lie in the Figure of ſo many artificial Baſons; where, if any Fountains chance to riſe, they naturally ſpread themſelves into Lakes, before they can find any Iſſue for their Waters. The ancient Romans took a great deal of pains to hew out a Paſſage for theſe Lakes to diſcharge themſelves into ſome neighbouring River, for the bettering of the Air, or the recovering of the Soil that lay underneath them. The draining of the Fucinus by the Emperor Claudius, with the prodigious Multitude of Spectators who attended it, and the famous Naumachia and ſplendid Entertainment, which were made upon it before the Sluices were open'd, is a known Piece of Hiſtory. In all our Journey thro' the Alps, as well when we climb'd as when we deſcended them, we had ſtill a River running along with the Road, that probably at firſt occaſion'd the Diſcovery of this Paſſage. I ſhall end this Chapter with a Deſcription of the Alps, as I did the laſt with thoſe of the Apennines. The Poet perhaps would not have taken notice, that there is no Spring nor Summer on theſe Mountains, but becauſe in this reſpect the Alps are quite different from the Apennines, which have as delightful green Spots among them as any in Italy.

Cuncta gelu canâque æternùm grandine tecta,
Atque ævi glaciem cohibent: riget ardua montis
Ætherei facies, ſurgentique obvia Phœbo
Duratas neſcit flammis mollire pruinas:
Quantùm Tartareus regni pallentis hiatus
Ad manes imos atque atræ ſtagna paludis
A ſuperâ tellure patet, tam longa per auras
Erigitur tellus, & cœlum intercipit Umbrâ.
Nullum ver uſquam, nullique Æſtatis honores;
Sola jugis habitat diris, ſedeſque tuetur
Perpetuas deformis Hyems: illa undique nubes
Huc atras agit, et mixtos cum grandine nimbos.
Nam cuncti flatus ventique furentia regna
Alpinâ poſuere domo, caligat in altis
Obtutus ſaxis, abeuntque in nubila montes.

Sil. Ital. Lib. 3.

Stiff with Eternal Ice, and hid in Snow
That fell a thouſand Centuries ago,
The Mountain ſtands; nor can the riſing Sun
Unfix her Froſts, and teach 'em how to run:
Deep as the dark Infernal Waters lie
From the bright Regions of the chearful Sky,
So far the proud aſcending Rocks invade
Heav'n's upper Realms, and caſt a dreadful Shade:
No Spring nor Summer on the Mountain ſeen
Smiles with gay Fruits, or with delightful Green;
But hoary Winter, unadorn'd and bare,
Dwells in the dire Retreat, and freezes there;

There

There ſhe aſſembles all her blackeſt Storms,
And the rude Hail in rattling Tempeſts forms;
Thither the loud tumultuous Winds reſort,
And on the Mountain keep their boiſt'rous Court,
That in thick Show'rs her rocky Summit ſhrowds,
And darkens all the broken View with Clouds.

GENEVA

LAKE.

NEAR St. Julian in Savoy the Alps begin to enlarge themſelves on all ſides, and open into a vaſt Circuit of Ground, which, in reſpect of the other Parts of the Alps, may paſs for a plain Champian Country. This Extent of Lands, with the Leman Lake, would make one of the pretticſt and moſt defenſible Dominions in Europe, was it all thrown into a ſingle State, and had Geneva for its Metropolis. But there are three powerful Neighbours, who divide among them the greateſt part of this fruitful Country. The Duke of Savoy has the Chablais, and all the Fields that lie beyond the Arve, as far as to the Ecluſe. The King of France is Maſter of the whole Country of Gex; and the Canton of Bern comes in for that of Vaud. Geneva and its little Territories lie in the Heart of theſe three States. The greateſt part of the Town ſtands upon a Hill, and has its View bounded on all Sides by ſeveral Ranges of Mountains, which are however at ſo great a Diſtance, that they leave open a wonderful Variety of beautiful Proſpects. The Situation of theſe Mountains has ſome particular Effects on the Country, which they incloſe. As firſt, they cover it from all Winds, except the South and North. 'Tis to the laſt of theſe Winds that the Inhabitants of Geneva aſcribe the Healthfulneſs of their Air; for as the Alps ſurround them on all ſides, they form a vaſt kind of Baſon, where there would be a conſtant Stagnation of Vapours, the Country being ſo well water'd, did not the North Wind put them in Motion, and ſcatter them from time to time. Another Effect the Alps have on Geneva is, that the Sun here riſes later and ſets ſooner than it does to other Places of the ſame Latitude. I have often obſerved that the Tops of the neighbouring Mountains have been covered with Light above half an Hour after Sun is down, in reſpect of thoſe who live at Geneva. Theſe Mountains likewiſe very much increaſe their Summer Heats, and make up an Horizon that has ſomething in it very ſingular and agreeable. On one ſide you have the long Tract of Hills, that goes under the Name of Mount Jura, covered with Vineyards and Paſturage, and on the other huge Precipices of naked Rocks riſing up in a thouſand odd Figures, and cleft in ſome Places, ſo as to diſcover high Mountains of Snow that lie ſeveral Leagues behind them. Towards the South the Hills riſe more inſenſibly, and leave the Eye a vaſt uninterrupted Proſpect for many Miles. But the moſt beautiful View of all is the Lake, and the Borders of it that lie North of the Town.

This Lake reſembles a Sea in the Colour of its Waters, the Storms that are raiſed on it, and the Ravage it makes on its Banks. It receives too a different Name from the Coaſts it waſhes, and in Summer has ſomething like an Ebb and Flow, which ariſes from the melting of the Snows that fall into it more copiouſly at Noon than at other times of the Day. It has five different States bordering on it, the Kingdom of France, the Dutchy of Savoy, the Canton of Bern, the Biſhoprick of Sion, and the Republic of Geneva. I have ſeen Papers fix'd up in the Canton of Bern, with this magnificent Preface; Whereas we have been informed of ſeveral Abuſes committed in our Ports and Harbours on the Lake, &c.

I made a little Voyage round the Lake, and touch'd on the ſeveral Towns that lie on its Coaſts, which took up near five Days, tho' the Wind was pretty fair for us all the while.

The Right Side of the Lake from Geneva belongs to the Duke of Savoy, and is extremely well cultivated. The greateſt Entertainment we found in coaſting it were the ſeveral Proſpects of Woods, Vineyards, Meadows, and Corn Fields which lie on the Borders of it, and run up all the Sides of the Alps, where the Barrenneſs of the Rocks, or the Steepneſs of the Aſcent will ſuffer them. The Wine however on this Side of the Lake is by no means ſo good as that on the other, as it has not ſo open a Soil, and is leſs expos'd to the Sun. We here paſs'd by Yvoire, where the Duke keeps his Gallies, and lodg'd at Tonon, which is the greateſt Town on the Lake belonging to the Savoyard. It has four Convents, and they ſay about ſix or ſeven thouſand Inhabitants. The Lake is here about twelve Miles in Breadth. At a little Diſtance from Tonon ſtands Ripaille, where is a Convent of Carthuſians. They have a large Foreſt cut out into Walks, that are extremely thick and gloomy, and very ſuitable to the Genius of the Inhabitants. There are Viſta's in it of a great Length, that terminate upon the Lake. At one Side of the Walks you have a near

Proſpect

Proſpect of the Alps, which are broken into ſo many Steeps and Precipices, that they fill the Mind with an agreeable kind of Horror, and form one of the moſt irregular miſ-ſhapen Scenes in the World. The Houſe, that is now in the Hands of the Carthuſians, belong'd formerly to the Hermits of St. Maurice, and is famous in Hiſtory for the Retreat of an Anti-Pope, who call'd himſelf Felix the Fifth. He had been Duke of Savoy, and after a very glorious Reign took on him the Habit of a Hermit, and retired into this Solitary Spot of his Dominions. His Enemies will have it, that he lived here in great Eaſe and Luxury; from whence the Italians to this Day make uſe of the Proverb, Andare a Ripaglia, and the French, Faire Ripaille, to expreſs a delightful kind of Life. They ſay too, that he had great Managements with ſeveral Eccleſiaſtics before he turned Hermit, and that he did it in the View of being advanced to the Pontificate. However it was, he had not been here half a Year, before he was choſen Pope by the Council of Baſil, who took upon them to Depoſe Eugenio the Fourth. This promiſed fair at firſt; but by the Death of the Emperor, who favoured Amadeo, and the Reſolution of Eugenio, the greateſt part of the Church threw itſelf again under the Government of their depoſed Head. Our Anti-Pope however was ſtill ſupported by the Council of Baſil, and owned by Savoy, Switzerland, and a few other little States. This Schiſm laſted in the Church nine Years, after which Felix voluntarily reſigned his Title into the Hands of Pope Nicholas the Fifth; but on the following Conditions, That Amadeo ſhould be the firſt Cardinal in the Conclave; That the Pope ſhould always receive him ſtanding, and offer him his Mouth to kiſs; That he ſhould be perpetual Cardinal-Legate in the States of Savoy and Switzerland, and in the Archbiſhopricks of Geneva, Sion, Breſs, &c. And laſtly, That all the Cardinals of his Creation ſhould be recognized by the Pope. After he had made a Peace ſo acceptable to the Church, and ſo honourable to himſelf, he ſpent the Remainder of his Life with great Devotion at Ripaille, and died with an extraordinary Reputation of Sanctity.

At Tonon they ſhewed us a Fountain of Water that is in great Eſteem for its Wholſomneſs. They ſay it weighs two Ounces in a Pound leſs than the ſame Meaſure of the Lake Water, notwithſtanding this laſt is very good to drink, and as clear as can be imagined. A little above Tonon is a Caſtle and ſmall Garriſon. The next Day we ſaw other ſmall Towns on the Coaſt of Savoy, where there is nothing but Miſery and Poverty. The nearer you come to the End of the Lake, the Mountains on each ſide grow thicker and higher, 'till at laſt they almoſt meet. One often ſees on the Tops of the Mountains ſeveral ſharp Rocks that ſtand above the reſt; for as theſe Mountains have been doubtleſs much higher than they are at preſent, the Rains have waſhed away abundance of the Soil, that has left the Veins of Stones ſhooting out of them; as in a decay'd Body the Fleſh is ſtill ſhrinking from the Bones. The natural Hiſtories of Switzerland talk very much of the fall of theſe Rocks, and the great damage they have ſometimes done, when their Foundations have been mouldred with Age, or rent by an Earthquake. We ſaw in ſeveral Parts of the Alps, that bordered upon us, vaſt Pits of Snow, as ſeveral Mountains that lie at a greater Diſtance are wholly covered with it. I fancied the Confuſion of Mountains and Hollows, I here obſerved, furniſhed me with a more probable Reaſon than any I have met met with for thoſe Periodical Fountains in Switzerland, which flow only at ſuch particular Hours of the Day. For as the Tops of theſe Mountains caſt their Shadows upon one another, they hinder the Sun's ſhining on ſeveral Parts at ſuch certain times, ſo that there are ſeveral Heaps of Snow which have the Sun lying upon them for two or three Hours together, and are in the Shade all the Day afterwards. If therefore it happens that any particular Fountain takes its Riſe from any of theſe Reſervoirs of Snow, it will naturally begin to flow on ſuch Hours of the Day as the Snow begins to melt: but as ſoon as the Sun leaves it again to freeze and harden the Fountain dries up, and receives no more Supplies 'till about the ſame time the next Day, when the Heat of the Sun again ſets the Snows running that fall into the ſame little Conduits, Traces, and Canals, and by conſequence break out and diſcover themſelves always in the ſame Place. At the very Extremity of the Lake the Rhone enters, and, when I ſaw it, brought along with it a prodigious Quantity of Water, the Rivers and Lakes of this Country being much higher in Summer than in Winter, by reaſon of the melting of the Snows. One would wonder how ſo many Learned Men could fall into ſo great an Abſurdity, as to believe this River could preſerve itſelf unmix'd with the Lake, till its going out again at Geneva, which is a Courſe of many Miles. It was extremely muddy at its entrance, when I ſaw it, though as clear as Rock Water at its going out. Beſides, that it brought in much more Water than it carried off. The River indeed preſerves itſelf for about a Quarter of a Mile in the Lake, but is afterwards ſo wholly mix'd and loſt with the Waters of the Lake, that one diſcovers nothing like a Stream 'till within about a Quarter of a Mile of Geneva.

Geneva. From the End of the Lake to the Source of the Rhone is a Valley of about four Days Journey in Length, which gives the Name of Valleſins to its Inhabitants, and is the Dominion of the Biſhop of Sion. We lodg'd the ſecond Night at Villa Neuve, a little Town in the Canton of Bern, where we found good Accommodations, and a much greater Appearance of Plenty than on the other ſide of the Lake. The next Day, having paſſed by the Caſtle of Chillon, we came to Verſoy, another Town in the Canton of Bern, where Ludlow retired after having left Geneva and Lauſanne. The Magiſtrates of the Town warned him out of the firſt by the Solicitation of the Dutcheſs of Orleans, as the Death of his Friend Liſle made him quit the other. He probably choſe this Retreat as a Place of the greateſt Safety, it being an eaſy Matter to know what Strangers are in the Town, by reaſon of its Situation. The Houſe he lived in has this Inſcription over the Door; quia Patris.

Omne ſolum forti patria

The firſt Part is a Piece of Verſe in Ovid, as the laſt is a Cant of his own. He is buried in the beſt of the Churches with the following Epitaph.

Siſte gradum et reſpice.

Hic jacet Edmond Ludlow, Anglus Natione, Provinciæ Wiltonienſis, filius Henrici Equeſtris Ordinis, Senatoriſque Parliamenti, cujus quoque fuit ipſe membrum, Patrum ſtemmate clarus et nobilis, virtute propriâ nobilior, Religione proteſtans et inſigni pietate coruſcus, Ætatis Anno 23 Tribunus Militum, paulo poſt poſt exercitûs prætor primarius. Tunc Hibernorum domitor, in pugnâ intrepidus et vitæ prodigus, in victoriâ clemens et manſuetus, patriæ Libertatis Defenſor, et poteſtatis Arbitrariæ propugnator acerrimus; cujus cauſâ ab eâdem patriâ 32 annis extorris, meliorique fortunâ Dignus apud Helvetios ſe recepit, ibique ætatis Anno 73 Moriens ſui deſiderium relinquens ſedes æternas lætus advolavit.

Hocce Monumentum, in perpetuam veræ et ſinceræ pietatis erga Maritum defunctum memoriam, dicat et vovet Domina Elizabeth de Thomas, ejus ſtrenua et mæſtiſſima, tam in infortuniis quam in matrimonio conſors dilectiſſima, quæ animi magnitudine et vi amoris conjugalis mota eum in exilium ad obitum uſque conſtanter ſecuta eſt. Anno Dom. 1693.

Here lies Edmund Ludlow, by Birth an Engliſhman, of the County of Wilts; Son of Sir Henry Ludlow Knight; a Member of Parliament, as his Father had likewiſe been; more diſtiguiſh'd by his Virtue than his Family, tho' an ancient and good one; by Religion a Proteſtant, and remarkable for his eminent Piety: In the 23d Year of his Age he had the Command of a Regiment, and, ſoon after, the Poſt of Lieutenant-General: In which Quality he ſubdued the Iriſh, being intrepid in Fight, and expoſing himſelf to the greateſt Dangers; but in Victory merciful and humane: A Defender of the Liberty of his Country, and a ſtrenuous Oppoſer of Arbitrary Power: upon which Account being baniſhed 32 Years from his native Country, and worthy of a better Fortune, he retired into Switzerland, where he died, univerſally regretted, in the 73d Year of his Age.

This Monument was erected, in perpetual Memory of her true and ſincere Affection towards her deceas'd deceas'd Husband, by Dame Elizabeth Thomas, his beloved Wife, and afflicted, but conſtant, Partner, as well in Misfortunes, as in Wedlock; who, excited by her own Greatneſs of Mind, and the Force of conjugal Love, follow'd him into Baniſhment, and conſtantly bore him company to his Death, A. D. 1693.

Ludlow was a conſtant frequenter of Sermons and Prayers, but would never communicate with them either of Geneva or Vevy. Juſt by his Monument is a Tombſtone with the following Inſcription.

Depoſitorium

Andreæ Broughton Armigeri Anglicani Maydſtonenſis in Comitatu Cantii ubi bis prætor Urbanus. Dignatuſque etiam fuit ſententiam Regis Regum profari. Quam ob cauſam expulſus patriâ ſuâ, peregrinatione ejus finitâ, ſolo ſenectutis morbo affectus requieſcens à laboribus ſuis in Domino obdormivit, 23 die Feb. Anno D. 1687. ætatis ſuæ 84. The Remains of Andrew Broughton, Eſq; an Engliſhman, of Maidſtone in the County of Kent, of which Place he was twice Mayor. He had the Honour likewiſe to pronounce the Sentence of the King of Kings. Upon which Account being baniſhed from his Country, after his Travels were at an end, affected with no other Diſeaſe than that of old Age, he reſted from his Labours, and fell aſleep in the Lord, the 23d of February, A. D. 1687, in the 84th Year of his Age. The Inhabitants of the Place could give no Account of this Broughton; but, I ſuppoſe, by his Epitaph, it is the ſame Perſon that was Clerk to the pretended High Court of Juſtice, which paſſed Sentence on the Royal Martyr.

The

The next Day we ſpent at Lauſanne, the greateſt Town on the Lake, after Geneva. We ſaw the Wall of the Cathedral Church that was opened by an Earthquake, and ſhut up again ſome Years after by a Second. The Crack can but be juſt diſcerned at preſent, though there are ſeveral in the Town ſtill living who have formerly paſſed through it. The Duke of Schomberg, who was killed in Savoy, lies in this Church, but without any Monument or Inſcription over him. Lauſanne was once a Republic, but is now under the Canton of Bern, and governed, like the reſt of their Dominions, by a Bailiff, who is ſent them every three Years from the Senate of Bern. There is one Street of this Town that has the Privilege of acquitting or condemning any Perſon of their own Body, in Matters of Life and Death. Every Inhabitant of it has his Vote, which makes a Houſe here ſell better than in any other Part of the Town. They tell you that not many Years ago it happen'd, that a Cobler had the Caſting Vote for the Life of the Criminal, which he very graciouſly gave on the merciful Side. From Lauſanne to Geneva we coaſted along the Country of the Vaud, which is the fruitfulleſt and beſt cultivated Part of any among the Alps. It belonged formerly to the Duke of Savoy, but was won from him by the Canton of Bern, and made over to it by the Treaty of St. Julian, which is ſtill very much regretted by the Savoyard. We call'd in at Morge, where there is an artificial Port, and a Show of more Trade than in any other Town on the Lake. From Morge we came to Nyon. The Colonia Equeſtris, that Julius Cæſar ſettled in this Country, is generally ſuppoſed to have been planted in this Place. They have often dug up old Roman Inſcriptions and Statues, and as I walk'd in the Town I obſerved in the Walls of ſeveral ſeveral Houſes the Fragments of vaſt Corinthian Pillars, with ſeveral other Pieces of Architecture, which muſt have formerly belonged to ſome very noble Pile of Building. There is no Author that mentions this Colony, yet it is certain by ſeveral old Roman Inſcriptions that there was ſuch an one. Lucan indeed ſpeaks of a Part of Cæſar's Army, that came to him from the Leman Lake in the beginning of the Civil War.

Deſeruere cavo tentoria fixa Lemanno.
Lib. 1. v. 396.

At about five Miles diſtance from Nyon they ſhow ſtill the Ruins of Cæſar's Wall, that reached eighteen Miles in Length from Mount Jura to the Borders of the Lake, as he has deſcribed it in the firſt Book of his Commentaries. The next Town upon the Lake is Verſoy, whch we could not have an Opportunity of ſeeing, as belonging to the King of France. It has the Reputation of being extremely poor and beggarly. We ſailed from hence directly for Geneva, which makes a very noble Show from the Lake. There are near Geneva ſeveral Quarries of Freeſtone that run under the Lake. When the Water is at loweſt they make within the Borders of it a little Square incloſed with four Walls. In this Square they ſink a Pit, and dig for Freeſtone; the Walls hindering the Waters from coming in upon them, when the Lake riſes and runs on all Sides of them. The great Convenience of Carriage makes theſe Stones much cheaper than any that can be found upon firm Land. One ſees ſeveral deep Pits that have been made at ſeveral times as one ſails over over them. As the Lake approaches Geneva it grows ſtill narrower and narrower, 'till at laſt it changes its Name into the Rhone, that turns all the Mills of the Town, and is extremely rapid, notwithſtanding its Waters are very deep. As I have ſeen great Part of the Courſe of this River, I cannot but think it has been guided by the particular Hand of Providence. It riſes in the very Heart of the Alps, and has a long Valley that ſeems hewn out on purpoſe to give its Waters a Paſſage amidſt ſo many Rocks and Mountains which are on all Sides of it. This brings it almoſt in a direct Line to Geneva. It would there overflow all the Country, were there not one particular Cleft that divides a vaſt Circuit of Mountains, and conveys it off to Lyons. From Lyons there is another great Rent, which runs acroſs the whole Country in almoſt another ſtraight Line, and notwithſtanding the vaſt Height of the Mountains that riſe about it, gives it the ſhorteſt Courſe it can take to fall into the Sea. Had ſuch a River as this been left to itſelf to have found its way out from among the Alps, whatever Windings it had made it muſt have formed ſeveral little Seas, and have laid many Countries under Water before it had come to the End of its Courſe. I ſhall not make any Remarks upon Geneva, that is a Republic ſo well known to the Engliſh. It lies at preſent under ſome Difficulties by reaſon of the Emperor's Diſpleaſure, who has forbidden the Importation of their Manufactures into any Part of the Empire, which will certainly raiſe a Sedition among the People, unleſs the Magiſtrates find ſome way to remedy it: and they ſay it is already done by the Interpoſition of the States of Holland. The Occaſion of the Emperor's Prohibition was their furniſhing great Sums to the King of France for the Payment of his Army

Army in Italy. They obliged themſelves to remit, after the rate of twelve hundred thouſand Pounds Sterling per Annum, divided into ſo many Monthly Payments. As the Intereſt was very great, ſeveral of the Merchants of Lyons, who would not truſt their King in their own Names, are ſaid to have contributed a great deal under the Names of Geneva Merchants. The Republic fancies itſelf hardly treated by the Emperor, ſince it is not any Action of the State, but a Compact among private Perſons that have furniſhed out theſe ſeveral Remittances. They pretend however to have put a ſtop to them, and by that means are in hopes again to open their Commerce into the Empire.

Fribourg, Bern, Soleurre, Zurich, St. Gaul, Lindaw, &c.

FROM Geneva I travelled to Lauſanne, and thence to Fribourg, which is but a mean Town for the Capital of ſo large a Canton: Its Situation is ſo irregular, that they are forced to climb up to ſeveral Parts of it by Stair-caſes of a prodigious Aſcent. This Inconvenience however gives them a very great Commodity in caſe a Fire breaks out in any Part of the Town; for by reaſon of ſeveral Reſervoirs on the tops of theſe Mountains, by the opening of a Sluice they convey a River into what Part of the Town they pleaſe. They have four Churches, four Convents of Women, and as many for Men. The little Chapel called the Salutation, is very neat, and built with a pretty Fancy. The College of Jeſuits is, they ſay, the fineſt in Switzerland. There is a great deal of Room in it, and ſeveral beautiful Views from the different Parts of it. They have a Collection of Pictures repreſenting moſt of the Fathers of their Order, who have been eminent for their Piety or Learning. Among the reſt, many Engliſh Men, whom we name Rebels, and they Martyrs. Henry Garnet's Inſcription ſays, That, when the Heretics could not prevail with him, either by Force or Promiſes, to change his Religion, they hanged and quartered him. At the Capuchins I ſaw the Eſcargatoire, which I took the more notice of, becauſe I do not remember to have met with any thing of the ſame nature in other Countries. It is a ſquare Place boarded in, and filled with a vaſt quantity of large Snails, that are eſteemed excellent Food when they are well dreſſed. The Floor is ſtrowed about half a Foot deep with ſeveral kinds of Plants, among which the Snails neſtle all the Winter Seaſon. When Lent arrives, they open their Magazines, and take out of them the beſt meagre Food in the World; for there is no Diſh of Fiſh that they reckon comparable to a Ragoût of Snails.

Engliſh

About two Leagues from Fribourg we went to ſee a Hermitage, that is reckon'd the greateſt Curioſity of theſe Parts. It lies in the prettieſt Solitude imaginable, among Woods and Rocks, which at firſt ſight diſpoſe a Man to be ſerious. There has lived in it a Hermit theſe five and twenty Years, who with his own Hands has worked in the Rock a pretty Chapel, a Sacriſty, a Chamber, Kitchin, Cellar, and other Conveniencies. His Chimney is carry'd up through the whole Rock, ſo that you ſee the Sky through it, notwithſtanding the Rooms lie very deep. He has cut the Side of the Rock into a Flat for a Garden, and by laying on it the waſte Earth that he has found in ſeveral of the neighbouring Parts, has made ſuch a Spot of Ground of it as furniſhes out a kind of Luxury for an Hermit. As he ſaw drops of Water diſtilling from ſeveral Parts of the Rock, by following the Veins of them, he has made himſelf two or three Fountains in the Bowels Bowels of the Mountain, that ſerve his Table, and water his little Garden.

We had very bad Ways from hence to Bern, a great Part of them through Woods of Fir-trees. The great Quantity of Timber they have in this Country makes them mend their Highways with Wood inſtead of Stone. I could not but take notice of the Make of ſeveral of their Barns I here ſaw. After having laid a Frame of Wood for the Foundation, they place at the four Corners of it four huge Blocks, cut in ſuch a Shape as neither Mice nor any other ſort of Vermin can creep up the Sides of them, at the ſame time that they raiſe the Corn above the Moiſture that might come into it from the Ground. The whole Weight of the Barn is ſupported by theſe four Blocks.

What pleaſed me moſt at Bern was their public Walks by the great Church. They are raiſed extremely high, and, that their Weight might not break down their Walls and Pilaſters which ſurround them, they are built upon Arches and Vaults. Tho' they are, I believe, as high as moſt Steeples in England from the Streets and Gardens that lie at the Foot of them, yet, about forty Years ago, a Perſon in his Drink fell down from the very top to the bottom, without doing himſelf any other hurt than the breaking of an Arm. He dy'd about four Years ago. There is the nobleſt Summer-Proſpect in the World from this Walk; for you have a full View of a huge Range of Mountains that lie in the Country of the Griſons, and are bury'd in Snow. They are about twenty five Leagues diſtance from the Town, though by reaſon of their Height and their Colour they ſeem much nearer. The Cathedral Church ſtands on one ſide of theſe Walks, and is perhaps the moſt magnificent of any Proteſtant Church

Church in Europe, out of England. It is a very bold Work, and a Maſter-piece in Gothic Architecture.

I ſaw the Arſenal of Bern, where they ſay there are Arms for twenty thouſand Men. There is indeed no great Pleaſure in viſiting theſe Magazines of War after one has ſeen two or three of them; yet it is very well worth a Traveller's while to look into all that lie in his Way; for beſides the Idea it gives him of the Forces of a State, it ſerves to fix in his Mind the moſt conſiderable Parts of its Hiſtory. Thus in that of Geneva one meets with the Ladders, Petard, and other Utenſils which were made uſe of in their famous Eſcalade, beſides the Weapons they took of the Savoyards, Florentines, and French in the ſeveral Battles mentioned in their Hiſtory. In this of Bern you have the Figure and Armour of the Count who founded the Town, of the famous Tell, who is repreſented as ſhooting at the Apple on his Son's Head. The Story is too well known to be repeated in this Place. I here likewiſe ſaw the Figure and Armour of him that headed the Peaſants in the War upon Bern, with the ſeveral Weapons which were found in the Hands of his Followers. They ſhow too abundance of Arms that they took from the Burgundians in the three great Battles which eſtabliſh'd them in their Liberty, and deſtroy'd the Great Duke of Burgundy himſelf, with the braveſt of his Subjects. I ſaw nothing remarkable in the Chambers where the Council meet, nor in the Fortifications of the Town. Theſe laſt were made on occaſion of the Peaſants Inſurrection, to defend the Place for the future againſt the like ſudden Aſſaults. In their Library I obſerved a couple of antique Figures in Metal, of a Prieſt pouring Wine between the Horns of a Bull. The Prieſt Prieſt is veil'd after the manner of the old Roman Sacrificers, and is repreſented in the ſame Action that Virgil deſcribes in the fourth Æneid.

Ipſa tenens dextrâ pateram pulcherrima Dido,
Candentis vaccæ media inter cornua fundit. v. 60.

The beauteous Queen before her Altar ſtands,
And holds the golden Goblet in her hands:
A milk-white Heifer ſhe with Flow'rs adorns,
And pours the ruddy Wine betwixt her Horns.
Dryden.

This Antiquity was found at Lauſanne.

The Town of Bern is plentifully furniſh'd with Water, there being a great multitude of handſom Fountains planted at ſet Diſtances from one end of the Streets to the other. There is indeed no Country in the World better ſupply'd with Water, than the ſeveral Parts of Switzerland that I travell'd through. One meets every where in the Roads with Fountains continually running into huge Troughs that ſtand underneath them, which is wonderfully commodious in a Country that ſo much abounds with Horſes and Cattle. It has ſo many Springs breaking out of the Sides of the Hills, and ſuch vaſt Quantities of Wood to make Pipes of, that it is no Wonder they are ſo well ſtock'd with Fountains.

On the Road between Bern and Soleurre there is a Monument erected by the Republic of Bern, which tells us the Story of an Engliſhman, who is not to be met with in any of our own Writers. The Inſcription is in Latin Verſe on one ſide of the Stone, and in German on the other. I had not time to copy it; but the Subſtance of it is this: "One "Cuſſinus, an Engliſhman, to whom the Duke of "Auſtria had given his Siſter in Marriage, came "to take her from among the Swiſs by Force of "Arms; but, after having ravaged the Country for "ſome time, he was here overthrown by the Can-"ton of Bern."

Soleurre is our next conſiderable Town that ſeemed to me to have a greater Air of Politeneſs than any I ſaw in Switzerland. The French Ambaſſador has his Reſidence in this Place. His Maſter contributed a great Sum of Money to the Jeſuits Church, which is not yet quite finiſhed. It is the fineſt modern Building in Switzerland. The old Cathedral Church ſtood not far from it. At the Aſcent that leads to it are a couple of antique Pillars, which belonged to an old heathen Temple, dedicated to Hermes: They ſeem Tuſcan by their Proportion. The whole Fortification of Soleurre is faced with Marble. But its beſt Fortifications are the high Mountains that lie within its Neighbourhood, and ſeparate it from the Franche Comtè.

The next Day's Journey carry'd us through other Parts of the Canton of Bern, to the little Town of Meldingen. I was ſurpriſed to find, in all my Road through Switzerland, the Wine that grows in the County of Vand on the Border of the Lake of Geneva, which is very cheap, notwithſtanding the great diſtance between the Vineyards and the Towns that ſell the Wine. But the Navigable Rivers of Switzerland are as commodious to them in this reſpect, as the Sea is to the Engliſh. As ſoon as the Vintage is over, they ſhip off their Wine upon the Lake, which furniſhes all the Towns that lie upon its Borders. What they deſign for other Parts of the Country

Country they unload at Vevy, and after about half a Day's Land-Carriage convey it into the River Aar, which brings it down the Stream to Bern, Soleurre, and, in a word, diſtributes it through all the richeſt Parts of Switzerland; as it is eaſy to gueſs from the firſt ſight of the Map, which ſhows us the natural Communication Providence has formed between the many Rivers and Lakes of a Country that is at ſo great a diſtance from the Sea. The Canton of Bern is reckoned as powerful as all the reſt together. They can ſend a hundred thouſand Men into the Field; tho' the Soldiers of the Catholic Cantons, who are much poorer, and therefore forced to enter oftner into Foreign Armies, are more eſteemed than the Proteſtants.

We lay one Night at Meldengen, which is a little Roman Catholic Town with one Church, and no Convent. It is a Republic of itſelf, under the Protection of the eight ancient Cantons. There are in it a hundred Burgeois, and about a thouſand Souls. Their Government is modelled after the ſame manner with that of the Cantons, as much as ſo ſmall a Community can imitate thoſe of ſo large an Extent. For this Reaſon, though they have very little Buſineſs to do, they have all the variety of Councils and Officers that are to be met with in the greater States. They have a Town houſe to meet in, adorn'd with the Arms of the eight Cantons their Protectors. They have three Councils, the Great Council of Fourteen, the Little Council of Ten, and the Privy Council of Three. The chief of the State are the two Avoyers: When I was there, the reigning Avoyer, or Doge of the Commonwealth, was Son to the Inn where I was lodged; his Father having enjoy'd the ſame Honours before him. His Revenue amounts to about thirty Pound a Year. The ſeveral Councils meet every Thurſday upon Affairs of State, ſuch as the Reparation of a Trough, the mending of a Pavement, or any the like Matters of Importance. The River that runs through their Dominions puts them to the Charge of a very large Bridge, that is all made of Wood, and coped over Head, like the reſt in Switzerland. Thoſe that travel over it pay a certain Due towards the Maintenance of this Bridge. And as the French Ambaſſador has often Occaſion to paſs this Way, his Maſter gives the Town a Penſion of twenty Pound Sterling, which makes them extremely induſtrious to raiſe all the Men they can for his Service, and keeps this powerful Republic firm to the French Intereſt. You may be ſure the preſerving of the Bridge, with the Regulation of the Dues ariſing from it, is the grand Affair that cuts out Employment for the ſeveral Councils of State. They have a ſmall Village belonging to them, whither they punctually ſend a Bailif for the Diſtribution of Juſtice; in Imitation ſtill of the Great Cantons. There are three other Towns that have the ſame Privileges and Protectors.

We dined the next Day at Zurich, that is prettily ſituated on the Out-let of the Lake, and is reckoned the handſomeſt Town in Switzerland. The chief Places ſhown to Strangers are the Arſenal, the Library, and the Town-houſe. This laſt is but lately finiſhed, and is a very fine Pile of Building. The Frontiſpiece has Pillars of a beautiful black Marble ſtreaked with white, which is found in the neighbouring Mountains. The Chambers for the ſeveral Councils, with the other Apartments, are very neat. The whole Building is indeed ſo well deſign'd, that it would make a good Figure even in Italy. It is pity they have ſpoil'd the Beauty of the Walls

Walls with abundance of childiſh Latin Sentences, that conſiſt often in a Jingle of Words. I have indeed obſerved in ſeveral Inſcriptions of this Country, that your Men of Learning here are extremely delighted in playing little Tricks with Words and Figures; for your Swiſs Wits are not yet got out of the Anagram and Acroſtic. The Library is a very large Room, pretty well filled. Over it is another Room furniſh'd with ſeveral artificial and natural Curioſities. I ſaw in it a huge Map of the whole Country of Zurich drawn with a Pencil, where they ſee every particular Fountain and Hillock in their Dominions. I ran over their Cabinet of Medals, but don't remember to have met with any in it that are extraordinary rare. The Arſenal is better than that of Bern, and they ſay has Arms for thirty thouſand Men. At about a Day's Journey from Zurich we entered on the Territories of the Abbot of St. Gaul. They are four Hours riding in Breadth, and twelve in Length. The Abbot can raiſe in it an Army of twelve thouſand Men well armed and exerciſed. He is Sovereign of the whole Country, and under the Protection of the Cantons of Zurich, Lucerne, Glaris and Switz. He is always choſen out of the Abby of Benedictines at St. Gaul. Every Father and Brother of the Convent has a Voice in the Election, which muſt afterwards be confirmed by the Pope. The laſt Abbot was Cardinal Sfondrati, who was advanced to the Purple about two Years before his Death. The Abbot takes the Advice and Conſent of his Chapter before he enters on any Matter of Importance, as the levying of a Tax, or declaring of a War. His chief Lay-Officer is the Grand Maître d' Hôtel, or High Steward of the Houſhold, who is named by the Abbot, and has the Management of all Affairs under him. There are ſeveral other Judges and Diſtributers of Juſtice appointed for the ſeveral Parts of his Dominions, from whom there always lies an Appeal to the Prince. His Reſidence is generally at the Benedictine Convent at St. Gaul, notwithſtanding the Town of St. Gaul is a little Proteſtant Republic, wholly independent of the Abbot, and under the Protection of the Cantons.

One would wonder to ſee ſo many rich Burgeois in the Town of St. Gaul, and ſo very few poor People in a Place that has ſcarce any Lands belonging to it, and little or no Income but what ariſes from its Trade. But the great Support and Riches of this little State is in its Linen Manufacture, which employs almoſt all Ages and Conditions of its Inhabitants. The whole Country about them furniſhes them with vaſt Quantities of Flax, out of which they are ſaid to make yearly forty thouſand Pieces of Linen Cloth, reckoning two hundred Ells to the Piece. Some of their Manufacture is as finely wrought as any that can be met with in Holland; for they have excellent Artiſans, and great Commodities for whitening. All the Fields about the Town were covered with their Manufacture, that coming in the Duſk of the Evening we miſtook them for a Lake. They ſend of their Works upon Mules into Italy, Spain, Germany, and all the adjacent Countries. They reckon in the Town of St. Gaul, and in the Houſes that lie ſcattered about it, near ten thouſand Souls, of which there are ſixteen hundred Burgeois. They chooſe their Councils and Burgomaſters out of the Body of the Burgeois, as in the other Governments of Switzerland, which are every where of the ſame Nature, the difference lying only in the Numbers of ſuch as are employed in State-Affairs, which are proportioned to the Grandeur of the States that employ them. The Abbey and the Town

Town bear a great Averſion to one another; but in the general Diet of the Cantons their Repreſentatives ſit together, and act by Concert. The Abbot deputes his Grand Maître d'Hôtel, and the Town one of its Burgo-Maſters.

About four Years ago, the Town and Abbey would have come to an open Rupture, had it not been timely prevented by the Interpoſition of their common Protectors. The Occaſion was this. A Benedictine Monk, in one of their annual Proceſſions, carried his Croſs erected thro' the Town, with a Train of three or four thouſand Peaſants following him. They had no ſooner entered the Convent, but the whole Town was in a Tumult, occaſion'd by the Inſolence of the Prieſt, who, contrary to all Precedents, had preſumed to carry his Croſs in that manner. The Burgeois immediately put themſelves in Arms, and drew down four Pieces of their Cannon to the Gates of the Convent. The Proceſſion, to eſcape the Fury of the Citizens, durſt not return by the Way it came, but, after the Devotions of the Monks were finiſh'd, paſs'd out of a Back-door of the Convent, that immediately led into the Abbot's Territories. The Abbot on his Part raiſes an Army, blocks up the Town on the Side that faces his Dominions, and forbids his Subjects to furniſh it with any of their Commodities. While Things were juſt ripe for a War, the Cantons, their Protectors, interpos'd as Umpires in the Quarrel, condemning the Town that had appear'd too forward in the Diſpute to a Fine of two thouſand Crowns; and enacting at the ſame time, That as ſoon as any Proceſſion enter'd their Walls, the Prieſt ſhould let the Croſs hang about his Neck without touching it with either Hand, 'till he came within the Precincts of the Abbey. The Citizens could bring into the Field near two thouſand Men well exercis'd, and arm'd to the beſt Advantage, with which they fancy they could make Head againſt twelve or fifteen thouſand Peaſants; for ſo many the Abbot could eaſily raiſe in his Territories. But the Proteſtant Subjects of the Abbey, who they ſay make up a good Third of its People, would probably, in caſe of a War, abandon the Cauſe of their Prince for that of their Religion. The Town of St. Gaul has an Arſenal, Library, Town-houſes, and Churches proportionable to the Bigneſs of the State. It is well enough fortify'd to reſiſt any ſudden Attack, and to give the Cantons time to come to their Aſſiſtance. The Abbey is by no means ſo Magnificent as one would expect from its Endowments. The Church has one huge Nef with a double Aiſle to it. At each End is a large Quire. The one of them is ſupported by vaſt Pillars of Stone, cas'd over with a Compoſition that looks the moſt like Marble of any thing one can imagine. On the Cieling and Walls of the Church are Liſts of Saints, Martyrs, Popes, Cardinals, Archbiſhops, Kings, and Queens, that have been of the Benedictine Order. There are ſeveral Pictures of ſuch as have been diſtinguiſh'd by their Birth, Sanctity, or Miracles, with Inſcriptions that let you into the Name and Hiſtory of the Perſons repreſented. I have often wiſh'd that ſome Traveller would take the Pains to gather together all the modern Inſcriptions which are to be met with in Roman Catholic Countries, as Gruter and others have copied out the ancient Heathen Monuments. Had we two or three Volumes of this Nature, without any of the Collector's own Reflexions, I am ſure there is nothing in the World could give a truer Idea of the Roman Catholic Religion, nor expoſe more the Pride, Vanity, and Self-Intereſt of Convents, the Abuſe of Indulgencies, the Folly

Folly and Impertinence of Votaries, and in ſhort the Superſtition, Credulity, and Childiſhneſs of the Roman Catholic Religion. One might fill ſeveral Sheets at St. Gaul, as there are few conſiderable Convents or Churches that would not afford large Contributions.

As the King of France diſtributes his Penſions through all the Parts of Switzerland, the Town and Abbey of St. Gaul come in too for their Share. To the firſt he gives five hundred Crowns per Annum, and to the other a thouſand. This Penſion has not been paid theſe three Years, which they attribute to their not acknowledging the Duke of Anjou for King of Spain. The Town and Abbey of St. Gaul carry a Bear in their Arms. The Roman Catholics have this Bear's Memory in very great Veneration, and repreſent him as the firſt Convert their Saint made in the Country. One of the moſt Learned of the Benedictine Monks gave me the following Hiſtory of him, which he deliver'd to me with Tears of Affection in his Eyes. St. Gaul, it ſeems, whom they call the great Apoſtle of Germany, found all this Country little better than a vaſt Deſert. As he was walking in it on a very cold Day, he chanc'd to meet a Bear in his Way. The Saint, inſtead of being ſtartled at the Rencounter, order'd the Bear to bring him a Bundle of Wood, and make him a Fire. The Bear ſerv'd him to the beſt of his Ability, and at his Departure was commanded by the Saint to retire into the very Depth of the Woods, and there to paſs the reſt of his Life without ever hurting Man or Beaſt. From this time, ſays the Monk, the Bear liv'd irreproachably, and obſerv'd to his dying Day the Orders that the Saint had given him.

I have often conſider'd, with a great deal of Pleaſure, the profound Peace and Tranquillity that reigns in Switzerland and its Alliances. It is very wonderful to ſee ſuch a Knot of Governments, which are ſo divided among themſelves in Matters of Religion, maintain ſo uninterrupted an Union and Correſpondence, that no one of them is for invading the Rights of another, but remains content within the Bounds of its firſt Eſtabliſhment. This, I think, muſt be chiefly aſcribed to the Nature of the People, and the Conſtitution of their Governments. Were the Swiſs animated by Zeal or Ambition, ſome or other of their States would immediately break in upon the reſt; or were the States ſo many Principalities, they might often have an ambitious Sovereign at the Head of them, that would embroil his Neighbours, and ſacrifice the Repoſe of his Subjects to his own Glory. But as the Inhabitants of theſe Countries are naturally of a heavy phlegmatic Temper, if any of their leading Members have more Fire and Spirit than comes to their Share, it is quickly temper'd by the Coldneſs and Moderation of the reſt who ſit at the Helm with them. To this we may add, that the Alps is the worſt Spot of Ground in the World to make Conqueſts in, a great Part of its Governments being ſo naturally intrenched among Woods and Mountains. However it be, we find no ſuch Diſorders among them as one would expect in ſuch a Multitude of States; for as ſoon as any public Rupture happens, it is immediately clos'd up by the Moderation and good Offices of the reſt that interpoſe.

As all the conſiderable Governments among the Alps are Commonwealths, ſo indeed it is a Conſtitution the moſt adapted of any other to the Poverty and Barrenneſs of theſe Countries. We may ſee only in a neighbouring Government the ill Conſequence of having a deſpotic Prince, in a State that is moſt of it compoſed of Rocks and Mountains; for notwithſtanding there is a vaſt Extent of Lands, and many of them better than thoſe of the Swiſs and Griſons, the common People among the latter are much more at their Eaſe, and in a greater Affluence of all the Conveniencies of Life. A Prince's Court eats too much into the Income of a poor State, and generally introduces a kind of Luxury and Magnificence, that ſets every particular Perſon upon making a higher Figure in his Station than is generally conſiſtent with his Revenue.

It is the great Endeavour of the ſeveral Cantons of Switzerland, to baniſh from among them every thing that looks like Pomp or Superfluity. To this End the Miniſters are always Preaching, and the Governors putting out Edicts, againſt Dancing, Gaming, Entertainments, and fine Clothes. This is become more neceſſary in ſome of the Governments, ſince there are ſo many Refugees ſettled among them; for tho' the Proteſtants in France affect ordinarily a greater Plainneſs and Simplicity of Manners, than thoſe of the ſame Quality who are of the Roman Catholic Communion, they have however too much of their Country-Galantry for the Genius and Conſtitution of Switzerland. Should Dreſſing, Feaſting, and Balls once get among the Cantons, their Military Roughneſs would be quickly loſt, their Tempers would grow too ſoft for their Climate, and their Expences out-run their Incomes; beſides that the Materials for their Luxury muſt be brought from other Nations, which would immediately ruin a Country that has few Commodities of its own to export, and is not over-ſtock'd with Money. Luxury indeed wounds a Republic in its very Vitals, as its natural Conſequences are Rapine, Avarice, and Injuſtice; for the more Money a Man ſpends, the more muſt he endeavour to augment his Stock; which at laſt ſets the Liberty and Votes of a Commonwealth to Sale, if they find any Foreign Power that is able to pay the Price of them. We ſee no where the pernicious Effects of Luxury on a Republic more than in that of the ancient Romans, who immediately found itſelf poor as ſoon as this Vice got Footing among them, tho' they were poſſeſs'd of all the Riches in the World. We find in the Beginnings and Increaſes of their Commonwealth ſtrange Inſtances of the Contempt of Money, becauſe indeed they were utter Strangers to the Pleaſure that might be procured by it; or in other Words, becauſe they were wholly ignorant of the Arts of Luxury. But as ſoon as they once enter'd into a Taſte of Pleaſure, Politeneſs, and Magnificence, they fell into a thouſand Violences, Conſpiracies, and Diviſions, that threw them into all the Diſorders imaginable, and terminated in the utter Subverſion of the Commonwealth. It is no wonder therefore the poor Commonwealths of Switzerland are ever labouring at the Suppreſſion and Prohibition of every thing that may introduce Vanity and Luxury. Beſides, the ſeveral Fines that are ſet upon Plays, Games, Balls, and Feaſtings, they have many Cuſtoms among them which very much contribute to the keeping up of their ancient Simplicity. The Burgeois, who are at the Head of the Governments, are obliged to appear at all their public Aſſemblies in a black Cloke and a Band. The Womens Dreſs is very plain, thoſe of the beſt Quality wearing nothing on their Heads generally but Furs, which are to be met with in their own Country. The Perſons of different Qualities in both Sexes are indeed allowed their different Ornaments; but theſe are generally ſuch as are by no means coſtly, being rather deſign'd as

Marks

Marks of Diſtinction than to make a Figure. The chief Officers of Bern, for Example, are known by the Crowns of their Hats, which are much deeper than thoſe of an inferior Character. The Peaſants are generally clothed in a coarſe kind of Canvas, that is the Manufacture of the Country. Their Holy-day Clothes go from Father to Son, and are ſeldom worn out, 'till the Second or Third Generation: So that it is common enough to ſee a Countryman in the Doublet and Breeches of his Great-grandfather.

Geneva is much politer than Switzerland, or any of its Allies, and is therefore looked upon as the Court of the Alps, whither the Proteſtant Cantons often ſend their Children to improve themſelves in Language and Education. The Genevois have been very much refin'd, or, as others will have it, corrupted, by the Converſation of the French Proteſtants, who make up almoſt a third of their People. It is certain they have very much forgotten the Advice that Calvin gave them in a great Council a little before his Death, when he recommended to them, above all Things, an Exemplary Modeſty and Humility, and as great a Simplicity in their Manners, as in their Religion. Whether or no they have done well, to ſet up for making another kind of Figure, Time will witneſs. There are ſeveral that fancy the great Sums they have remitted into Italy, though by this means they make their Court to the King of France at preſent, may ſome time or other give him an Inclination to become the Maſter of ſo wealthy a City.

As this Collection of little States abounds more in Paſturage than in Corn, they are all provided with their public Granaries, and have the Humanity to furniſh one another in public Exigencies, when when the Scarcity is not Univerſal. As the Adminiſtration of Affairs, relating to theſe public Granaries, is not very different in any of the particular Governments, I ſhall content myſelf to ſet down the Rules obſerved in it by the little Commonwealth of Geneva, in which I had more Time to inform myſelf of the Particulars than in any other. There are Three of the Little Council deputed for this Office. They are oblig'd to keep together a Proviſion ſufficient to feed the People at leaſt two Years, in caſe of War or Famine. They muſt take care to fill their Magazines in Times of the greateſt Plenty, that ſo they may afford cheaper, and increaſe the public Revenue at a ſmall Expence of its Members. None of the Three Managers muſt, upon any Pretence, furniſh the Granaries from his own Fields, that ſo they may have no Temptation to pay too great a Price, or put any bad Corn upon the Public. They muſt buy up no Corn growing within twelve Miles of Geneva, that ſo the filling of their Magazines, may not prejudice their Market, and raiſe the Price of their Proviſions at Home. That ſuch a Collection of Corn may not ſpoil in keeping, all the Inns and Public-Houſes are obliged to furniſh themſelves out of it, by which means is raiſed the moſt conſiderable Branch of the public Revenues; the Corn being ſold out at a much dearer Rate than 'tis bought up. So that the greateſt Income of the Commonwealth, which pays the Penſions of moſt of its Officers and Miniſters, is raiſed on Strangers and Travellers, or ſuch of their own Body as have Money enough to ſpend at Taverns and Public-Houſes.

I:

It is the Cuſtom in Geneva and Switzerland, to divide their Eſtates equally among all their Children, by which means every one lives at his Eaſe without growing dangerous to the Republic; for as ſoon as an overgrown Eſtate falls into the Hands of one that has many Children, it is broken into ſo many Portions as render the Sharers of it rich enough, without raiſing them too much above the Level of the reſt. This is abſolutely neceſſary in theſe little Republics, where the rich Merchants live very much within their Eſtates, and by heaping up vaſt Sums from Year to Year might become formidable to the reſt of their Fellow-Citizens, and break the Equality, which is ſo neceſſary in theſe kinds of Governments, were there not means found out to diſtribute their Wealth among ſeveral Members of their Republic. At Geneva, for Inſtance, are Merchants reckon'd worth Twenty Hundred Thouſand Crowns, though, perhaps, there is not one of them who ſpends to the value of Five Hundred Pounds a Year.

Though the Proteſtants and Papiſts know very well, that it is their common Intereſt to keep a ſteady Neutrality in all the Wars between the States of Europe, they cannot forbear ſiding with a Party in their Diſcourſe. The Catholics are zealous for the French King, as the Proteſtants do not a little glory in the Riches, Power, and good Succeſs of the Engliſh and Dutch, whom they look upon as the Bulwarks of the Reformation. The Miniſters in particular have often preached againſt ſuch of their Fellow-Subjects as enter into the Troops of the French King; but ſo long as the Swiſs ſee their Intereſt in it, their Poverty will always hold them faſt to his Service. They have indeed the Exerciſe of their Religion, ligion, and their Miniſters with them; which is the more remarkable, becauſe the very ſame Prince refus'd even thoſe of the Church of England, who follow'd their Maſter to St. Germains, the public Exerciſe of their Religion.

Before I leave Switzerland, I cannot but obſerve, that the Notion of Witchcraft reigns very much in this Country. I have often been tired with Accounts of this Nature from very ſenſible Men that are moſt of them furniſh'd with Matters of Fact which have happen'd, as they pretend, within the compaſs of their own Knowledge. It is certain there have been many Executions on this Account, as in the Canton of Bern there were ſome put to death during my Stay at Geneva. The People are ſo univerſally infatuated with the Notion, that, if a Cow falls ſick, it is Ten to One but an old Woman is clap'd up in Priſon for it; and if the poor Creature chance to think herſelf a Witch, the whole Country is for hanging her up without Mercy. One finds indeed the ſame Humour prevail in moſt of the rocky barren Parts of Europe. Whether it be that Poverty and Ignorance, which are generally the Products of theſe Countries, may really engage a Wretch in ſuch dark Practices, or whether or no the ſame Principles may not render the People too credulous, and perhaps too eaſy to get rid of ſome of their unprofitable Members.

A great Affair that employs the Swiſs Politics at preſent is the Prince of Conti's Succeſſion to the Dutcheſs of Nemours in the Government of Neuf-Chatel. The Inhabitants of Neuf-Chatel can by no means think of ſubmitting themſelves to a Prince, who is a Roman Catholic, and a Subject of France. They were very attentive to his Conduct in the Prin-

Principality of Orange, which they did not queſtion but he would Rule with all the Mildneſs and Moderation imaginable, as it would be the beſt Means in the World to recommend him to Neuf-Chatel. But notwithſtanding it was ſo much his Intereſt to manage his Proteſtant Subjects in that Country, and the ſtrong Aſſurances he had given them in protecting them in all their Privileges, and particularly in the free Exerciſe of their Religion, he made over his Principality in a very little time, for a Sum of Money, to the King of France. It is indeed generally believed the Prince of Conti would rather ſtill have kept his Title to Orange; but the ſame Reſpect, which induced him to quit this Government, might at another time tempt him to give up that of Neuf-Chatel on the like Conditions. The King of Pruſſia lays in his Claim for Neuf-Chatel, as he did for the Principality of Orange, and 'tis probable would be more acceptable to the Inhabitants than the other; but they are generally diſpos'd to declare themſelves a free Commonwealth, after the Death of the Dutcheſs of Nemours, if the Swiſs will ſupport them. The Proteſtant Cantons ſeem much inclined to aſſiſt them, which they may very well do, in caſe the Dutcheſs dies, whilſt the King of France has his Hands ſo full of Buſineſs on all ſides of him. It certainly very much concerns them not to ſuffer the French King to eſtabliſh his Authority on this ſide Mount Jura, and on the very Borders of their Country; but it is not eaſy to foreſee what a round Sum of Money, or the Fear of a Rupture with France, may do among a People, who have tamely ſuffer'd the Franche Comptè to be ſeiz'd on, and a Fort to be built within Cannon-ſhot of one of their Cantons.

There

There is a new Sect ſprung up in Switzerland, which ſpreads very much in the Proteſtant Cantons, The Profeſſors of it call themſelves Pietiſts: And as Enthuſiaſm carries Men generally to the like Extravagancies, they differ but little from ſeveral Sectaries in other Countries. They pretend in general to great Refinements, as to what regards the Practice of Chriſtianity, and to obſerve the following Rules. To retire much from the Converſation of the World: To ſink themſelves into an intire Repoſe and Tranquillity of Mind: In this State of Silence, to attend the ſecret Illapſe and Flowings in of the Holy Spirit, that may fill their Minds with Peace and Conſolation, Joys or Raptures: To favour all his ſecret Intimations, and give themſelves up intirely to his Conduct and Direction, ſo as neither to ſpeak, move or act, but as they find his Impulſe on their Souls: To retrench themſelves within the Conveniencies and Neceſſities of Life: To make a Covenant with all their Senſes, ſo far as to ſhun the Smell of a Roſe or Violet, and to turn away their Eyes from a beautiful Proſpect: To avoid, as much as is poſſible, what the World calls Innocent Pleaſures, leſt they ſhould have their Affections tainted by any Senſuality, and diverted from the Love of him, who is to be the only Comfort, Repoſe, Hope, and Delight of their whole Beings. This Sect prevails very much among the Proteſtants of Germany, as well as thoſe of Switzerland, and has occaſion'd ſeveral Edicts againſt it in the Dutchy of Saxony. The Profeſſors of it are accus'd of all the ill Practices, which may ſeem to be the Conſequence of their Principles; as that they aſcribe the worſt of Actions, which their own vicious Tempers throw throw them upon, to the Dictates of the Holy Spirit; that both Sexes, under Pretence of devout Converſation, viſit one another at all Hours, and in all Places, without any regard to common Decency, often making their Religion a Cover for their Immoralities; and that the very beſt of them are poſſeſs'd with Spiritual Pride, and a Contempt for all ſuch as are not of their own Sect. The Roman Catholics, who reproach the Proteſtants for their breaking into ſuch a multitude of Religions, have certainly taken the moſt effectual way in the World for the keeping their Flocks together; I don't mean the Puniſhments they inflict on Mens Perſons, which are commonly look'd upon as the chief Methods by which they deter them from breaking through the Pale of the Church, though certainly theſe lay a very great Reſtraint on thoſe of the Roman Catholic Perſuaſion. But I take one great Cauſe, why there are ſo few Sects in the Church of Rome, to be the multitude of Convents, with which they every where abound, that ſerve as Receptacles for all thoſe fiery Zealots who would ſet the Church in a Flame, were not they got together in theſe Houſes of Devotion. All Men of dark Tempers, according to their Degree of Melancholy or Enthuſiaſm, may find Convents fitted to their Humours, and meet with Companions as gloomy as themſelves. So that what the Proteſtants would call a Fanatic, is, in the Roman Church, a Religious of ſuch or ſuch an Order; as I have been told of an Engliſh Merchant at Lisbon, who, after ſome great Diſappointments in the World, was reſolv'd to turn Quaker or Capucin; for, in the Change of Religion, Men of ordinary Underſtandings don't ſo much conſider the Principles, as the Practice of thoſe to whom they go over.

From

From St. Gaul I took Horſe to the Lake of Conſtance, which lies at two Leagues diſtance from it, and is form'd by the Entry of the Rhine. This is the only Lake in Europe that diſputes for Greatneſs with that of Geneva; it appears more beautiful to the Eye, but wants the fruitful Fields and Vineyards that border upon the other. It receives its Name from Conſtance, the chief Town on its Banks. When the Cantons of Bern and Zurich propoſed, at a general Diet, the Incorporating Geneva in the number of the Cantons, the Roman Catholic Party, fearing the Proteſtant Intereſt might receive by it too great a Strengthning, propoſed at the ſame time the Incantoning of Conſtance, as a Counterpoiſe; to which the Proteſtants not conſenting, the whole Project fell to the ground. We croſs'd the Lake to Lindaw, and in ſeveral parts of it obſerved abundance of little Bubbles of Air, that came working upward from the very Bottom of the Lake. The Watermen told us, that they are obſerved always to riſe in the ſame Places, from whence they conclude them to be ſo many Springs that break out of the Bottom of the Lake. Lindaw is an Imperial Town on a little Iſland that lies at about three hundred Paces from the firm Land, to which it is join'd by a huge Bridge of Wood. The Inhabitants were all in Arms when we paſs'd through it, being under great Apprehenſions of the Duke of Bavaria, after his having fallen upon Ulm and Memminghen. They flatter themſelves, that by cutting their Bridge they could hold out againſt his Army: But, in all probability, a Shower of Bombs would quickly reduce the Burgeois to ſurrender. They were formerly Bombarded by Guſtavus Adolphus. We were adviſ'd by our ur Merchants, by no means to venture ourſelves n the Duke of Bavaria's Country, ſo that we had he Mortification to loſe the Sight of Munich, Auſ-burg and Ratisbon, and were forced to take our Way to Vienna through the Tirol, where we had very little to entertain us beſide the natural face of the Country.

TIROL,

TIROL, INSPRUCK, HALL, &c.

AFTER having coasted the Alps for some time, we at last entered them by a Passage which leads into the long Valley of the Tirol; and following the Course of the River Inn, we came to Inspruck, that receives its Name from this River, and is the Capital City of the Tirol.

Inspruck is a handsom Town, though not a great one, and was formerly the Residence of the Arch-Dukes who were Counts of Tirol: The Palace where they used to keep their Court is rather Convenient than Magnificent. The great Hall is indeed a very noble Room: the Walls of it are painted in Fresco, and represent the Labours of Hercules. Many of them look very finely, though a great Part of the Work has been crack'd by Earthquakes which are very frequent in this Country. There is a little Wooden Palace that borders on the other, whither the Court used to retire at the first shake of an Earthquake. I saw here the largest Manage that I have met with any where else. At one end of it is a great Partition designed for an Opera. They showed

ſhowed us alſo a very pretty Theater. The laſt Comedy that was acted on it was deſigned by the Jeſuits for the Entertainment of the Queen of the Romans, who paſſed this way from Hanover to Vienna. The Compliment, which the Fathers made her Majeſty on this Occaſion, was very particular, and did not a little expoſe them to the Rallery of the Court. For the Arms of Hanover being a Horſe, the Fathers thought it a very pretty Alluſion to repreſent the Queen by Bucephalus, that would let no Body get upon him but Alexander the Great. The Wooden Horſe that acted this notable Part is ſtill to be ſeen behind the Scenes. In one of the Rooms of the Palace, which is hung with the Pictures of ſeveral Illuſtrious Perſons, they ſhowed us the Portrait of Mary Queen of Scots, who was beheaded in the Reign of Queen Elizabeth. The Gardens about the Houſe are very large, but ill kept. There is in the middle of them a beautiful Statue in Braſs of an Arch-Duke Leopold on Horſeback. There are near it twelve other Figures of Water-Nymphs and River-Gods, well caſt, and as big as the Life. They were deſigned for the Ornaments of a Water-Work, as one might eaſily make a great Variety of Jetteaus, at a ſmall Expence, in a Garden that has the River Inn running by its Walls. The late Duke of Lorrain had this Palace, and the Government of the Tirol, aſſigned him by the Emperor, and his Lady the Queen Dowager of Poland lived here ſeveral Years after the Death of the Duke her Husband. There are covered Galleries that lead from the Palace to five different Churches. I paſſed through a very long one, which reaches to the Church of the Capucin Convent, where the Duke of Lorrain uſed often to aſſiſt at their Midnight Devotions. They ſhowed us in this Convent the

Apart-

Apartments of Maximilian, who was Arch-Duke and Count of Tirol about Fourſcore Years ago. This Prince, at the ſame time that he kept the Government in his Hands, lived in this Convent with all the Rigour and Auſterity of a Capucin. His Anti-chamber and Room of Audience are little ſquare Chambers Wainſcoted. His private Lodgings are three or four ſmall Rooms faced with a kind of Fret-work, that makes them look like little Hollow Caverns in a Rock. They preſerve this Apartment of the Convent uninhabited, and ſhow in it the Altar, Bed and Stove, as likewiſe a Picture and a Stamp of this Devout Prince. The Church of the Franciſcan Convent is famous for the Monument of the Emperor Maximilian the Firſt, which ſtands in the midſt of it. It was erected to him by his Grand-Son Ferdinand the Firſt, who probably looked upon this Emperor as the Founder of the Auſtrian Greatneſs. For as by his own Marriage he annexed the Low-Countries to the Houſe of Auſtria, ſo, by matching his Son to Joan of Arragon, he ſettled on his Poſterity the Kingdom of Spain, and, by the Marriage of his Grand-Son Ferdinand, got into his Family the Kingdoms of Bohemia and Hungary. This Monument is only Honorary; for the Aſhes of the Emperor lie elſewhere. On the Top of it is a Brazen Figure of Maximilian on his Knees, and on the Sides of it a beautiful Bas-Relief repreſenting the Actions of this Prince. His whole Hiſtory is digeſted into Twenty Four ſquare Pannels of Sculpture in Bas-Relief. The Subject of two of them is his Confederacy with Henry the Eighth, and the Wars they made together upon France. On each Side of this Monument is a Row of very noble Brazen Statues much bigger than the Life, moſt of them repreſenting ſuch as were ſome way or other related elated to Maximilian. Among the reſt is one that he Fathers of the Convent tell us repreſents King Arthur the old Britiſh King. But what Relation had that Arthur to Maximilian? I don't queſtion herefore but it was deſigned for Prince Arthur, Elder Brother of Henry the Eighth, who had eſpouſed Catharine, Siſter of Maximilian, whoſe Divorce afterwards gave occaſion to ſuch ſignal Revolutions n England. This Church was built by Ferdinand he firſt. One ſees in it a kind of Offer at Modern Architecture; but at the ſame time that the Architect has ſhown his Diſlike of the Gothic manner, one may ſee very well that in that Age they were not, at leaſt in this Country, arrived at the Knowledge of the true Way. The Portal, for Example, conſiſts of a Compoſite Order unknown to the Ancients; the Ornaments indeed are taken from them, but ſo put together, that you ſee the Volutes of the Ionic, the Foliage of the Corinthian, and Uovali of he Doric, mix'd without any Regularity on the ſame Capital. So the Vault of the Church, tho' broad enough, is incumber'd with too many little Tricks in Sculpture. It is indeed ſupported with ſingle Columns, inſtead of thoſe vaſt Cluſters of little Pillars that one meets with in Gothic Cathedrals; but at the ſame time theſe Columns are of no regular Order, and at leaſt twice too long for their Diameter. There are other Churches in the Town, and two or three Palaces which are of a more Modern Make, and built with a good Fancy. I was ſhown the little Nôtredame that is handſomly deſign'd, and topp'd with a Cupola. It was made as an Offering of Gratitude to the Bleſſed Virgin, for having defended the Country of the Tirol againſt the Victorious Arms of Guſtavus Adolphus, who could not enter this Part of the Empire after having overrun run moſt of the reſt. The Temple was therefore built by the Contributions of the whole Country. At about half a League's diſtance from Inſpruck ſtands the Caſtle of Amras, furniſh'd with a prodigious Quantity of Medals, and many other ſorts of Rarities both in Nature and Art, for which I muſt refer the Reader to Monſieur Patin's Account in his Letter to the Duke of Wirtemberg, having myſelf had neither Time nor Opportunity to enter into a particular Examination of them.

From Inſpruck we came to Hall, that lies at a League diſtance on the ſame River. This Place is particulary famous for its Salt-Works. There are in the Neighbourhood vaſt Mountains of a tranſparent kind of Rock not unlike Allum, extremely ſolid, and as piquant to the Tongue as Salt itſelf. Four or five Hundred Men are always at work in theſe Mountains, where, as ſoon as they have hewn down any Quantities of the Rock, they let in their Springs and Reſervoirs among their Works. The Water eats away and diſſolves the Particles of Salt which are mix'd in the Stone, and is convey'd by long Troughs and Canals from the Mines to the Town of Hall, where 'tis received in vaſt Ciſterns, and boil'd off from time to time.

They make after the rate of eight Hundred Loaves a Week, each Loaf four Hundred Pound Weight. This would raiſe a great Revenue to the Emperor, were there here ſuch a Tax on Salt as there is in France. At preſent he clears but two hundred Thouſand Crowns a Year, after having defray'd all the Charges of working it. There are in Switzerland, and other Parts of the Alps, ſeveral of theſe Quarries of Salt, that turn to very little Account, by reaſon of the great Quantities of Wood they conſume.

The

The Salt-Works at Hall have a great Convenience for Fuel, which ſwims down to them on the River Inn. This River during its Courſe through the Tirol, is generally ſhut up between a double Range of Mountains that are moſt of them cover'd with Woods of Fir-Trees. Abundance of Peaſants are employ'd in the hewing down of the largeſt of theſe Trees, that, after they are bark'd and cut into Shape, are tumbled down from the Mountains into the Stream of the River, which carries them off to the Salt-Works. At Inſpruck they take up vaſt Quantities for the Convents and public Officers, who have a certain Portion of it allotted them by the Emperor: the reſt of it paſſes on to Hall. There are generally ſeveral hundred Loads afloat; for they begin to cut above twenty Leagues up the River above Hall; and there are other Rivers that flow into the Inn, which bring in their Contributions. Theſe Salt-Works, and a Mint that is eſtabliſh'd at the ſame Place, have render'd this Town, notwithſtanding the Neighbourhood of the Capital City, almoſt as populous as Inſpruck itſelf. The Deſign of this Mint is to work off part of the Metals which are found in the neighbouring Mountains; where, as we were told, there are ſeven Thouſand Men in conſtant Employ. At Hall we took a Boat to carry us to Vienna. The firſt Night we lay at Rottenburg, where is a ſtrong Caſtle above the Town. Count Serini is ſtill a cloſe Priſoner in this Caſtle, who, as they told us in the Town, had loſt his Senſes by his long Impriſonment and Afflictions. The next Day we din'd at Kuff ſtain, where there is a Fortreſs on a high Rock, above the Town, almoſt inacceſſible on all Sides: This being a Frontier Place on the Dutchy of Bavaria, where we enter'd after about an Hour's Rowing from Kuff-ſtain. It was the plea-ſanteſt Voyage in the World, to follow the Windings of this River Inn through ſuch a Variety of pleaſing Scenes as the Courſe of it naturally led us. We had ſometimes on each Side of us a vaſt Extent of naked Rocks and Mountains, broken into a Thouſand irregular Steeps and Precipices; in other Places we ſaw a long Foreſt of Fir-Trees, ſo thick ſet together, that it was impoſſible to diſcover any of the Soil they grew upon, and riſing up ſo regularly one above another, as to give us the View of a whole Wood at once. The time of the Year, that had given the Leaves of the Trees ſo many different Colours, compleated the Beauty of the Proſpect. But as the Materials of a fine Landskip are not always the moſt profitable to the Owner of them, we met with but very little Corn or Paſturage for the Proportion of Earth that we paſs'd through, the Lands of the Tirol not being able to feed the Inhabitants. This long Valley of the Tirol lies incloſed on all Sides by the Alps, tho' its Dominions ſhoot out into ſeveral Branches that lie among the Breaks and Hollows of the Mountains. It is govern'd by three Councils reſiding at Inſpruck; one ſits upon Life and Death, the other is for Taxes and Impoſitions, and a third for the common Diſtributions of Juſtice. As theſe Courts regulate themſelves by the Orders they receive from the Imperial Courts, ſo in many Caſes there are Appeals from them to Vienna. The Inhabitants of the Tirol have many particular Privileges above thoſe of the other Hereditary Countries of the Emperor. For as they are naturally well fortify'd among their Mountains, and at the ſame time border upon many different Governments, as the Griſons, Venetians, Swiſs, Bavarians, &c. a ſevere Treatment might tempt them to ſet up for a Republic, or at leaſt throw themſelves under the milder Government vernment of ſome of their Neighbours: Beſides that their Country is poor, and that the Emperor draws conſiderable Incomes out of its Mines of Salt and Metal. They are theſe Mines that fill the Country with greater Numbers of People than it would be able to bear without the Importation of Corn from Foreign Parts. The Emperor has Forts and Citadels at the Entrance of all the Paſſes that lead into the Tirol, which are ſo advantageouſly placed upon Rocks and Mountains, that they command all the Valleys and Avenues that lie about them. Beſides that the Country itſelf is cut into ſo many Hills and Inequalities, as would render it defenſible by a very little Army againſt a numerous Enemy. It was therefore generally thought the Duke of Bavaria would not attempt the cutting off any Succours that were ſent to Prince Eugene, or the forcing his Way through the Tirol into Italy. The River Inn, that had hitherto been ſhut up among Mountains, paſſes generally through a wide open Country during all its Courſe through Bavaria, which is a Voyage of two Days, after the rate of twenty Leagues a Day.
